

DEMONIALITY

OR

Incubi and Succubi

BY THE REV. FATHER

SINISTRARI OF AMENO

(17th CENTURY)

*Now first translated into English
With the Latin Text*

PARIS

Isidore LISEUX, 2. Rue Bonaparte

1879

DEMONIALITY

OR

Incubi and Succubi

BY THE REV. FATHER

SINISTRARI OF AMENO

(17th CENTURY)

*Now first translated into English
With the Latin Text*

PARIS

Isidore LISEUX, 2. Rue Bonaparte

1879

The Project Gutenberg eBook of Demoniality; or, Incubi and Succubi

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

Title: Demoniality; or, Incubi and Succubi

Author: Ludovico Maria Sinistrari

Translator: Isidore Liseux

Release date: February 26, 2017 [eBook #54243]

Most recently updated: October 23, 2024

Language: English, Latin

Other information and formats: www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/54243

Credits: Produced by deaurider, Les Galloway and the Online Distributed Proofreading Team at <http://www.pgdp.net>

 START OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK DEMONIALITY; OR, INCUBI AND SUCCUBI ***

DEMONIALITY

OR

INCUBI AND SUCCUBI

A TREATISE

wherein is shown that there are in existence on earth rational creatures besides man, endowed like him with a body and a soul, that are born and die

BY THE REV. FATHER
SINISTRARI OF AMENO

(17th century)

*Published from the original Latin manuscript discovered in London in the year 1872, and translated into French by ISIDORE LISEUX
Now first translated into English
With the Latin Text.*

PARIS
Isidore LISEUX, 2, Rue Bonaparte.
1879

PREFACE

TO THE FIRST EDITION (Paris, 1875, in-8^o) was in London in the year 1872, and I hunted after old books:

*Car que faire là bas, à moins qu'on ne bouquine?*¹

They caused me to live in past ages, happy to escape from the present, and to exchange the petty passions of the day for the peaceable intimacy of Aldus, Dolet or Estienne.

One of my favourite booksellers was Mr Allen, a venerable old gentleman, whose place of business was in the Euston road, close to the gate of Regent's park. Not that his shop was particularly rich in dusty old books; quite the reverse: it was small, and yet never filled. Scarcely four or five hundred volumes at a time, carefully dusted, bright, arrayed with symmetry on shelves within reach of one's hand; the upper shelves remained unoccupied. On the right, Theology; on the left, the Greek and Latin Classics in a majority, with some French and Italian books; for such were Mr Allen's specialties; it seemed as if he absolutely ignored Shakespeare and Byron, and as if, in his mind, the literature of his country did not go beyond the sermons of Blair or Macculloch.

What, at first sight, struck one most in those books, was the moderateness of their price, compared with their excellent state of preservation. They had evidently not been bought in a lot, at so much a cubic yard, like the rubbish of an auction, and yet the handsomest, the most ancient, the most venerable from their size, folios or quartos, were not marked higher than 2 or 3 shillings; an octavo was sold 1 shilling, the duodecimo six pence: each according to its size. Thus ruled Mr Allen, a methodical man, if ever there was one; and he was all the better for it, since, faithfully patronized by clergymen, scholars and collectors, he renewed his stock at a rate which more assuming speculators might have envied.

But how did he get those well bound and well preserved volumes, for which, everywhere else, five or six times more would have been charged? Here also Mr Allen had his method, sure and regular. No one attended more assiduously the auctions which take place every day in London: his stand was marked at the foot of the auctioneer's desk. The rarest, choicest books passed before his eyes, contended for at often fabulous prices by Quaritch, Sotheran, Pickering, Toovey, and other bibliopolists of the British metropolis; Mr Allen smiled at such extravagance; when once a bid had been made by another, he would not add a penny, had an unknown Gutenberg or Valdarfer's Boccaccio been at stake. But if occasionally, through inattention or weariness, competition slackened (habent sua fata libelli), Mr Allen came forward: six pence!, he whispered, and sometimes the article was left him; sometimes even, two consecutive numbers, joined together for want of having separately met with a buyer, were knocked down to him, still for the minimum of six pence which was his maximum.

Many of those slighted ones doubtless deserved their fate; but among them might slip some that were not unworthy of the honours of the catalogue, and which, at any other time, buyers more attentive, or less whimsical might perhaps have covered with gold. This, however, did not at all enter into Mr Allen's calculation: the size was the only rule of his estimate.

Now, one day when, after a considerable auction, he had exhibited in his shop purchases more numerous than usual, I especially noticed some manuscripts in the Latin language, the paper, the writing and the binding of which denoted an Italian origin, and which might well be two hundred years old. The title of one was, I believe: De Venenis; of another: De Viperis; of a third (the present work): De Dæmonialitate, et Incubis, et Succubis. All three, moreover, by different authors, and independent of each other. Poisons, adders, demons, what a collection of horrors! yet, were it but for civility's sake, I was bound to buy something; after some hesitation, I chose the last one: Demons, true, but Incubi, Succubi: the subject is not vulgar, and still less so the way in which it seemed to me to have been handled. In short, I had the volume for six-pence, a boon price for a quarto: Mr Allen doubtless deemed such a scrawl beneath the rate of type.

That manuscript, on strong paper of the 17th century, bound in Italian parchment, and beautifully preserved, has 86 pages of text. The title and first page are in the author's hand, that of an old man; the remainder is very distinctly written by another, but under his direction, as is testified by autographic side notes and rectifications distributed all through the work. It is therefore the genuine original manuscript, to all appearances unique and inedited.

Our dealer in old books had purchased it a few days before at Sotheby's House, where had taken place (from the 6th to the 16th of December 1871) the sale of the books of baron Seymour Kirkup, an English collector, deceased in Florence. The manuscript was inscribed as follows on the sale catalogue:

N^o 145. AMENO (R. P. Ludovicus Maria [Cotta] de). De Dæmonialitate, et Incubis, et Succubis, Manuscript.

Sæc. XVII-XVIII.

Who is that writer? Has he left printed works? That is a question I leave to bibliographers; for, notwithstanding numerous investigations in special dictionaries, I have been unable to ascertain any thing on that score. Brunet (Manuel du libraire, art. COTTA d'Ameno) vaguely surmises his existence, but confuses him with his namesake, most likely also his fellow-townsmen, Lazaro Agostino Cotta of Ameno, a barrister and literary man of Novara. "The author," says he, "whose real Christian names would seem to be Ludovico-Maria, has written many serious works...." The mistake is obvious. One thing is sure: our author was living in the last years of the 17th century, as appears from his own testimony, and had been a professor of Theology in Pavia.

Be that as it may, his book has seemed to me most interesting in divers respects, and I confidently submit it to that select public for whom the invisible world is not a chimera. I should be much surprised if, after opening it at random, the reader was not tempted to retrace his steps and go on to the end. The philosopher, the confessor, the medical man will find therein, in conjunction with the robust faith of the middle ages, novel and ingenious views; the literary man, the curioso, will appreciate the solidity of reasoning, the clearness of style, the liveliness of recitals (for there are stories, and delicately told). All theologians have devoted more or less pages to the question of material intercourse between man and the demon; thick volumes have been written about witchcraft, and the merits of this work were but slender if it merely developed the ordinary thesis; but such is not its characteristic. The ground-matter, from which it derives a truly original and philosophical stamp, is an entirely novel demonstration of the existence of Incubi and Succubi, as rational animals, both corporeal and spiritual like ourselves, living in our midst, being born and dying like us, and lastly redeemed, as we are, through the merits of Jesus-Christ, and capable of receiving salvation or damnation. In the Father of Ameno's opinion, those beings endowed with senses and reason, thoroughly distinct from Angels and Demons, pure spirits, are none other but the Fauns, Sylvens and Satyrs of paganism, continued by our Sylphs, Elfs and Goblins; and thus is connected anew the link of belief. On this score alone, not to mention the interest of details, this book has a claim to the attention of earnest readers: I feel convinced that attention will not be found wanting.

I. L.

May 1875.

The foregoing advertisement was composed at the printer's, and ready for the press, when, strolling on the quays², I met by chance with a copy of the Index librorum prohibitorum. I mechanically opened it, and the first thing that struck my eyes was the following article:

De Ameno Ludovicus Maria. Vide Sinistrari.

My heart throbbed fast, I must confess. Was I at last on the trace of my author? Was it Demoniality that I was about to see nailed to the pillory of the Index? I flew to the last pages of the formidable volume, and read:

SINISTRARI (Ludovicus Maria) de Ameno, De Delictis et Pœnis Tractatus absolutissimus. Donec corrigatur. Decret. 4 Martii 1709.

Correctus autem juxta editionem Romanam anni 1753 permittitur.

It was indeed he. The real name of the Father of Ameno was Sinistrari, and I was in possession of the title of one at least of those “serious works” which Brunet the bibliographer alluded to. The very title, De Delictis et Pænis, was not unconnected with that of my manuscript, and I had reason to presume that Demoniality was one of the offenses inquired into, and decided upon, by Father Sinistrari; in other words, that manuscript, to all appearances inedited, was perhaps published in the extensive work revealed to me; perhaps even was it to that monography of Demoniality that the Tractatus de Delictis et Pænis owed its condemnation by the Congregation of the Index. All those points required looking into.

But it is necessary to have attempted investigations of that kind in order to appreciate the difficulties thereof. I consulted the catalogues of ancient books that came in my way; I searched the back-shops of the dealers in old books, the antiquaries, as they say in Germany, addressing especially to the two or three firms who in Paris apply themselves to old Theology; I wrote to the principal booksellers in London, Milan, Florence, Rome, Naples: all to no purpose; the very name of Father Sinistrari of Ameno seemed to be unknown. I should perhaps have begun by enquiring at our National Library; I was obliged to resort to it, and there at least I obtained an incipient gratification. I was shown two works by my author: a quarto of 1704, De incorrigibilium expulsiōe ab Ordinibus Regularibus, and the first tome of a set of his complete works: R. P. Ludovici Mariæ Sinistrari de Ameno Opera omnia (Romæ, in domo Caroli Giannini, 1753-1754, 3 vol. in-folio). Unfortunately that first tome contained but the Practica Criminalis Minorum illustrata; De Delictis et Pænis was the subject matter of the third tome, which, as well as the second, was missing at the Library.

Yet, I had a positive indication, and I pursued my investigations. I might be more fortunate at the Library of St Sulpice Seminary. True, it is not open to the public; but then, the Sulpician Fathers are hospitable: did they not of yore afford a refuge to repentant Des Grieux, and did not Manon Lescaut herself tread the flags of their parlour? I therefore ventured into the holy House; it was half past twelve, dinner was nearly over; I asked for the librarian, and after a few minutes, I saw coming to me a short old man, unexceptionably civil, who, leading me through the common parlour, introduced me into another much narrower, a mere cell, looking into a gallery and glazed full breadth, being thus exposed to every eye. An ingenious provision of which Des Grieux's escape had fully shown the urgency. I had no small trouble in explaining the object of my visit to the good Father, who was deaf and near sighted. He left me to go to the library, and soon returned, but empty handed: there also, in that sanctuary of Catholic Theology, Father Sinistrari of Ameno was entirely unknown. But one more expedient could I try: namely, to go to his brothers in St Francis, the Capuchin Fathers, in their convent of rue de la Santé! A cruel extremity, it will be granted, for I had but little chance of meeting there, as here, the lovely shadow of Manon.

At last a letter from Milan put an end to my perplexity. The unfindable book was found; I received at the same time the first edition of De Delictis et Pænis (Venetiis, apud Hieronymum Albricium, 1700), and the edition of Rome, 1754.

It was a complete treatise, tractatus absolutissimus, upon all imaginable crimes, offenses and sins; but, let us hasten to say, in both those voluminous folios, Demoniality occupies scarcely five pages, without any difference in the text between the two editions. And those five pages are not even a summary of the manuscript work which I now give forth; they only contain the proposition and conclusion (N^{rs} 1 to 27 and 112 to 115). As for that wherein lies the originality of the book, to wit the theory of rational animals, Incubi and Succubi, endowed like ourselves with a body and soul, and capable of receiving salvation and damnation, it were vain to look for it.

Thus, after so many endeavours, I had settled all the points which I had intended to elucidate: I had discovered the identity of the Father of Ameno³; from the comparison of the two editions of De Delictis et Pænis, the first condemned, the second allowed by the Congregation of the Index, I had gathered that the printed fragments of Demoniality had nothing to do with the condemnation of the book, since they had not been submitted to any correction; lastly, I had become convinced that, save a few pages, my manuscript was absolutely inedited. A happy event of a bibliographical Odyssey which I shall be excused for relating at length, for the "jollification" of bibliophiles "and none other".

ISIDORE LISEUX.

August 1875.

DEMONIALITY
OR
INCUBI AND SUCCUBI

DÆMONIALITAS

DEMONIALITY

ocabulum

Dæmonialitatis primo inventum reperio a Jo.
Caramuele in sua

he first author who, to my knowledge, invented the word Demoniality is John

Theologia fundamentali, nec ante Caramuel, in his Fundamental illum inveni Auctorem, qui de hoc Theology, and before him I find no crimine tanquam distincto a one who distinguished that crime Bestialitate locutus sit. Omnes enim from Bestiality. Indeed, all Theologi Morales, secuti D. Theological Moralists, following in Thomam, 2.2., q. 154. in corp., sub the train of S. Thomas (2, 2, specie Bestialitatis recensent omnem question 154), include, under the concupitum cum re non ejusdem specific title of Bestiality, “every speciei, ut ibi loquitur D. Thomas; kind of carnal intercourse with any et proinde Cajetanus, in thing whatever of a different Commentario illius quæstionis et species”: such are the very words articuli, 2.2., q. 154., ad 3. dub., used by S. Thomas. Cajetanus, for coitum cum Dæmone ponit in specie instance, in his commentary on that Bestialitatis; et Cajetanum sequitur question, classes intercourse with Silvester, v^o Luxuria, Bonacina, de the Demon under the description of Matrim., q. 4., et alii. Bestiality; so does Sylvester, de Luxuria, Bonacina, de Matrimonio, question 4, and others.

2. Sed revera D. Thomas in illo loco 2. However it is clear that in the considerationem non habuit ad above passage S. Thomas did not at

coitum cum Dæmone: ut enim infra allude to intercourse with the probabimus, hic coitus non potest in Demon. As shall be demonstrated specie specialissima Bestialitatis further on, that intercourse cannot comprehendi; et ut veritati cohæreat be included in the very particular sententia S. Doctoris, dicendum est, species of Bestiality; and, in order to quod in citato loco, quando ait, make that sentence of the holy quod peccatum contra naturam, alio Doctor tally with truth, it must be modo si fiat per concubitum ad rem admitted that when saying of the non ejusdem speciei, vocatur unnatural sin, “that committed Bestialitas: sub nomine rei non through intercourse with a thing of ejusdem speciei intellexerit animal different species, it takes the name of vivens, non ejusdem speciei cum Bestiality”, S. Thomas, by a thing of homine: non enim usurpare potuit different species, means a living ibi nomen rei pro re, puta, ente animal, of another species than man: communi ad animatum et for he could not here use the word inanimatum: si enim quis coiret cum thing in its most general sense, to cadavere humano, concubitum mean indiscriminately an animate or haberet ad rem non ejusdem speciei inanimate being. In fact, if a man cum homine (maxime apud should fornicate cum cadavere Thomistas, qui formam corporeitatis humano, he would have to do with a humanæ negant in cadavere), quod thing of a species quite different etiam esset si cadaveri bestiali from his own (especially according copularetur; et tamen talis coitus to the Thomists, who deny the form non esset bestialitas, sed mollities. of human corporeity in a corpse); Voluit igitur ibi D. Thomas præcise similarly si cadaveri bestiali intelligere concubitum cum re copularetur: and yet, talis coitus vivente non ejusdem speciei cum would not be bestiality, but homine, hoc est cum bruto, nullo pollution. What therefore S. Thomas autem modo comprehendere voluit intended here to specify with coitum cum Dæmone.

preciseness, is carnal intercourse with a living thing of a species different from man, that is to say, with a beast, and he never in the least thought of intercourse with the Demon.

3. Coitus igitur cum Dæmone, sive 3. Therefore, intercourse with the Incubo, sive Succubo (qui proprie Demon, whether Incubus or est Dæmonialitas, specie differt a Succubus (which is, properly Bestialitate, nec cum ea facit unam speaking, Demoniality), differs in speciem specialissimam, ut opinatus kind from Bestiality, and does not in est Cajetanus: peccata enim contra connexion with it form one very naturam specie inter se distinguiparticular species, as Cajetanus contra opinionem nonnullorum wrongly gives it; for, whatever may Antiquorum, et Caramuelis, Summ., have said to the contrary some Armill., v. Luxur., n. 5., Jabien., eo. Ancients, and later Caramuel in his v. n. 6., Asten. lib. 2. tit. 46. art. 7., Fundamental Theology, unnatural Caram. Theol. fundam. postsins differ from each other most Filiucium, et Crespinum a Borgia, distinctly. Such at least is the est opinio communis; et contrariageneral doctrine, and the contrary est damnata in proposit. 24. ex opinion has been condemned by damnatis ab Alexandro VII.; tum Alexander VII: first, because each of quia singula continent peculiarem, those sins carries with itself its et distinctam turpitudinem peculiar and distinct disgrace, repugnantem castitati, et humanæ repugnant to chastity and to human generationi; tum quia quodlibet ex generation; secondly, because the iis privat bono aliquo secundum commission thereof entails each naturam, et institutionem actus time the sacrifice of some good by venerei, ordinati ad finem its nature attached to the institution generationis humanæ; tum quia of the venereal act, the normal end quodlibet ipsorum habet diversum of which is human generation; lastly, motivum, per se sufficiens ad because they each have a different privandum eodem bono motive which in itself is sufficient to diversimode, ut optime bring about, in divers ways, the philosophatur Filiuc., tom. 2. c. 8. deprivation of the same good, as has tract. 30. q. 3. n^o 142; Cresp., q. been clearly shown by Fillucius, mor. sel. contro.; Caramuel., q. 5. Crespinus and Caramuel. per tot.

4. Ex his autem infertur, quod etiam 4. It follows that Demoniality differs Dæmonialitas specie differt a in kind from Bestiality, for each has Bestialitate: singula enim ipsarum its peculiar and distinct disgrace, peculiarem et distinctam repugnant to chastity and human turpitudinem, castitati ac humanæ generation. Bestiality is connexion generationi repugnantem, involvit; with a living beast, endowed with its siquidem Bestialitas est copula cum own peculiar senses and impulses;

bruto vivente, ac sensibus et motu Demoniality, on the contrary, is proprio prædito: Dæmonialitas copulation with a corpse (according autem est commixtio cum cadavere at least to the general doctrine which (stando in sententia communi, quam shall be considered hereafter), a infra examinabimus), nec sensum, senseless and motionless corpse nec motum vitalem habente; et per which is but accidentally moved accidens est, quod a Dæmon through the power of the Demon. moveatur. Quod si immunditia Now, if fornication with the corpse commissa cum brutali cadavere, vel of a man, a woman, or a beast humano, differt specie a Sodomia et differs in kind from Sodomy and Bestialitate, ab ista differt pariter Bestiality, there is the same specie etiam Dæmonialitas, in qua, difference with regard to juxta communem sententiam, homo Demoniality, which, according to cum cadavere concumbit general opinion, is the intercourse of accidentaliter moto. man with a corpse accidentally set in motion.

5. Et confirmatur: quia in peccatis 5. Another proof: in sins against contra naturam, seminatione nature, the unnatural semination innaturalis (hoc est, ea ad quam (which cannot be regularly followed regulariter non potest sequi by generation) is a genus; but the generatio) habet rationem generis; object of such semination is the subjectum vero talis seminationis est difference which marks the species differentia constituens species sub under the genus. Thus, whether tali genere: unde si seminatio fiat in semination takes place on the terram, aut corpus inanime, est ground, or on an inanimate body, it mollities; si fiat cum homine in vase is pollution; if cum homine in vase præpostero, est Sodomia; si fiat cum præpostero, it is Sodomy; with a bruto, est bestialitas: quæ absque beast, bestiality: crimes which controversia inter se specie unquestionably all differ from each differunt, eo quod terra, seu other in species, just as the ground, cadaver, homo, et brutum, quæ sunt the corpse, the man and the beast, subjecta talis seminationis, specie passive objects talis seminationis, differunt inter se. Sed Dæmon a differ in species from each other. bruto non solum differt specie, sed But the difference between the plusquam specie: differunt enim per Demon and the beast is not only corporeum, et incorporeum, quæ specific, it is more than specific: the sunt differentię genericæ. Sequitur nature of the one is corporeal, of the ergo quod seminationes factæ cum other incorporeal, which makes a aliis differunt inter se specie, quod generic difference. Whence it est intentum.

follows that seminationes practised on different objects differ in species from each other: and that is substantiated.

6. Pariter, trita est doctrina 6. It is also a trite doctrine with Moralistarum fundata in Tridentino, Moralists, established by the sess. 14, c. 5. D. Th. in 4. dist. 16. q. Council of Trent, session 14, and 3. art. 2., Vasquez, q. 91. art. 1. dub. admitted by Theologians, that in
2. n. 6., Reginald. Valenz. Medin. confession it suffices to state the Zerola. Pesant. Sajir. Sott. Pitig. circumstances which alter the Henriquez apud Bonac. de Sac. species of sins. If therefore disp. 5. q. 5. sect, 2. punct. 2. § 3. Demoniality and Bestiality belonged diffic. 3. n. 5., et tradita per to the same very particular species, Theologos, quod in confessione it would be enough that, each time manifestandæ sint tantum he has fornicated with the Demon, circumstantiæ quæ mutant speciem the penitent should say to his peccatorum. Si igitur Dæmonialitas confessor: I have been guilty of the et Bestialitas sunt ejusdem specie sin of Bestiality. But that is not so: specialissimæ, sufficit in confessione therefore those two sins do not both dicere: Bestialitatis peccatum belong to the same very particular commisi quantumvis confitens cum species.

Dæmone concubuerit. Hoc autem falsum est: igitur non sunt ejusdem speciei specialissimæ.

7. Quod si dicatur, aperiendum esse 7. It may be urged that if the in confessione circumstantiam circumstances of a sensual concubitus cum Dæmone ratione intercourse with the Demon should peccati contra Religionem: be revealed to the Confessor, it is on peccatum contra Religionem account of its offense against committitur, aut ex cultu, aut ex Religion, an offense which comes reverentia, aut ex deprecatione, aut either from the worship rendered to ex pacto, aut ex societate cum the Demon, or from the homage or Dæmone (D. Thomas, 2. 2. q. 90. prayers offered up to him, or from art. 2. et q. 95. art. 4. in corp.); sed, the compact of fellowship entered ut infra dicemus, dantur Succubi, et into with him (S. Thomas, quest.

Incubi, quibus nullum prædictorum 90). But, as will be seen hereafter, exhibetur, et tamen copula sequitur: there are Incubi and Succubi to igitur respectu istorum nulla whom none of the foregoing applies, intervenit irreligiositas, et and yet copula sequitur. There is commixtio cum istis nullam habebit consequently, in that special case, no rationem ulteriorem, quam puri et element of irreligion, no other simplicis coitus, qui, si est ejusdem character quam puri et simplicis speciei cum Bestialitate, sufficienter coitus; and, if of the same species as exprimetur dicendo: Bestialitatem Bestiality, it would be adequately commisi; quod tamen falsum est. stated by saying: I have been guilty of the sin of Bestiality; which is not so.

8. Ulterius in confesso est apud 8. Besides, it is acknowledged by all omnes Theologos Morales, quod Theological Moralists that copula longe gravior est copula cum cum Dæmone is much more Dæmone, quam cum quolibet bruto; grievous than the same act in eadem autem specie specialissima committed with any beast soever. peccati, non datur unum peccatum Now, in the same very particular gravius altero, sed omnia æque species of sins, one sin is not more gravia sunt; perinde enim est coire grievous than another; all are cum cane, aut asina, aut equa; equally so: it comes to the same sequitur ergo, quod si Dæmonialitas whether connection is had with a est gravior Bestialitate, non sint bitch, an ass, or a mare; whence it ambo ejusdem speciei. Nec follows that if Demoniality is more dicendum gravitatem majorem in grievous than Bestiality, those two Dæmonialitate petendam esse ab acts are not of the same species. And irreligiositate, seu superstitione ex let it not be argued, with Cajetanus, societate cum Dæmone, ut scribit that Demoniality is more grievous Cajetanus ad 2. 2. q. 154., ar. 11. § on account of the offense to religion ad 3. in fine, quia hoc fallit in from the worship rendered to the aliquibus Succubis et Incubis, ut Demon or the compact of fellowship supra dictum est; tum quia gravitas entered into with him: as has been major statuitur in Dæmonialitate shown above, that is not always met præ Bestialitate, in genere vitii with in the connection of man with contra naturam: major autem Incubi and Succubi; moreover, if in gravitas in illa supra istam ratione the genus of unnatural sin irreligiositatis exorbitat ex illo Demoniality is more grievous than genere, proinde non facit in illo Bestiality, the offense to Religion is quite foreign to that aggravation, genere, et ex se graviolem. since it is foreign to that genus itself.

9. Statuta igitur differentia specifica 9. Now, having laid down the Dæmonialitatis a Bestialitate, ut specific difference between gravitas illius percipiatur in ordine Demoniality and Bestiality, so that ad pœnam de qua principaliter the gravity thereof may be duly nobis tractandum est, est appreciated in view of the penalty to necessarium inquirere quod tupliciter be inflicted (and that is our most Dæmonialitas accidat. Non desunt essential object), we must inquire in qui sibi nimis scioli negant quod how many different ways the sin of gravissimi Auctores scripsere, et Demoniality may be committed. quod quotidiana constat experientia, There is no lack of people who, Dæmonem scilicet tum Incubum, infatuated with their small baggage tum Succubum, non solum of knowledge, venture to deny what hominibus, sed etiam brutis has been written by the gravest carnaliter conjungi. Aiunt proinde authors and is testified by every day esse hominum imaginationem, experience: namely, that the Demon, phantasmatibus a Dæmone whether Incubus or Succubus, unites perturbatis læsam, seu dæmoniaca carnally not only with men and esse præstigia: sicuti etiam Sagæ, women, but also with beasts. They seu Striges, sola imaginatione allege that it all comes from the perturbata a Dæmone, sibi videntur human imagination troubled by the assistere ludis, choreis, conviviis, et craft of the Demon, and that there is conventibus nocturnis, et carnaliter nothing in it but phantasmagoria and Dæmoni commisceri; nullo vero diabolical spells. The like happens, reali modo deferuntur corpore ad they say, to Witches or Sagas, who, eiusmodi loca et actiones, prout under the influence of an illusion textualiter dicitur in quodam brought on by the Demon, fancy that Capitulo, ac duobus Conciliis. Cap. they attend the nightly sports, Episcop. 26. q. 5., Conch. Ancyr. c. dances, revels and vigils, and have 24., Conc. Rom. 4. sub Damaso, c. carnal intercourse with the Demon, 5. apud Laur. Epitom. vº Saga. though in reality they are not bodily transferred to those places nor taking part in those deeds, as has been defined verbatim by a Capitule and two Councils.

10. Sed non negatur, quin aliquando 10. Of course, it is not contested that mulierculæ, illusæ a Dæmonibus, sometimes young women, deceived videantur nocturnis Sagarum ludis by the Demon, fancy taking part, in corporaliter interesse, dum tamen their flesh and blood, in the nightly sola imaginaria visione ipsis hoc vigils of Witches, without its being accidit: sicut etiam in somnis any thing but an imaginary vision. videtur nonnullis cum fæmina aliqua Thus, in a dream, one sometimes concumbere, et semen vere fancies cum fæmina aliqua excernitur, non tamen concubitus concumbere, et semen vere ille realis est, sed tantum excernitur, non tamen concubitus phantasticus, paratus non raro per ille realis est, but merely fantastic, illusionem diabolicam; et in hoc and often brought about by a verissimum est quod habent citatum diabolical illusion: and here the Capitulum et Concilia. Sed hoc non above mentioned Capitule and semper est; sed ut in pluribus, Councils are perfectly right. But this corpore deferuntur Sagæ ad ludos is not always the case; on the nocturnos, et vere carnaliter contrary, it more often happens that corpore conjunguntur Dæmoni, et Witches are bodily present at nightly Malefici non minus Dæmoni vigils and have with the Demon a succubo miscentur, et hæc est genuine carnal and corporeal sententia Theologorum, et jure connection, and that likewise consultorum Catholicorum, quos Wizards copulate with the Succuba abunde citat Frater Franciscus or female Demon. Such is the Maria Guaccius in suo libro opinion of Theologians as well as of intitulato Compendiumjurists, whose names will be found Maleficarum; Grilland. Remig. Petr. at length in the Compendium Damian. Sylvest. Alphon. a Cast. Maleficarum, or Chronicle of Abul. Cajet. Senon. Crespet. Spine. Witches, by Brother Francis Marie Anan. apud Guaccium, Comp. Guaccius. This doctrine is therein Malef., c. 15. § Altera, quam confirmed by eighteen instances verissimam ... n. 69. lib. p.; quæ adduced from the recitals of learned sententia confirmatur decem et octo and truthful men whose testimony is exemplis, ibidem allatis et relatis beyond suspicion, and which prove per viros doctos et veridicos de that Wizards and Witches are indeed quorum fide ambigendum non est, bodily present at vigils and most quibus probatur Maleficos et Sagas shamefully copulate with Demons, corporaliter ad ludos convenire, et Incubi or Succubi. And, after all, to cum Dæmonibus succubis et incubis settle the question, we have the corporaliter turpissime commisceri. authority of S. Augustine, who, Et pro omnibus sufficere debet speaking of carnal intercourse auctoritas Divi Augustini, qui between men and the Demon, loquens de concubitu hominum cum expresses himself as follows, book Dæmonibus, sic ait lib. 15. de 15th, chapt. 23^d of the City of God: Civitate Dei, c. 23.: “Et quoniam” It is widely credited, and such creberrima fama est, multique se belief is confirmed by the direct or expertos, vel ab eis qui experti indirect testimony of thoroughly essent, de quorum fide dubitandum trustworthy people, that Sylvans and non est, audivisse confirmant, Fauns, commonly called Incubi, Sylvanos et Faunos, quos vulgo have frequently molested women, Incubos vocant, improbos sæpe sought and obtained from them extitisse mulieribus, et earum coition. There are even Demons, appetuisse et peregissee concubitum. whom the Gauls call Duses or Elfs, Et quosdam Dæmones, quos Dusios who very regularly indulge in those Galli nuncupant, hanc assidue unclean practices: the fact is immunditiam et tentare et efficere, testified by so many and such plures talesque asseverant, ut hoc weighty authorities, that it were negare impudentia videatur.” Hæc impudent to doubt it.” Such are the Augustinus.

very words of S. Augustine.

11. Prout autem apud diversos 11. Now, several authors profess, Auctores legitur, et pluribus and it is confirmed by numerous experimentis comprobatur, duplici experiments, that the Demon has modo Dæmon hominibus carnaliter two ways of copulating carnally copulatur: uno modo quo Maleficis with men or women: the one which et Sagis jungitur, alio modo quo aliis it uses with Witches or Wizards, the hominibus minime maleficis other with men or women entirely miscetur. foreign to witchcraft.

12. Quantum ad primum modum, 12. In the first case, the Demon does non copulatur Dæmon Sagis, seu not copulate with Witches or Maleficis, nisi præmissa solemni Wizards until after a solemn professione, qua iniquissimi profession, in virtue of which such homines Dæmoni addicuntur; quæ wretched human beings yield professio, ut ex variis Auctoribus themselves up to him. According to referentibus confessiones Sagarum several authors who have related the judiciales in tormentis factas, quas judicial admissions of Witches when collegit Franciscus Maria Guaccius, on the rack, and whose recitals have Comp. Malef., c. 7., lib. 1., consistit been collected by Francis-Marie Guaccius, Compend. Malef., book 1, in undecim ceremoniis.

Guaccius, Compend. Malef., book 1, chapt. 7, that profession consists of eleven ceremonials:

13. Primo, ineunt pactum expressum 13. Firstly, the Novices have to cum Dæmone, aut alio Mago seu conclude with the Demon, or some Malefico vicem Dæmonis gerente, et other Wizard or Magician acting in testibus præsentibus, de servitio the Demon's place, an express diabolico suscipiendo: Dæmon vero compact by which, in the presence vice versa honores, divitias, et of witnesses, they enlist in the carnales delectationes illis Demon's service, he giving them in pollicetur. Guacc. loc. cit. fol. 34. exchange his pledge for honours, riches and carnal pleasures.

14. Secundo, abnegant catholicam 14. Secondly, they abjure the fidem, subducunt se obedientiæ Dei, catholic faith, withdraw from the renuntiant Christo, et protectioni obedience to God, renounce Christ Beatissimæ Virginis Mariæ, ac and the protection of the most Ecclesiæ omnibus sacramentis. blessed Virgin Mary, and all the Guacc., loc. cit. Sacraments of the Church.

15. Tertio, projiciunt a se Coronam, 15. Thirdly, they cast away the seu Rosarium B. V. M., Chordam S. Crown, or Rosary of the most P. Francisci, aut Corrigiam S. blessed Virgin Mary, the girdle of S. Augustini, aut Scapulare Francis, or the strap of S. Austin, or Carmelitarum, si quod habent, the scapular of the Carmelites, Crucem, Medaleas, Agnos Dei, et should they belong to one of those quidquid sacri aut benedicti Orders, the Cross, the Medals, the gestabant, et pedibus ea proculcant. Agnus Dei, whatever other holy or Guacc. loc. cit. fol. 35. Grilland. consecrated object may have been about their person, and trample them all under foot.

16. Quarto, vovent in manibus 16. Fourthly, in the hands of the Diaboli obedientiam, et Devil they vow obedience and subjectionem, eique præstant subjection; they pay him homage homagium et vassallagium, and vassalage, laying their fingers tangendo quoddam volumen on some very black book. They bind nigerrimum. Spondent, quod themselves never to return to the nunquam redibunt ad fidem Christi, faith of Christ, to observe none of nec Dei præcepta servabunt, nec the divine precepts, to do no good ulla bona opera facient, sed ad sola work, but to obey the Demon alone mandata Dæmonis attendant, et ad and, to attend diligently the nightly conventus nocturnos diligenter conventicles. accident. Guacc. loc. cit. fol. 36.

17. Quinto, spondent se enixe 17. Fifthly, they promise to strive curaturos, et omni studio ac with all their power, and to give sedulitate procuraturos adducere their utmost zeal and care for the alios mares et fæminas ad sua enlistment of other males and sectam, et cultum Dæmonis. Guacc. females in the service of the Demon. loc. cit.

18. Sexto, baptizantur a Diabolo 18. Sixthly, the Devil administers to sacrilego quodam baptismo, et them a kind of sacrilegious baptism, abnegatis Patrinis et Matrinis and after abjuring their Godfathers baptismi Christi, et Confirmationis, and Godmothers of the Baptism of et nomine, quod sibi fuit primo Christ and Confirmation, they have impositum, a Diabolo sibi assigned to them a new Godfather assignantur Patrinus et Matrina and a new Godmother, who are to novi, qui ipsos instruant in arte instruct them in the arts of maleficiorum, et imponitur nomen witchcraft; they drop their former novum, quod plerumque scurrile est. name and exchange it for another, Guacc. loc. cit. more frequently a scurrilous nickname.

19. Septimo, abscindunt partem 19. Seventhly, they cut off a part of propriorum indumentorum, et illam their own garments, and tender it as offerunt Diabolo in signum homagii, a token of homage to the Devil, who et Diabolus illam asportat, et servat. takes it away and keeps it. Guacc. loc. cit. fol. 38.

20. Octavo, format Diabolus 20. Eighthly, the Devil draws on the circulum super terram, et in eo ground a circle wherein stand the stantes Novitii Malefici et Sagæ Novices, Witches and Wizards, and firmant juramento omnia, quæ ut there they confirm by oath all their dictum est promiserunt. Guacc. loc. aforesaid promises. cit.

21. Nono, petunt a Diabolo deleri a 21. Ninthly, they request the Devil libro Christi, et describi in libro suo, to strike them out of the book of et profertur liber nigerrimus, quem Christ, and to inscribe them in his tetigerunt præstando homagium, ut town. Then comes forth that very dictum est supra, et ungue Diaboli black book on which, as has been in eo exarantur. Guacc. loc. cit. said before, they laid hands when doing homage, and they are inscribed therein with the Devil's claw.

22. Decimo, promittunt Diabolo 22. Tenthly, they promise the Devil statis temporibus sacrificia, et sacrifices and offerings at stated oblaciones; singulis quindecim times: once a fortnight or at least diebus, vel singulo mense saltem, each month, the murder of some necem alicujus infantis, aut mortale child, or an homicidal act of sorcery, veneficium, et singulis hebdomadis and other weekly misdeeds to the alia mala in damnum humani prejudice of mankind, such as generis, ut grandines, tempestates, hailstorms, tempests, fires, cattle incendia, mortem animalium, etc. plagues, etc. Guacc. loc. cit. fol. 40.

23. Undecimo, sigillantur a 23. Eleventhly, the Demon imprints Dæmone aliquo caractere, maxime on them some mark, especially on ii, de quorum constantia dubitat. those whose constancy he suspects. Character vero non est semper That mark, moreover, is not always ejusdem formæ, aut figuræ: of the same shape or figure: aliquando enim est simile lepori, sometimes it is the image of a hare, aliquando pedi bufonis, aliquando sometimes a toad's leg, sometimes a araneæ, vel catello, vel gliri; spider, a puppy, a dormouse. It is imprimitur autem in locis corporeis imprinted on the most hidden parts magis occultis: viris quidem of the body: with men, under the aliquando sub palpebris, aliquando eye-lids, or the armpits, or the lips, sub axillis, aut labiis, aut humeris, on the shoulder, the fundament, or aut sede ima, aut alibi; mulieribus somewhere else; with women, it is autem plerumque in mammis, aut usually on the breasts or the privy locis muliebribus. Porro sigillum, parts. Now, the stamp which quo talia signa imprimuntur, est imprints those marks is none other unguis Diaboli. Quibus peractis ad but the Devil's claw. This having instructionem Magistrorum qui been all performed in accordance

Novitios initiarunt, hi promittunt with the instructions of the Teachers denuo, se nunquam Eucharistiam who have initiated the Novices, adoraturos; injuriosos Sanctis these promise lastly never to omnibus, et maxime B. V. M. worship the Eucharist; to insult all futuros; conculcaturos ac Saints and especially the most conspurcaturos Sacras Imagines, blessed Virgin Mary; to trample Crucem, ac Sanctorum Reliquias; under foot and vilify the holy nunquam usuros Sacramentis, aut images, the Cross and the relics of sacramentalibus, nisi ad maleficia; Saints; never to use the sacraments integram confessionem or sacramental ceremonials; never to sacramentalem sacerdoti nunquam make a full confession to the priest, facturos, et suum cum Dæmone but to keep always hidden from him commercium semper celaturos. Et their intercourse with the Demon.
Diabolus vicissim pollicetur, se illis The Demon, in exchange, engages semper præsto futurum; se in hoc to give them always prompt mundo votis eorum satisfacturum, et assistance; to fulfil their desires in post mortem illos esse beaturum. Sic this world and to make them happy peracta professione solemni, after their death. The solemn assignatur singulis eorum Diabolus, profession being thus performed, qui appellatur Magistellus, cum quo each has assigned to himself a in partes secedunt, et carnaliter Devil, called Magistellus or commiscentur: ille quidem in specie Assistant Master, with whom he fæminæ, si initiatus est vir; in forma retires in private for carnal autem viri, et aliquando satyri, satisfaction; the said Devil being, of aliquando hirci, si fæmina est saga course, in the shape of a woman if professa. Guacc. loc. cit. fol. 42 et the initiated person is a man, in the 43.

shape of a man, sometimes of a satyr, sometimes of a buck-goat, if it is a woman who has been received a witch.

24. Quod si quærat ab Auctoribus, 24. If the authors be asked how it quomodo possit Dæmon, qui corpus comes to pass that the Demon, who non habet, corporalem has no body, yet has carnal commixtionem habere cum homine: intercourse with man or woman, respondent communiter, quod they unanimously answer that the Dæmon aut assumit alterius maris Demon assumes the corpse of aut fæminæ, juxta exigentiam, another human being, male or cadaver, aut ex mixtione aliarum female as the case may be, or that, materiarum effingit sibi corpus, from the mixture of other materials, quod movet, et mediante quo homini he shapes for himself a body unitur. Et subdunt, quod quando endowed with motion, and by means fæminæ gaudent imprægnari a of which he is united with the Dæmone (quod non fit, nisi in human being; and they add that gratiam fæminarum hoc optantium), when women are desirous of Dæmon se transformat in succubam, becoming pregnant by the Demon et juncta homini semen ab eo (which only occurs by the consent recipit; aut per illusionem and express wish of the said nocturnam in somnis procurat ab women), the Demon is transformed homine pollutionem, et semen into a Succuba, et juncta homini prolectum in suo nativo calore et semen ab eo recipit; or else he cum vitali spiritu conservat, et procures pollution from a man incubando fæminæ infert in ipsius during his sleep, et semen prolectum matricem, ex quo sequitur in suo nativo calore, et cum vitali conceptio. Ita multis citatis docet spiritu conservat, et incubando Guaccius, l. i. c. 12., per totum, qui fæminæ infert in ipsius matricem, prædicta multis exemplis desumptis whence follows impregnation. Such a variis Doctoribus confirmat.

is the teaching of Guaccius, book 1, chapt. 12, who supports it on a number of quotations and instances taken from various Doctors.

25. Alio modo jungitur Dæmon tum 25. At other times also the Demon, Incubus, tum Succubus, hominibus, whether Incubus or Succubus, fæminis aut maribus, a quibus nec copulates with men or women from honorem, nec sacrificia, oblationes, whom he receives none of the maleficia, quæ a Sagis et Maleficis, sacrifices, homage or offerings ut supra dictum est, prætendit, which he is wont to exact from recipit; sed ostendens deperdite Wizards or Witches, as aforesaid. He amorem, nil aliud appetit, quam is then but a passionate lover, having carnaliter commisceri cum iis quos only one desire: the carnal amat. Multa sunt de hoc exempla, possession of the loved ones. Of this quæ ab Auctoribus referuntur, ut there are numerous instances to be Menippi Lycii, qui fuit sollicitatus a found in the authors, amongst which quadam fæmina ad sibi nubendum, the case of Menippus Lycius, who, postquam cum ea multoties coivit; et after frequent coition with a woman, detecta fœmina quænam esset a was by her entreated to marry her; quodam Philosopho, qui convivio but a certain philosopher, who nuptiali intererat, et Menippo dixit partook of the wedding illam esse Compusam, puta entertainment, having guessed what *Dæmonem succubam, statim ejulan*s that woman was, told Menippus that evanuit, ut narrat Cælius he had to deal with a Compusa, that Rhodiginus, Antiq., lib. 29. c. 5. is a Succuba Demon; whereupon the Pariter adolescens quidam Scotus a bride vanished bewailing: such is Dæmone succuba omnium the narrative given by Cælius gratissima, quas vidisset, forma, Rhodiginus, Antiq., book 29, chapt. quæ occlusis cubiculi foribus ad se 5. Hector Boethius (Hist. Scot.) also ventitabat, blanditiis, osculis, relates the case of a young Scot, amplexibus per multos menses fuit who, during many months, with sollicitatus, ut secum coiret, ut closed doors and windows, was scribit Hector Boethius, Hist. visited in his bed-room by a Scotor. lib. 8., quod tamen a casto Succuba Demon of the most juvene obtinere non potuit.

bewitching beauty; caresses, kisses, embraces, entreaties, she resorted to every blandishment ut secum coiret: but she could not prevail on the chaste young man.

26. Similiter, multas fœminas 26. We read likewise of numerous legimus ab Incubo Dæmone women incited to coition by the expetitas ad coitum, ipsisque Incubus Demon, and who, though repugnantibus facinus admittere, reluctant at first of yielding to him, precibus, fletibus, blanditiis, non are soon moved by his entreaties, secus ac perditissimus amasius, tears and endearments; he is a procurasse animum ipsarum desperate lover and must not be demulcere, et ad congressum denied. And although this comes inclinare; et quamvis aliquoties hoc sometimes of the craft of some eveniat ob maleficium, ut nempe Wizard who avails himself of the Dæmon missus a maleficis hoc agency of the Demon, yet the procuret: tamen non raro Dæmon ex Demon not infrequently acts on his se hoc agit, ut scribit Guaccius, own account; and it happens not Comp. Mal. lib. 3. c. 8., et non merely with women, but also with solum hoc evenit cum mulieribus, mares; if they readily comply with sed etiam cum equabus, cum quibus his desire, he pets them, and plaits commiscetur; quæ si libenter coitum their mane in elaborate and admittunt, ab eo curantur optime, ac inextricable tresses; but if they ipsarum jubæ varie artificiosis et resist, he ill-treats and strikes them, inextricabilibus nodis texuntur; si smites them with the glanders, and autem illum adversentur, eas male finally puts them to death, as is tractat, percutit, macras reddit, et shown by daily experience. tandem necat, ut quotidiana constat experientia.

27. Et quod mirum est, et pene 27. A most marvellous and well nigh incapabile, tales Incubi, qui Italice incomprehensible fact: the Incubi vocantur Folletti, Hispanicè whom the Italians call Folletti, the Duendes, Gallice Follets, nec Spaniards Duendes, the French Exorcistis obediunt, nec exorcismos Follets, do not obey the Exorcists, pavent, nec res sacras reverentur ad have no dread of exorcisms, no earum approximationem timorem reverence for holy things, at the ostendendo, sicuti faciunt Dæmones, approach of which they are not in qui obsessos vexant; quantumvis the least overawed; very different in enim maligni Spiritus sint obstinati, that respect from the Demons who nec parere velint Exorcistæ vex those whom they possess; for, præcipienti, ut exeant a corporibus however obstinate those evil Spirits quæ obsident, tamen ad prolationem may be, however restive to the Sanctissimi Nominis Jesu, aut injunctions of the Exorcist who bids Mariæ, aut aliquorum versuum them leave the body they possess, Sacræ Scripturæ, impositionem yet, at the mere utterance of the Reliquiarum, maxime Ligni Sanctæ most holy name of Jesus or Mary, or Crucis, approximationem Sacrarum of some verses of Holy Writ, at the Imaginum, ad os obsessi rugiunt, mere imposition of relics, especially strident, frendent, concutiuntur, et of a piece of the wood of the Holy timorem ac horrorem ostendunt. Cross, or the sight of the holy Folletti vero nihil horum, ut dictum images, they roar at the mouth of the est, ostendunt, nec a divexatione, possessed person, they gnash, shake, nisi post longum tempus, cessant. quiver, and display fright and awe.
Hujus rei testis sum oculatus, et But the Folletti show none of those historiam recito quæ re ipsa signs, and leave off their vexations humanam fidem superat: sed testis but after a long space of time. Of mihi sit Deus quod puram veritatem this I was an eye-witness, and shall relate a story which verily passes multorum testimonio comprobata human belief: but I take God to describo.

witness that I tell the precise truth, corroborated by the testimony of numerous persons.

28. Viginti quinque abhinc annis, 28. About twenty five years ago, plus minusve, dum essem Lector when I was a lecturer on Sacred Sacræ Theologiæ in Conventu Theology in the convent of the Holy Sanctæ Crucis Papiæ, reperiēbatur Cross, in Pavia, there was living in in illa civitate honesta quædam that city a married woman of fœmina maritata optimæ unimpeachable morality, and who conscientiæ, et bonum habens ab was most highly spoken of by all omnibus eam agnoscentibus, such as knew her, especially by the maxime Religiosis, testimonium, Friars; her name was Hieronyma, quæ vocabatur Hieronyma; et and she lived in the parish of S. habitabat in parochia Sancti Michael. One day, this woman had Michaelis. Hæc quadam die domi kneaded bread at home and given it suæ panem pinserat, et per out to bake. The oven-man brought furnarium miserat ad illum her back her loaves when baked, and decoquendum. Reportat panes with them a large cake of a peculiar coctos furnarius, et cum illis shape, and made of butter and grandem quamdam placentam Venetian paste, as is usual in that curiose elaboratam, conditam city. She declined to take it in, butyro, et pastulis Venetis, ut in ea saying she had not made any thing civitate solent fieri placentæ of the kind.—“But”, said the ovenhujusmodi. Renuit illa placentam man, “I had no other bread but yours recipere, dicens se talem nullam to bake to-day, therefore this cake fecisse. Replicat furnarius, se illa also must have come from your die alium panem coquendum non house; your memory is at fault”. The habuisse, nisi illum quem ab ea good lady allowed herself to be habuerat; oportere proinde, etiam persuaded, and partook of the cake placentam a se fuisse factam, licet with her husband, her little girl three minime de illa recordaretur. years old, and the house servant.
Acquievit fœmina, et placentam cum The next night, whilst in bed with viro suo, filia quam habebat her husband, and both asleep, she triennem, et famula comedit. suddenly woke up at the sound of a Sequenti nocte dum cubaret mulier very slender voice, something like a cum viro suo, et ambo dormirent, shrill hissing, whispering in her ears, expergefacta est a quadamyet with great distinctness, and tenuissima voce, velut acutissimiinquiring whether “the cake had sibili ad ipsius aures susurrante,been to her taste?” The good lady, verbis tamen distinctis: interrogavitfrightened, set about guarding autem fæminam, num placenta illiherself with a sign of the cross and placuisset? Pavens fæmina cæpit serepeatedly calling the names of munire signo Crucis, et invocareJesus and Mary. “Be not afraid,” sæpius nomina Jesu et Mariæ.said the voice, “I mean you no Replicabat vox, ne paveret, se nolleharm; quite, the reverse: I am illi nocere, immo quæcumque illiprepared to do any thing to please placerent paratum exsequi, esse filoyou; I am captivated by your beauty, captum pulchritudinis suæ, et niland desire nothing more than to amplius desiderare, quam ejusenjoy your embraces”. And she felt amplexu frui. Tum fæmina sensitsomebody kissing her cheeks, so aliquem suaviantem ipsius genas,lightly, so softly, that she might have sed tactus ita levis, ac mollis, ac sifancied being grazed by the finest esset gossipium subtilissimedown. She resisted without giving carminatum id a quo tacta fuit.any answer, merely repeating over Respuit illa invitantem, nec ullumand over again the names of Jesus responsum illi dedit: sed jugiterand Mary, and crossing herself; the nomen Jesu et Mariæ repetebat, ettempter kept on thus for nearly half se Crucis signo muniebat; et sic peran hour, when he withdrew.

spatium quasi horæ dimidiæ tentata fuit, et postea abscessit tentator.

Sequenti mane fuit mulier adThe next morning the dame called confessarium virum prudentem acon her Confessor, a discreet and doctum, a quo fuit in fide confirmatalearned man, who confirmed her in et exhortata, ut viriliter, sicuthers faith, exhorted her to maintain fecerat, resisteret, et sacris Reliquiisher energetic resistance and to se muniret. Sequentibus noctibus parprovide herself with some holy priori fuit tentatio, et verbis, etrelics. On the ensuing nights, like osculis, et par etiam in mulierettemptation with the same language constantia. Hæc pertæsa talem acand kisses, like constancy also on tantam molestiam, ad Confessariithe part of the woman. Weary consultationem, et aliorum graviumhowever of such painful and virorum, per Exorcistas peritos fecitpersistent molestation, taking the se exorcizare ad sciendum num essetadvice of her Confessor and other *obsessa; et cum invenissent a nullo*grave men, she had herself *malo spiritu possideri, benedixerunt*exorcised by experienced Exorcists, domui, cubiculo, lecto, etin order to ascertain whether *præceptum Incubo fecerunt, ne*perchance she was not possessed.

*auderet molestiam amplius mulieri*Having found in her no trace of the *inferre. Sed omnia incassum:*evil Spirit, they blessed the house, *siquidem tentationem inceptam*the bed-room, the bed, and enjoined *prosequeretur, ac si præ amore*on the Incubus to discontinue his *langueret, ploratus et ejulatus*molestations. All to no purpose: he *emittebat ad mulierem*kept on worse than ever, pretending *demulcendam, quæ tamen grati*to be love-sick, weeping and *Die adjuta semper viriliter restitit.*moaning in order to melt the heart of *Renovavit Incubus tentationem, ipsi*the lady, who however, by the grace *apparens interdum in forma pusionis,*of God, remained unconquered. The *seu parvi homunculi pulcherrimi,*Incubus then went another way to *cæsariem habens rutilam et*work: he appeared in the shape of a *crispam, barbamque fulvam a*lad or little man of great beauty, *splendentem velut aurum,*with golden locks, a flaxen beard *glaucosque oculos, ut flos lini,*that shone like gold, sea-green eyes *incedebatque indutus habitu*calling to mind the flax-flower, and *Hispanico. Apparebat autem illi*arrayed in a fancy Spanish dress. *quamvis cum ea alii morarentur; et*Besides he appeared to her even *questus, prout faciunt amantes,*when in company, whimpering, after *exercens, et jactando basia,*the fashion of lovers, kissing his *solitasque preces repetendo tentaba*hand to her, and endeavouring by *mulierem, ut ad illius amplexu*every means to obtain her embraces. *admitteretur. Videbatque, et*She alone saw and heard him: for *audiebat illa sola præsentem a*every body else, he was not to be *loquentem, minime autem cæteri*seen. adstantes.

*Perseverabat in illa constantia*The good lady kept persevering in *mulier, donec contra eam iratus*her admirable constancy till, at last, *Incubus, post aliquos menses*after some months of courting, the *blanditiarum novum persecutionis*Incubus, incensed at her disdain, had *genus adortus est. Primo abstulit a*recourse to a new kind of *ea crucem argenteam plenam*persecution. First, he took away *Reliquiis Sanctorum, et ceram*from her a silver cross filled with benedictam, sive Agnum papalem B. holy relics, and a holy wax or papal Pontificis Pii V, quæ secum semper lamb of the blessed Pontiff Pius V, portabat; mox etiam annulos et alia which she always carried on her jocalia aurea et argentea ipsius, person; then, leaving the locks intactis seris sub quibus untouched, he purloined her rings custodiebantur, in arca suffuratus and other gold and silver jewelry est. Exinde cœpit illam acriter from the casket wherein they were percutere, et apparebant post put away. Next, he began to strike verbera contusiones, et livores in her cruelly, and after each beating facie, brachiis, aliisque corporis bruises and marks were to be seen partibus, quæ per diem unum vel on her face, her arms or other parts alterum perdurabant, mox in of her body, which lasted a day or momento disparebant contra two, then suddenly disappeared, the ordinem contusionis naturalis, quæ reverse of natural bruises which sensim paulatimque decrescit. decrease slowly and by degrees. Aliquoties ipsius infantulam Sometimes, while she was nursing lactentem cunis eripiebat, et illam, her little girl, he would snatch the nunc super tecta in limine præcipitii child away from on her breast and locabat, nunc occultabat, nihi lay it upon the roof, on the edge of tamen mali in illa apparuit. the gutter, or hide it, but without Aliquoties totam domus ever harming it. Sometimes he supellectilem evertebat; aliquoties would upset all the furniture, or ollas, paropsides, et alia vasa teste smash to pieces saucepans, plates minutatim frangebat, subinde fracta and other earthenware which, in the restituebat integra. Semel dum ipsa twinkling of an eye, he restored to cum viro cubaret, apparens Incubus their former state. One night that she in forma solita enixe deprecabatur was lying with her husband, the ab ea concubitum, et dum ipsa de Incubus, appearing in his customary more constans resisteret, in furorem shape, vehemently urged his actus Incubus abscessit, et infra demand which she resisted as usual. breve temporis spatium reversus est, The Incubus withdrew in a rage, and secum ferens magnam copiam shortly came back with a large load laminarum saxearum, quibus of those flag stones which the Genuenses in civitate sua et Genoese, and the inhabitants of universa Liguria domos tegunt, et ex Liguria in general, use for roofing ipsis fabricavit murum circa lectum their houses. With those stones he tantæ altitudinis, ut ejus conopeum built around the bed a wall so high adæquaret, unde necesse fuit scalis that it reached the tester, and that the uti, si debuerunt de cubili surgere. couple could not leave their bed Murus autem fuit absque calce, et without using a ladder. This wall ipso destructo, saxa in angulo however was built up without lime; seposita, quæ ibi per duos dies when pulled down, the flags were remanserunt visa a multis, qui ad laid by in a corner where, during spectaculum convenerant; et post two days, they were seen by many biduum disparuerunt. who came to look at them; they then disappeared.

Invitaverat maritus ejus in die S. On S. Stephen's day, the husband Stephani quosdam amicos viros had asked some military friends to militares ad prandium, et pro dinner, and, to do honour to his hospitum dignitate dapes paraverat; guests, had provided a substantial dum de more lavantur manus ante repast. Whilst they were, as accubitum, disparet in momento customary, washing their hands mensa parata in triclinio; disparet before taking their seats, suddenly obsonia cuncta, olla, caldaria, vanished the table dressed in the patinæ, ac omnia vasa in coquina; dining-room; all the dishes, disparent amphoræ, canthari, saucepans, kettles, plates and calices parati ad potum. Attoniti ad crockery in the kitchen vanished hoc stupent commensales, qui erant likewise, as well as the jugs, bottles octo, inter quos Dux peditum and glasses. You may imagine the Hispanus ad alios conversus ait: surprise, the stupor of the guests, “Ne paveatis, ista est illusio, sed pro eight in number; amongst them was certo mensa in loco in quo erat, a Spanish Captain of infantry, who, adhuc est, et modo modo eam tactu addressing the company, said to percipiam.” Hisque dictis circuibat them: “Do not be frightened, it is cænaculum manibus extentis, but a trick: the table is certainly still tentans mensam deprehendere, sed where it stood, and I shall soon find cum post multos circuitus incassum it by feeling for it”. Having thus laborasset, et nil præter aerem spoken, he paced round the room tangeret, irrisus fuit a cæteris; with outstretched arms, cumque jam grandis esset prandii endeavouring to lay hold of the hora, pallium proprium eorum table; but when, after many unusquisque sumpsit propriam circuitous perambulations, it was domum petiturus. Jam erant omnes apparent that he laboured in vain prope januam domus in procinctu and grasped at nought but thin air, eundi, associati a marito vexatæ he was laughed at by his friends; mulieris, urbanitatis causa, cum and it being already high time for grandem quendam strepitum in having dinner, each guest took up cænaculo audiunt. Subsistunt this cloak and set about to return parumper ad cognoscendum causam home. They had already reached the strepitus, et accurrens famula street-door with the husband, who, nuntiat in coquina vasa nova out of politeness, was attending obsoniis plena apparuisse, them, when they heard a great noise mensamque in cænaculo jam in the dining-room: they stood to paratam esse restitutam. ascertain the cause thereof, and Revertuntur in cænaculum, et presently the servant came up to stupent mensam mappis et announce that the kitchen was manutergiis insolitis, salino, et stocked with new vessels filled with lancibus insolitis argenteis, food, and that the table was standing salsamentis, ac obsoniis, quæ domi again in its former place. Having parata non fuerant, instructam. Agone back to the dining-room, they latere magna erecta erat credentia, were stupefied to see the table was supra quam optimo ordine stabant laid, with cloths, napkins, saltcalices crystallinis, argentini et cellars, and trays that did not belong aurei, cum variis amphoris, lagenis, to the house, and with food which cantharis plenis vinis exteris, puta had not been cooked there. On a Cretensi, Campano, Canariensi, large sideboard all were arrayed in Rhenano, etc. In coquina pariter in perfect order crystal, silver and gold ollis, et vasis itidem in ea domo chalices, with all kind of amphoras, nunquam visis, varia obsonia. decanters and cups filled with Dubitarunt prius nonnulli ex iis eas foreign wines, from the Isle of dapes gustare, sed confirmati ab Crete, Campania, the Canaries, the aliis accubuerunt, et exquisitissime Rhine, etc. In the kitchen there was omnia condita reppererunt; ac also an abundant variety of meats in immediate a prandio, dum omnes saucepans and dishes that had never pro usu illius tempores ad ignem been seen there before. At first, sedent, omnia utensilia cum some of the guests hesitated whether reliquiis ciborum disparuere, et they should taste of that food; reperatæ sunt antiquæ domus however, encouraged by others, they supellectiles simul cum dapibus, sat down, and soon partook of the quæ prius paratæ fuerant; et quod meal, which was found exquisite. mirum est, convivæ omnes saturati Immediately afterwards, as they sunt, ita ut nullus eorum cœnam were sitting before a seasonable fire, sumpserit præ prandii lautitia. Quo every thing vanished at once, the convincitur cibos appositos reales dishes and the leavings, and in their *fuisse, et non ex præstigi*o stead reappeared the cloth of the repræsentatos.

house and the victual which had been previously cooked; but, for a wonder, all the guests were satisfied, so that no one thought of supper after such a magnificent dinner. A clear proof that the substituted viands were real and nowise fictitious.

Interea effluxerant multi menses, ex This kind of persecution had been quos cœperat hujusmodi persecutio: going on some months, when the *et mulier votum fecit B. Bernardin*o lady betook herself to the blessed Feltrensi, cujus sacrum corpus Bernardine of Feltri, whose body is veneratur in Ecclesia S. Jacobi worshipped in the church of St prope murum illius urbis, incedendi James, a short distance from the per annum integrum indutam panno walls of the city. She made a vow to griseo, et chordulato, quo utuntur him that she would wear, during a Fratres Minores, de quorum ordine whole twelve-month, a grey frock, *fuit B. Bernardinus, ut per ipsi*u tied round her waist with a piece of patrocinium a tanta Incubi cord, and such as is worn by the vexatione liberaretur. Et de facto die Minor Brethren, the order to which 28 Septembris, qui est pervigilium had belonged the blessed Dedicationis S. Michaelis Bernardine; this she vowed, in the Archangeli, et festum B. Bernardini, hope of being, through his ipsa veste votiva induta est. Mane intercession, at last rid of the sequenti, quod est festum S. persecution of the Incubus. And Michaelis, ibat vexata ad ecclesiam accordingly, on the 28th of S. Michaelis, quæ ut diximus erat September, the vigil of the parochialis ipsius, circa medium Dedication of the Archangel S. mane, dum frequens populus ad Michael, and the festival of the illam confluebat; et cum pervenisset blessed Bernardine, she assumed the ad medium plateæ ecclesiæ, omnia votive robe. The next morning, ipsius indumenta et ornamenta which was S. Michael's festival, the ceciderunt in terram et rapta vento afflicted woman proceeded to the statim disparuerunt, ipsa relictachurch of St Michael, her own nuda. Adfuerunt sorte inter aliosparish, already mentioned; it was duo equites viri longævi, qui factumabout ten o'clock, a time when a videntes, dejectis ab humerocrowd of people were going to mass. propriis palliis mulieris nuditatem,She had no sooner set foot on the ut potuerunt, velarunt, et rhedæthreshold of the church, than her impositam ad propriam domumclothes and ornaments fell off to the duxerunt. Vestes et jocalia quæground, and disappeared in a gust of rapuerat Incubus, non restituit nisiwind, leaving her stark naked. There post sex menses.

happened fortunately to be among the crowd two cavaliers of mature age, who, seeing what had taken place, hastened to divest themselves of their cloaks with which they concealed, as well as they could, the woman's nudity, and having put her into a vehicle, accompanied her home. The clothes and trinkets taken by the Incubus were not restored by him before six months had elapsed.

Multa alia, et quidem stupendaI might relate many other most operatus est contra eam Incubus,surprising tricks which that Incubus quæ tædet exscribere, et per multosplayed on her, were it not annos in ea tentatione permansit;wearisome. Suffice it to say that, for tandemque Incubus videns operama number of years he persevered in in ea perdere, destitit a tamhis temptation of her, but that importuna et insolita vexatione.

finding at last that he was losing his pains, he desisted from his vexatious importunities.

29. In hoc casu, et similibus qui29. In the above case, as well as in passim audiuntur et leguntur,others that may be heard or read of Incubus ad nullum actum contraoccasionally, the Incubus attempts Religionem tentat, sed solum contrano act against Religion; he merely castitatem. Hinc fit quod ipsiassails chastity. In consequence, consentiens non peccatconsent is not a sin through irreligiositate, sed incontinentia.

ungodliness, but through incontinence.

30. In confesso autem est apud 30. Now, it is undoubted by Theologos et Philosophos, quod ex Theologians and philosophers that commixtione hominis cum Dæmone carnal intercourse between mankind aliquoties nascuntur homines, et tali and the Demon sometimes gives modo nasciturum esse Antichristum birth to human beings; that is how is opinantur nonnulli Doctores: to be born the Antichrist, according Bellarmin. lib. 1, de Rom. Pont., cap. to some Doctors, such as Bellarmine, 12; Suarez, tom. 2, disp. 54, sec. 1.; Suarez, Maluenda, etc. They further Maluend., de Antichr., l. 2., c. 8. observe that, from a natural cause, Immo observant, quod, qui the children thus begotten by Incubi gignuntur ab hujusmodi Incubis, are tall, very hardy and bold, very naturali causa etiam evenit, ut proud and wicked. Thus writes nascantur grandes, robustissimi, Maluenda; as for the cause, he gives ferocissimi, superbissimi, ac it from Vallesius, Archphysician in nequissimi, ut scripsit Maluenda, Reggio: "What Incubi introduce in loc. cit., § Ad illud; e rationem uteros, is not qualecumque neque recitat ex Vallesio Archia. Reggio. quantumcumque semen, but Sac. Philosoph., c. 8., dicente quod abundant, very thick, very warm, Incubi summittant in uteros non rich in spirits and free from serosity. qualecumque, neque This moreover is an easy thing for quantumcumque semen, sed them, since they have but to choose plurimum, crassissimum, ardent, robust men, et abundantes calidissimum, spiritibus affluens et multo semine, quibus succumbant, seri expers. Id vero est eis facile and then women of a like conquirere, deligendo homines constitution, quibus incumbant, calidos, robustos, et abundantes taking care that both shall enjoy multo semine, quibus succumbant, voluptatem solito majorem, tanto deinde et mulieres tales, quibus enim abundantius emittitur semen, incumbant, atque utrisque quanto cum majori voluptate voluptatem solito majorem excernitur." Those are the words of afferendo, tanto enim abundantius Vallesius, confirmed by Maluenda emittitur semen, quanto cum majori who shows, from the testimony of voluptate excernitur. Hæc Vallesius. various Authors, mostly classical, Confirmat vero Maluenda that such associations gave birth to: supradicta, probando, ex variis et Romulus and Remus, according to classicis Auctoribus, ex hujusmodi Livy and Plutarch; Servius-Tullius, concubitu natos: Romulum ac the sixth king of Rome, according to Remum, Liv. decad. 1; Plutarch., in Dyonisius of Halicarnassus and Vit. Romul. et Parallel.; Servium Pliny the Elder; Plato the Tullium, sextum regem Romanorum, Philosopher, according to Diogenes Dionys. Halicar., lib. 4, Plin., lib. Laertius and Saint Hieronymus; 36., c. 27; Platonem Philosophum, Alexander the Great, according to Laer. l., 9. de Vit. Philos.; D. Plutarch and Quintus-Curtius; Hyeron., l. 1. Controvers. Jovinian.; Seleucus, king of Syria, according to Alexandrum Magnum, Plutarch., in Justinus and Appianus; Scipio Vit. Alex. M.; Quint. Curt., l. 4, de Africanus the Elder, according to Gest. Alex. M.; Seleucum, regem Livy; the emperor Cæsar Augustus, Syriæ, Just., Hist., l. 15; Appian., in according to Suetonius; Aristomenes Syriac.; Scipionem Africanum the Messenian, an illustrious Greek Majorem, Liv., decad. 3, lib. 6; commander, according to Strabo and Cæsarem Augustum Imperatorem, Pausanias; as also Merlin or Sueton., in Octa., c. 94; Melchin the Englishman, born from Aristomenem Messenium, an Incubus and a nun, the daughter strenuissimum ducem Græcorum, of Charlemagne; and, lastly, as Strabo, de Sit Orb., lib. 8; Pausan., shown by the writings of Cochlæus de Rebus Græcor., lib. 3; et quoted by Maluenda, that damned Merlinum, seu Melchinum Anglicum Heresiarch ycleped Martin Luther.

ex Incubo et Filia Caroli Magni Moniali, Hauler, volum. 2, Generat.
 7, quod etiam de Martino Luthero, perditissimo Heresiarcha scribit Cochlæus apud Maluendam, de Antich., lib. 2, c. 6, § Cæterum.

31. Salva tamen tot, et tantorum 31. However, with due deference to Doctorum, qui in ea opinione so many and such learned Doctors, I conveniunt, reverentia, non video, hardly see how their opinion can quomodo ipsorum sententia possit bear examination. For, as Pererius subsistere; tum quia, ut optime truly observes in his Commentary on opinatur Pererius, tom. 2, in Genes., the Genesis, chapt. 6, the whole cap. 6, disp. 5, tota vis et efficacia strength and efficiency of the human humani seminis consistit in sperm reside in the spirits which spiritibus, qui difflantur, et evaporate and vanish as soon as evanescunt statim ac sunt extra issued from the genital vessels genitalia vasa, a quibus foventur et wherein they were warmly stored:

conservantur, ut scribunt Medici. all medical men agree on that point.
Nequit proinde Dæmon semen It is consequently not possible that acceptum conservare, ita ut aptum the Demon should preserve in a fit sit generationi, quia vas, state for generation the sperm he has quodcumque sit illud, in quo semen received; for it were necessary that conservare tentaret, oporteret quod whatever vessel he endeavoured to caleret calore assimetro a nativo keep it in should be equally warm organorum humanæ generationis; with the human genital organs, the similarem enim a nullo alio warmth of which is nowhere to be præterquam ab organis ipsis habere met with but in those organs potest generatio. Tum quia themselves. Now, in a vessel where generatio actus vitalis est, per quem that warmth is not intrinsic but homo generans de propria extraneous, the spirits get altered, substantia semen defert per organa and no generation can take place. naturalia ad locum generationi There is this other objection, that congruentem. In casu autem de latiori generation is a vital act by which seminis non potest esse actus vitalis man, begetting from his own hominis generantis, quia ab eo non substance, carries the sperm through infertur in matricem; proinde nec natural organs to the spot which is dici potest, quod homo ejus est appropriate to generation. On the semen, generet fætum, qui ex eo contrary, in this particular case, the nascitur. Neque Incubus ipsius pater introduction of sperm cannot be a dici potest; quia de ipsius substantia vital act of the man who begets, semen non est. Hinc fiet, quod since it is not carried into the womb nascetur homo, cujus nemo pater sit, by his agency; and, for the same quod est incongruum. Tum quia in cause, it cannot be said that the man, patre naturaliter generante duplex whose sperm it was, has begotten causalitas concurrit, nempe the fetus which proceeds from it. materialis, quia semen, quod Nor can the Incubus be deemed its materia generationis, ministrat, et father, since the sperm does not efficiens, quia agens principale est issue from his own substance. in generatione, ut communiter Consequentially, a child would be statuunt Philosophi. In casu autem born without a father, which is nostro homo ministrando solum absurd. Third objection: when the semen, puram materiam exhiberet father begets in the course of nature, absque ulla actione in ordine ad there is a concurrence of two generationem; proinde non posset causalities: the one, material, for he dici pater filii qui nasceretur: et hoc provides the sperm which is the est contra id, quod homo genitus ab matter of generation; the other, Incubo non est illius filius, sed est efficient, for he is the principal filius ejus viri, a quo Incubus semen agent of generation, as Philosophers sumpsit.

agree in declaring. But, in this case, the man who only provided the sperm would contribute but a mere material, without any action tending to generation; he could therefore not be regarded as the father of the child begotten under those circumstances; and this is opposed to the notion that the child begotten by an Incubus is not his son, but the son of the man whose sperm the Incubus has taken.

32. Præterea omni probabilitate 32. Besides, there is not a shadow of caret quod scribit Vallesius, et ex eo probability in what written by recitavimus supra n^o 30; mirorque a Vallesius and quoted from him by us doctissimi viri calamo talia (Vide supra n^o 30); and I wonder excidisse. Notissimum enim est apud that any thing so extravagant should Physicos, quod magnitudo fœtus non have fallen from the pen of such a est a quantitate molis, sed est a learned man. Medical men are well quantitate virtutis, hoc est spirituum aware that the size of the fetus in semine: ab ea enim tota depends, not indeed on the quantity generationis ratio dependet, ut of matter, but on the quantity of optime testatur Michael Ettmullerus, virtue, that is to say of spirits held Instit. Medic. Physiolog., car. 22, by the sperm; there lies the whole thes. 1, fol. m., 39, scribens: Totas secret of generation, as is well generationis ratio dependet a spiritu observed by Michael Ettmuller, genitali sub crassioris materiæ Institut. Medic. Physiolog.: involucro excreto; ista materia “Generation”, says he, “entirely seminis crassa nullo modo, vel in depends upon the genital spirit utero subsistente, vel seu materia contained within an envelope of fœtum constituyente: sed solus thicker matter; that spermatic matter spiritus genitalis maris unitus cum does not remain in the uterus, and spiritu genitali mulieris in poro has no share in the formation of the uteri, seu, quod rarius fit, in tubo fetus; it is but the genital spirit of uteri se insinuat, indeque uterum the male, combined with the genital fecundum reddit. Quid ergo facere spirit of the female, that permeates potest magna quantitas seminis ad the pores, or, less frequently, the fœtus magnitudinem? Præterea nectubes of the uterus, which it semper verum est, quod tales geniti fecundates by that means.” Of what ab Incubis magnitudine molis moment can therefore the quantity corporeæ insignes sint: Alexander of sperm be for the size of the fetus? enim Magnus, qui, ut diximus, natus Besides, it is not always a fact that taliter scribitur, statura pusillus men thus begotten by Incubi are erat; unde carmen, remarkable for the huge proportions of their body: Alexander the Great, for instance, who is said to have been thus born, as we have mentioned, was very short; as the poet said of him:

Magnus Alexander corpore parvus Magnus Alexander corpore parvus erat. erat.

Item quamvis taliter concepti supra Besides, although it is generally a cæteros homines excellant, non fact that those who are thus begotten tamen hoc semper est in vitiis, sed excel other men, yet such aliquando in virtutibus etiam in superiority is not always shown by moralibus, ut patet in Scipione their vices, but sometimes by their Africano, Cæsare Augusto, et virtues and even their morals; Scipio Platone Philosopho, de quibus Africanus, for instance, Cæsar Livius, Suetonius et Laertius Augustus and Plato the Philosopher, respective scribunt, quod optimi in as is recorded of each of them moribus fuere; ut proinde argueret respectively by Livy, Suetonius and possimus, quod si alii eodem modo Diogenes Laertius, had excellent geniti pessimi fuere, hoc non fuerit morals. Whence may be inferred ex hoc, quod fuerint ab Incubo that, if other individuals begotten in geniti, sed quia tales ex proprio the same way have been downright arbitrio exstitere.

villains, it was not owing to their being born of an Incubus, but to their having, of their own free will, chosen to be such.

Pariter ex textu Sacræ Scripturæ, We also read in the Testament, Gen., c. 6, v. 4, habemus quod Genesis, chap. 6, verse 4, that giants gigantes nati sunt ex concubitu were born when the sons of God filiorum Dei cum filiabus hominum, came in unto the daughters of men: et hoc ad litteram sacri textus. that is the very letter of the sacred Gigantes autem homines erant text. Now, those giants were men of statura magna, ut eos vocat Baruch, great stature, says Baruch, chap. 3, c. 3, v. 26, et excedente communem verse 26, and far superior to other hominum proceritatem. Monstruosam men. Not only were they statura, robore, latrociniis, et distinguished by their huge size, but tyrannide insignes: unde Gigantes also by their physical power, their per sua scelera fuerunt maxima, et plundering habits and their tyranny. potissima causa Diluvii, ait Through their criminal excesses the Cornelius a Lapid. in Gen., c. 6, v. Giants were the primary and 4, § Burgensis. Non quadrat autem principal cause of the Flood, quorumdam expositio, quod nomine according to Cornelius a Lapide, in filiorum Dei veniant filii Seth, et this Commentary on Genesis. Some vocabulo filiarum hominum filia contend that by Sons of God are Cain, eo quod illi erant pietati, meant the sons of Seth, and by Religioni, et cæteris virtutibus Daughters of men the daughters of addicti, descendentes autem a Cain Cain, because the former practiced vice versa: nam salva opinantium, piety, religion and every other Chrysost., Cyrill., Theodor. Rupert. virtue, whilst the descendants of Ab. et Hilar. in Psalm. 132, apud Cain were quite the reverse; but, Cornel., a Lap., c. 6; G., v. 2, § with all due deference to Verum dies, reverentia, talis Chrysostom, Cyrillus, Hilarius and expositio non cohæret sensui patenti others who are of that opinion, it litteræ; ait enim Scriptura, quod ex must be conceded that it clashes conjunctione talium nati sunt with the obvious meaning of the homines monstruosæ proceritatis text. Scripture says, in fact, that of corporeæ: ante illam ergo tale the conjunction of the above gigantes non extiterunt: quod si ex mentioned were born men of huge ea orti sunt, hoc non potuit esse ex bodily size: consequently, those eo, quod filii Seth coivissent cum giants were not previously in filiabus Cain, quia illi erant staturæ existence, and if their birth was the ordinariæ, prout etiam filia Cain, result of that conjunction, it cannot unde oriri ex his naturaliter non be ascribed to the intercourse of the potuerunt nisi filii staturæ sons of Seth with the daughters of ordinariæ: si ergo monstruosa Cain, who being themselves of statura filii nati sunt ex tali ordinary stature, could but procreate conjunctione, hoc fuit, quia non children of ordinary stature. fuerunt prognati ex ordinaria Therefore, if the intercourse in conjunctione viri cum muliere, sed question gave birth to beings of ex Incubis dæmonibus qui ratione huge stature, the reason is that it was naturæ ipsorum optime possunt not the common connection between vocari filii Dei, et in hac sententia man and woman, but the sunt Philosophi Platonici, et performance of Incubi Demons who, Franciscus Georgius Venetus, tom. from their nature, may very well be 1, problem. 74: nec dissentiunt ab styled sons of God. Such is the eadem Joseph. Hebræus, Philo opinion of the Platonist Judæus, S. Justinus Martyr, Clemens Philosophers and of Francis Georges Alexandrinus, et Tertullianus, the Venetian; nor is it discrepant Joseph. Hebræus, Antiq., l. 1.; from that of Josephus the Historian, Philo, l. de Gigant.; S. Justinus M., Philo the Jew, S. Justinus the Apolog. 1.; Clemens Alex., lib. 3; Martyr, Clement of Alexandria, and Tertull., lib. de Habit. Mul., apud Tertullian, who look upon Incubi as Cornel., loc. cit.; Hugo de S. Victor., corporeal Angels who have allowed Annot. in Gen., c. 6, qui opinantur themselves to fall into the sin of illos fuisse Angelos quosnam lewdness with women. Indeed, as corporeos qui in luxuriam cum shall be shown hereafter, though mulieribus delapsi sunt: ut enim seemingly distinct, those two infra ostendemus, istæ duæ opinions are but one and the same. sententiæ in unam et eandem conveniunt.

33. Si ergo Incubi tales, ut fert 33. If therefore these Incubi, in communis sententia, Gigantes conformity with general belief, have genuerunt, accepto semine ab begotten Giants by means of sperm homine, juxta id, quod supra dictum taken from man, it is impossible, as est, non potuerunt ex illo semine aforesaid, that of that sperm should nasci nisi homines ejusdem staturæ have been born any but men of plus minusve, cum eo a quo semen approximately the same size as he acceptum est: nec enim facit ad from whom it came; for it would be altiores corporis staturam major in vain for the Demon, when acting seminis quantitas, ita ut attracta the part of a Succubus, to draw from insolite a Dæmone, dum Succubus man an unwonted quantity of fit homini, augeat ultra illius prolific liquor in order to procreate staturam enormiter corpus ab eo therefrom children of higher stature; geniti; quia, ut supra diximus, hoc quantity has nothing to do here, residet in spiritu, et non in mole since all depends, as we have said, seminis: ut proinde necesse sit upon the vitality of that liquor, not concludere, quod ab alio semine, its quantity. We are therefore bound quam humano, hujusmodi gigante to infer that Giants are born of nati sint, et proinde Dæmon Incubus another sperm than man's, and that, non humano, sed alio semine utatur consequently, the Incubus Demon, ad generationem. Quid igitur for the purpose of generation, uses a dicendum? sperm which is not man's. But then, what is to be said?

34. Quantum ad hoc, sub 34. Subject to correction by our correctione Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ, Holy Mother Church, and as a mere et mere opinative dico, Incubum expression of opinion, I say that the Dæmonem, dum mulieribus Incubus Demon, when having commiscetur, ex proprio ipsius intercourse with women, begets the semine hominem generare. human fetus from his own sperm.

35. Paradoxa in fide, et parum sana 35. To many that proposition will nonnullis videbitur hæc opinio; sed seem heterodox and hardly sensible; lectorem meum deprecor, ut but I beg of my reader not to judicium non præcipitet de ea: ut condemn it precipitately; for if, as enim incivile est nondum tota lege Celsus says, it is improper to deliver perspecta judicare, ut Celsus, lib. judgment without having thoroughly 24. ff. de legib. et S. C., ait, ita inquired into the law, no less unfair neque damnanda est opinio, nisi is the rejection of an opinion, before prius examinatis, ac solutis the arguments upon which it rests argumentis, quibus innititur. Ad have been weighed and confuted. I probandam igitur supradatam have therefore to prove the above conclusionem, nonnulla sunt conclusion, and must necessarily necessario præmittenda. premise with some statements.

36. Præmittendum primo de fide est, 36. Firstly, I premise, as an article of quod dentur Creaturæ pure belief, that there are purely spiritual spirituales nullo modo de materia creatures, not in any way partaking corporea participantes, prout of corporeal matter, as was ruled by habetur ex Concilio Lateranensi, the Council of Lateran, under the sub Innocentio Tertio, c. Firm. de pontificate of Innocent III. Such are Sum. Trin. et Fid. Cath. Conc. Eph. the blessed Angels, and the Demons in Epist. Cyrill. ad Reggia, et alibi. condemned to ever-lasting fire. Hujusmodi autem sunt Angeli beati, Some Doctors, it is true, have et Dæmones damnati ad ignem professed, subsequently even to this perpetuum. Quamvis vero nonnulli Council, that the spirituality of Doctores, Bann. par. 1. q. 5. ar. 1. Angels and Demons is not an article Can. de Loc. Theol. l. 5. c. 5. Sixt. of belief; others even have asserted seu Bibliot. San. l. 5. annot. 8., that they are corporeal, whence Mirand. Sum. Concil. vº. Angelus, Bonaventure Baron has drawn the Molina, p. 1. q. 50., a. 1., Carranz., conclusion that it is neither heretical Annot. ad Synod. 7., etiam post nor erroneous to ascribe to Angels Concilium illud docuerint and Demons a twofold substance, spiritualitatem Angelorum et corporeal and spiritual. Yet, the Dæmonum non esse de fide, ita ut Council having formally declared it nonnulli alii, Bonav. in lib. 2. sent. to be an article of belief that God is dist. 3. q. 1., Scot. de Anim. q. 15., the maker of all things visible and Cajet. in Gen. c. 4., Franc. Georg. invisible, spiritual and corporeal, Problem. l. 2. c. 57., August. Hyph., who has raised from nothing every de Dæmon., l. 3. c. 3., scripserint creature spiritual or corporeal, illos esse corporeos, et proinde Angelic or terrestrial, I contend it is Angelos Dæmonesque corpore et an article of belief that there are spiritu constare non esse certain merely spiritual creatures, propositionem hæreticam, neque and that such are Angels; not all of erroneam, probet Bonaventura them, but a certain number.

Baro, Scot. Defens. tom. 9. apolog.
2., act. 1., p. § 7.: tamen quia Concilium ipsum statuit de fide tenendum, Deum esse Creatorem omnium visibilium et invisibilium, spiritualium et corporalium, qui utramque de nihilo condidit creaturam spiritualem et corporalem Angelicam, videlicet ut mundanam: ideo dico de fide esse quasdam creaturas dari mere spirituales, et tales esse Angelos, non quidem omnes, sed quosdam.

37. Inaudita forsan erit sententia 37. It may seem strange, yet it must hæc, sed non destituta erit be admitted not to be unlikely. If, in probabilitate. Si enim a Theologis fact, Theologians concur in tanta inter Angelos diversitas establishing amongst Angels a specifica, et proinde essentialis specific, and therefore essential, statuitur, ut in via D. Thomæ, p. p. diversity so considerable that, 50, ar. 4, plures Angeli nequeant according to St. Thomas, there are esse in eadem specie, sed quilibet not two Angels of the same species, Angelus propriam speciem but that each of them is a species by constituat, profecto nulla invenitur himself, why should not certain repugnantia, quod Angelorum Angels be most pure spirits, of a nonnulli sint purissimi spiritus, et consequently very superior nature, proinde excellentissimæ naturæ, alii and others corporeal, therefore of a autem corporei, et minus less perfect nature, differing thus excellentes, et eorum differentia from each other in their corporeal or petatur per corporeum et incorporeal substance? This doctrine incorporeum. Accedit quod ha has the advantage of solving the sententia facile solvitur alias otherwise insoluble contradiction insolubilis contradictio inter duob between two Œcumenical Councils, Concilia Œcumenica, nempe namely the Seventh General Synod Septimam Synodum generalem, et and the above-mentioned Council of dictum Concilium Lateranense: Lateran. For, during the fifth sitting siquidem in illa Synodo, quæ est of that Synod, the second of Nicea, a secunda Nicæna, actione quinta, book was introduced written by productus est liber Joannis John of Thessalonica against a Thessalonicensis scriptus contra pagan Philosopher, wherein occur quemdam Philosophum gentilem, in the following propositions: quo ita habetur: De Angelis et “Respecting Angels, Archangels and Archangelis, atque eorum their Powers, to which I adjoin our Potestatibus, quibus nostras Animas own Souls, the Catholic Church is adjungo, ipsa Catholica Ecclesia sic really of opinion that they are sentit, esse quidem intelligibiles, sed intelligences, but not entirely non omnino corporis expertes, et bodyless and senseless, as you insensibiles, ut vos Gentiles dicitis, Gentiles aver; she on the contrary verum tenui corpore præditos, et ascribes to them a subtile body, aereo, sive igneo, sicut scriptum est: aerial or igneous, according to what qui facit Angelos suos spiritus, et is written: He makes the spirits His ministros suos ignem urentem. Et Angels, and the burning fire His infra: Quamquam autem non sint ut Minister". And further on:

nos, corporei, utpote ex quatuor "Although not corporeal in the same elementis, nemo tamen vel Angelos, way as ourselves, made of the four vel Dæmones, vel Animas dixerit elements, yet it is impossible to say incorporeas: multoties enim in that Angels, Demons and Souls are proprio corpore visi sunt ab illis, incorporeal; for they have been seen quibus Dominus oculos aperuit. Et many a time, invested with their own cum omnia lecta fuissent coram body, by those whose eyes the Lord Patribus synodaliter congregatis, had opened". And after that book Tharasius, Patriarcha had been read through before all the Constantinopolitanus, poposcit Fathers in Council assembled, ad probationem Sanctæ Synodi his Tharasius, the Patriarch of verbis: Ostendit Pater, quod Angelos Constantinople, submitted it to the pingi oporteat, quoniam approval of the Council, with these circumscribi possunt, et ut homines words: "The Father showeth that apparuerunt. Synodus autem uno ore Angels should be pictured, since respondit: Etiam, Domine. their form can be defined, and they have been seen in the shape of men". Without a dissentient, the Synod answered: "Yes, my Lord".

38. Hanc autem Conciliarem 38. That this approbation by a ad probationem de materia ad Council of the doctrine set forth at longum pertractata a D. Joanne in length in the book of John libro coram Patribus lecto, statuere establishes an article of belief with articulum fidei circa corporeitatem regard to the corporeity of Angels, Angelorum, perspicuum est: unde ad there is not a shadow of doubt: so tollendam contradictionem hujus, Theologians toil and moil in order to cum allata definitione Concilii remove the contradiction apparent Lateranensis, multum desudant between that decision and the Theologi. Unus enim, Suarez, de definition, above quoted, by the Angelis, ait, quod Patres non Council of Lateran. One of them, contradixerunt tali asserto de Suarez, says that if the Fathers did corporeitate Angelorum, quia non not disprove such an assertion of the de illa re agebatur. Alius, Bann., in corporeity of Angels, it is because p. p. q. 10, ait, quod Synodus that was not the question. Another adprobavit conclusionem, nempe contends that the Synod did approve

Angelos pingi posse, non tamen the conclusion, namely that Angels adprobavit rationem, quia corporei might be pictured, but not the sunt. Alius, Molin., in p. p., q. 50. a. motive given, their corporeity. A 1, ait, quod definitiones Conciliarum third, Molina, observes that the in illa Synodo factæ sunt solum definitions issued in Council by the actione septima, proinde ea quæ Synod were thus issued only at the habentur in actionibus seventh sitting, whence he argues præcedentibus non esse definitiones that those of the previous sittings are de fide. Alii, Joverc. et Mirand., not definitions of belief. Others, Sum. Conc., scribunt nec Nicænum, lastly, write that neither the Council nec Lateranense Concilium of Nicea nor that of Lateran intendisse definire de fide intended defining a question of quæstionem; et Nicænum quidem belief, the Council of Nicea having locutum fuisse juxta opinionem spoken according to the opinion of Platoniorum, quæ ponit Angelos the Platonists, which describes corporeos, et tunc prævalebat; Angels as corporeal beings and was Lateranense autem locutum esse then prevailing, whilst that of juxta mentem Aristotelis, qui, l. 12. Lateran went with Aristoteles, who, Metaphys., tex. 49, ponit in his 12th. book of Metaphysics, intelligentias incorporeas, quæ lays down the existence of sententia contra Platonicos apud incorporeal intelligences, a doctrine plerosque Doctores invaluit expost. which has since carried the day with most Doctors over the Platonists.

39. Sed quam frigidæ sint istæ 39. But any one can discern the responsiones nemo non videt, ac eas invalidity of those answers, and minime satisfacere oppositioni Bonaventure Baro (Scot. Defens., palmariter demonstrat Bonaventura tome 9) proves to evidence that they Baro, Scot. Defens., tom. 9, apolog. do not bear. In consequence, in 2, actio 1, § 2 per totum. Proinde ad order to agree the two Councils, we tollendam contradictionem must say that the Council of Nicea Conciliorum dicendum est, meant one species of Angels, and Nicænum locutum esse de una, that of Lateran another: the former, Lateranense autem de alia specie corporeal, the latter on the contrary Angelorum, et illam quidem absolutely incorporeal; and thus are corpoream, hanc vero penitus reconciled two otherwise incorpoream; et sic conciliantur irreconcilable Councils. aliter irreconciliabilia Concilia.

40. Præmittendum 2º, nomen Angeli 40. Secondly, I premise that the esse nomen officii, non naturæ, ut word Angel applies, not indeed to concorditer scribunt S. S. Patres: the kind, but to the office: the Holy Ambros. in c. 1 epist. ad Hebr., Fathers are agreed thereupon (St. Hilaris, l. 5 de Trin., Augustinus, lib. Ambrose, on the Epistle to the 15 de Civit. Dei c. 23, Gregorius, Hebrews; St. Austin, City of God; Hom. 34 in Evang., Isidorus, l. de St. Gregory, Homily 34 on Scripture; Sum. Bonit., c. 12; unde præclare St. Isidorus, Supreme Goodness). An ait D. Ambrosius: Angelus non ex eo Angel, very truly says St. Ambrose, quod est spiritus, ex eo quod agit, is thus styled, not because he is a Angelus, quia Angelus Græce, spirit, but on account of his office; Latine Nuntius dicitur, sequitur Ἀγγελος in Greek, Nuntius in Latin, igitur ex hoc, quod illi, qui ad that is to say Messenger; it follows aliquod ministerium a Deo that whoever is entrusted by God mittuntur, sive spiritus sint, sive with a mission, be he spirit or man, homines, Angeli vocari possunt; et may be called an Angel, and is thus de facto ita vocantur in Scripturis called in the Holy Scriptures, where Sacris: nam de Sacerdotibus, the following words are applied to Concionatoribus ac Doctoribus, qui Priests, Preachers and Doctors, who, tanquam Nuntii Dei explicant as Messengers of God, explain to hominibus divinam voluntatem, men the divine will (Malachi, chapt. dicitur, Malach. c. 2. v. 7: Labia 2, v. 7). “The priest’s lips should Sacerdotis custodient scientiam, et keep knowledge, and they should legem requirent ex ore ejus, qui seek the law at his mouth, for he is Angelus Domini exercituum est. D. the Angel of the Lord of Hosts.” The Joannes Baptista ab eodem same prophet, chapt. 3, v. 1, bestows Propheta, c. 3 v. 1, vocatur Angelus, the name of Angel on St. John the dum ait: Ecce ego mitto Angelum Baptist, when saying: “Behold, I will meum, et præparabit viam ante send my Angel and he shall prepare faciem meam. Et hanc prophetiam the way before me.” That this esse ad litteram de S. Joanne prophecy literally applies to St. John Baptista testatur Christus Dominus the Baptist is testified by our Lord in Evangelio Matthæi, 11, v. 10. Jesus-Christ, in the Gospel, Immo et ipse Deus, quia fuit missus according to St. Matthew, chapt. 11, a Patre in mundum ad v. 10. Still more: God himself is evangelizandum legem gratiæ, called an Angel, because he has vocatur Angelus. Ita in prophetia been sent by His Father to herald the corporeal, since men, who assuredly have a body, are called Angels.

Isaiæ, c. 9 v. 6, juxta versionem law of mercy. To witness, the Septuaginta: Vocabitur nomen ejus prophecy of Isaiah, chapt. 9, v. 6, magni consilii Angelus, et clarius in according to Septuagint: “He shall Malachiæ c. 3 v. 1: Veniet ad be called an Angel of Wonderful templum sanctum suum Dominator Counsel.” And more plainly still in quem vos quæritis, et Angelus Malachi, chapt. 3, v. 1; “The Lord testamenti quem vos vultis. Quæ whom ye seek shall suddenly come prophetia ad litteram est de Christo to his temple, even the Angel of the Domino. Sequitur igitur nullum covenant whom ye delight in”, a absurdum sequi ex hoc, quod prophecy which literally applies to dicimus Angelos quosdam esse our Lord Jesus-Christ. There is corporeos, nam et homines, qui consequently nothing absurd in the corpore constant, Angeli vocabulo contention that some Angels are efferuntur.

41. Præmittendum 3º, nondum 41. Thirdly, I premise that neither rerum naturalium, quæ sunt in the existence nor the nature of the mundo, satis perspectam esse natural things in this world has been existentiam, aut naturam, ut proinde sufficiently investigated to allow of aliquid negandum sit ex eo, quod de denying a fact, merely because it has illo nunquam alias dictum, aut never been previously spoken of or scriptum fuerit. Patet enim tractu written about. In the course of time temporis detectas esse novas terras, have not new lands been discovered quas Antiqui nostri ignorarunt, which the Ancients knew not of? novæque animalia, herbas, plantas, New animals, herbs, plants, fruits fructus, semina nunquam alias visa; and seeds, never seen elsewhere? et si pervia esset Terra Australis And if that mysterious Austral land incognita, cujus indagatio, et came at last to be explored, as has lustratio a multis hucusque been to this day vainly tried by so incassum tentata est, adhuc nova many travellers, what unforeseen nobis alia panderentur. Patet adhuc, disclosures would be the result! quod per inventionem microscopii, Through the invention of the et alias machinas, et organa microscope and other instruments Philosophiæ experimentalis used by modern experimental modernæ, sicut etiam per Philosophy, combined with the more exactionem indaginem exact methods of investigation of Anatomistarum, multarum rerum Anatomists, have there not been, naturalium existentiam, vires, and are there not, every day, brought naturamque tum innotuisse, tum to light the existence, qualities and dietim innotescere, quæ præcedentes characteristics of a number of Philosophi ignorarunt, ut patet in natural things unknown to ancient auro fulminante, phosphoro, et Philosophers, such as fulminating centum aliis chymicis experimentis, gold, phosphorus, and a hundred circulatione sanguinis, venis lacteis, other chemical compounds, the vasis lymphaticis, et aliis hujusmodi circulation of the blood, the lacteal quæ nuper Anatomistæ vessels, the lymph-ducts and other ad invenerunt. Proinde ineptum erit recent anatomical discoveries? To aliquod exsibillare ex hoc quod de deride a doctrine because it does not eo nullus Antiquorum scripserit, happen to be mentioned in any attento maxime Logicorum ancient author would therefore be axiomatic, quod locus ab auctoritate absurd, especially bearing in mind negativa non tenet. this axiom of Logic: locus ab auctoritate negativa non tenet.

42. Præmittendum 4º, quod in Sacra 42. Fourthly, I premise that Holy Scriptura, et Ecclesiasticis Scripture and ecclesiastical tradition traditionibus non traditur nisi id, do not teach us any thing beyond quod ad animæ salutem what is requisite for the salvation of necessarium est, quoad credendum, the soul, namely Faith, Hope and sperandum et amandum; unde Charity. Consequently, from a thing inferre non licet ex eo, quod nec ex not being stated either by Scripture Scriptura, nec ex traditione aliquod or tradition it must not be inferred habetur, proinde negandum sit, quod that that thing is not in existence. illud tale existat: aut nos quidem For instance, Faith teaches us that Fides docet, Deum per Verbum God, by His Word, made things suum omnia creasse visibilia, et visible, and invisible, and also that, invisibilia; pariterque ex Jesu through the merits of our Lord Christi Domini nostri meritis tum Jesus-Christ, grace and glory are gratiam, tum gloriam omni, et cui vis conferred on every rational creature. rationali creaturæ conferri. Num Now, that there be another World autem alius Mundus a nostro, quem than the one we live in, and that it incolimus, sit, et in eo alii homines be peopled by men not born of non ab Adam prognati, sed alio Adam but made by God, in some modo a Deo creati existant (sicut other way, as is implied by those ponunt illi qui lunarem globum who believe the lunar globe to be habitationem opinantur); pariterque inhabitat; or further, that in the very num in hoc Mundo, quem incolimus, World we dwell in, there be other aliæ existant creaturæ rationales rational creatures besides man and ultra homines, et Spiritus Angelicos, the Angelic Spirits, creatures quæ regulariter hominibus sint generally invisible to us and whose invisibiles, et per accidens, et earum being is disclosed but accidentally, executiva potentia fiant visibiles: through the instrumentality of their hoc nullo modo spectat ad fidem, et own power; all that has nothing to hoc scire, aut ignorare non est addo with Faith, and the knowledge or salutem hominis necessarium, sicut ignorance thereof is no more nec scire rerum omnium physicarum necessary to the salvation of man numerum aut naturam. than knowing the number or nature of all physical things.

43. Præmittendum 5º, nullam 43. Fifthly, I premise that neither inveniri repugnantiam, nec in Philosophy nor Theology is Philosophia, nec in Theologia; quod repugnant to the possible existence dari possint creaturæ rationales of rational creatures having spirit constantes spiritu et corpore, aliæ and body and distinct from man. ab homine, quia si esset Such repugnance could be supported repugnantia, hoc esset vel ex parte only on God, and that is Dei (et hoc non quia ipse inadmissible, since he is all-mighty, omnipotens est), vel ex parte rei or on the thing to be made, and that creabilis; et neque hoc, quia sicut likewise cannot be supported; for, as creatura mere spiritualis, ut Angeli, there are purely spiritual creatures, creata est, et mere materialis, ut such as Angels, or merely material, Mundus, et partim spiritualis, such as the World, or lastly semipartim corporea, corporeitate spiritual and semi-corporeal, of an terrestri, et crassa, ut homo, ita earthly and gross corporeity, such as creabilis est creatura constans man, so there may well be in spiritu rationali, et corporeitate existence a creature endowed with a minus crassa, sed subtiliore, quam rational spirit and a corporeity less sit homo. Et profecto post gross, more subtile than man's. No Resurrectionem anima Beatorum doubt, moreover, but that after erit unita corpori glorioso dote Resurrection, the souls of the subtilitatis donato: ut proinde blessed will be united with a concludi posset, potuisse Deum glorious and subtile body; from creare creaturam rationalem which may be inferred that God may corpoream, cui naturaliter indita sit well have made a rational and corporis subtilitas, sicut per gratiam corporeal creature whose body corpori glorioso confertur. naturally enjoys the subtilty which will be conferred by the grace on the glorious body.

44. Astruitur autem magis talium 44. But, the possible existence of creaturarum possibilitas exsuch creatures will be still better set solutione argumentorum, quæ forth by solving the arguments contra positam conclusionem fieri which can be adduced against our possunt, pariterque ex responsione conclusion, and replying to the ad interrogationes, quæ possunt questions it may raise. circa eam formari.

45. Prima interrogatio est, an tales 45. First question: should such creaturæ dicendæ essent animalia creatures be styled rational animals? rationalia? Quod si sic, quomodo And if so, in what do they differ different ab homine, cum quo from man, with whom they would communem haberent definitionem? have that definition in common?

46. Respondeo quod essent animalia 46. I reply: Yes, they would be rationalia sensibus et organis rational animals, provided with corporis prædita, sicut homo: senses and organs even as man; they different autem ab homine non would, however, differ from man solum ratione corporis tenuioris, not only in the more subtile nature, sed etiam materiæ. Homo siquidem but also in the matter of their body.
ex crassiore elementorum omnium In fact, as is shown by Scripture, parte, puta ex luto, nempe aqua et man has been made from the terra crassa formatus est, ut constat grossest of all elements, namely ex Scriptura, Gen. 2. v. 7.; ista vero clay, a gross mixture of water and formata essent ex subtiliore parte earth: but those creatures would be omnium, aut unius, seu alterius made from the most subtile part of elementorum; ut proinde alia essent all elements, or of one or other of terrea, alia aquea, alia aerea, et alia them; thus, some would proceed ignea; et ut eorum definitio cum from earth, others from water, or air, hominis definitione non conveniret, or fire; and, in order that they should addendum esset definitioni hominis not be defined in the same terms as crassa materialitas sui corporis, per man, to the definition of the latter quam a dictis animalibus differret. should be added the mention of the gross materiality of his body, wherein he would differ from said animals.

47. Secunda interrogatio est, 47. Second question: At what period quandonam hujus modi animalia would those animals have been fuissent condita, et num cum brutis originated, and wherefrom? From producta a terra, aut ab aqua, ut earth, like the beasts, or from water, quadrupedia, et aves respective; an like quadrupeds, birds, etc.? Or, on vero a Domino Deo formata, ut fuit the contrary, would they have been homo? made, like man, by our Lord God?

48. Respondeo quod de fide est, 48. I reply: It is an article of belief, quod posito, quod existant de facto, expressly laid down by the Council creata sint a principio Mundi: sic of Lateran, that whatever is in fact enim definitur a Concilio and at present, was made in the Lateranensi (Firm. de sum. Trinit. et origin of the world. By His all-fide cathol.); nempe quod Deus sua mighty virtue, God, from the omnipotenti virtute simul ab initio beginning of time, raised together temporis utramque de nihilo from nothing both orders of condidit creaturam, spiritualem et creatures, spiritual and corporeal. corporalem. Sub illa etenim Now, those animals also would be Creaturarum generalitate etiam illa included in the generality of animalia essent comprehensa. Quo creatures. As to their formation, it vero ad eorum formationem, might be said that God Himself, decuisset ipsorum corpus a Deo through the medium of Angels, ministerio Angelorum formatum made their body as he did man's, to fuisse, sicut a Deo formatum which an immortal spirit was to be legimus corpus hominis, quia ipsi united. That body being of a nobler copulandus erat spiritus immortalis, nature than that of other animals, it quandoquidem spiritus incorporeus was meet that it should be united to et proinde nobilissimus corporis an incorporeal and highly noble pariter originaliter nobiliori cæteris spirit. brutis jungendus erat.

49. Tertia interrogatio, an talia 49. Third question: Would those animalia habuissent originem ab animals descend from one uno solo, velut omnes homines ab individual, as all men descend from Adam, an vero plura simul formata Adam, or, on the contrary, would essent sicut fuit de cæteris many have been made at the same animantibus a terra et aqua time, as was the case for the other productis, in quibus fuerunt mares et living things issued from earth and fæminæ quæ speciem per water, wherein were males and generationem conservant? Et si hoc females for the preservation of the oporteret inter talia animalia esse kind by generation? Would there be distinctionem sexus; ipsa nasci, et amongst them a distinction between interire; passionibus sensus affici, the sexes? Would they be subject to nutriri, crescere; et tunc quo birth and death, to senses, passions, alimento vescerentur, esset want of food, power of growth? If quærendum; præterea an vitam so, what their nutrition? Would they socialem ducerent, ut homines; qua lead a social life, as men do? By politica regerentur; num urbes ad what laws ruled? Would they build habitandum struxissent; num artes, up cities for their dwellings, studia, possessiones, et bella inter cultivate the arts and sciences, hold ea essent, sicut est in hominibus. property, and wage war between themselves, as men are wont to?

50. Respondeo: potuit esse quod 50. I reply: It may be that all omnia ab uno, velut homines ab descend from one individual, as men Adam, sint progenita; potuit pariter descend from Adam; it may be also esse, quod ex iis multi mares, et that a number of males and females plures fæminæ fuissent formatae, a were made initially, who preserved quibus per generationem eorum their kind by generation. We will species essent propagatae. Ultro further admit that they are born and admitteremus talia animalia oriri et die; that they are divided into males mori; mares alios, alias fæminas and females, and are moved by inter ea esse; passionibus, sensibus senses and passions, as men are; that agitari velut homines; nutriri et they feed and grow according to the crescere secundum molem sui size of their body; their food, corporis; cibum autem ipsorum non however, instead of being gross like crassum qualem requirit crassities that required by the human body, corporis humani, sed substantiam must be delicate and vapoury, tenuem et vaporosam emanantem emanating through spirituous per effluvia spirituosa a rebus effluvia from whatever in the physicis pollentibus corpusculis physical world abounds with highly maxime volatilibus, ut nidus volatile corpuscles, such as the carnium maxime assatarum, vapor flavour of meats, especially of vini, fructuum, florum, aromatum, aroasts, the fume of wine, the quibus copiosa hujusmodi effluvia fragrancy of fruit, flowers, usque ad totalem partiumaromatics, which evolve an subtiliorum ac volatiliumabundance of those effluvia until all evaporationem scaturiunt. Taliatheir subtile and volatile parts have autem animalia civilem vitamcompletely evaporated. To their ducere posse, et inter ea distinctosbeing able to lead a social life, with esse gradus dominantium acdistinctions of rank and precedence; servientium pro conditione naturæto their cultivating the arts and ipsorum, artesque, scientias,sciences, exercising functions, ministeria, exercitia, loca,maintaining armies, building up mansiones, ac alia necessaria adcities, doing in short whatever is eorum conservationem, nullamrequisite for their preservation, I penitus importat repugnantiam. have in the main no objection.

51. Quarta interrogatio est, qualis51. Fourth question: What would esset eorum corporis figuratio, antheir figure be, human or otherwise? humanam, an aliam formam, etWould the ordering of the divers qualem habent, et an partesparts of their body be essential, as corporis ipsorum habent ordinemwith other animals, or merely essentialem inter se, ut corporaaccidental, as with fluid substances, cæterorum animalium, an verosuch as oil, water, clouds, smoke, accidentalem tantum, ut corporaetc.? Would those organic parts fluidarum substantiarum, ut olei,consist of various substances, as is aquæ, nubis, fumi, etc.; et numthe case with the organs of the substantiæ suarum partiumhuman body, wherein are to be organicarum diversimodefound very gross parts, such as the constarent, ut organa hominum, inbones, others less gross, such as the quibus sunt aliæ partes crassissimæ,cartilages, and others slender, such ut ossa, aliæ minus crassæ, utas the membranes? cartilagines, aliæ tenues, ut membranæ.

52. Respondeo, quod quantum ad52. I reply: As regards their figure, figuram corpoream nihil certiwe neither can nor should be affirmare debemus, aut possumus,affirmative, since it escapes our cum talis figura non sit exacte nobissenses, being too delicate for our sensibilis, nec quoad visum, necsight or our touch. That we must quoad tactum, præ sui corporisleave to themselves, and to such as tenuitate, ac perspicacitate; qualishave the privilege of intuitive proinde vere sit, noverent ipsi,acquaintance with immaterial aliique, qui substantias substances. But, so far as probability immateriales intuitive cognoscere goes, I say that their figure tallies possunt. Quoad congruentiam et with the human body, save some probabilitatem dico, illa referre distinctive peculiarity, should the speciem corporis humani, cum very tenuity of their body not be aliquo distinctivo a corpore deemed sufficient. I am led to that humano, nisi forte ad hoc sufficiat by the consideration that of all the sua ipsorum tenuitas. Ducor, quia works of God the human frame is corpus humanum plasmatum a Deo the most perfect, and that whilst all perfectissimum est, inter animalia other animals stoop to the ground, quæque, et cum cætera bruta in because their soul is mortal, God, as terram sint prona, eo quia anima Ovid, the poet, says, in his eorum mortalis est, Deus, ut ait Metamorphoses, poeta Ovid., Metamorphos.:

Os homini sublime dedit, cælumque tueri	Gave man an erect figure, bidding Jussit, et erectos ad sidera tollere	him behold the heavens vultus;	And raise his face towards the stars, quia anima hominis immortalis man's soul having been made ordinata est ad cælestem immortal for the heavenly abode. mansionem. Cum igitur animalia, de Considering that the animals we are quibus loquimur, spiritum habere nspeaking of would be gifted with a immaterialem, rationalem, ac spirit immaterial, rational and immortalem, et proinde capacem immortal, capable therefore of beatitudinis ac damnationis, beatitude and damnation, it is proper congruum est, quod corpus, cui talis to admit that the body to which that spiritus copulatur, simile sit omnium spirit is united may be like unto the animalium nobilissimo, corpori most noble animal frame, that is to humano. Ex hac positione sequitur, say to the human frame. Whence it quod ejus corporis partes ordinem follows that in the divers parts of inter se essentialem habere that body there must be an essential deberent; nec enim pes capiti, aut order; that the foot, for instance, ventri manus conjungi deberet: sed cannot be an appendage to the head, congrua membrorum essentialis nor the hand to the belly, but that dispositione ordinata, ut essent each organ is in its right place, idonea ministeriis propriis according to the functions it has to perficiendis. Quo autem ad partes perform. As to the constitutive parts componentes ipsarum organa, dico of those organs, it is, in my opinion, quod necessarium esset, ut nonnullæ necessary that there should be some ipsarum essent solidiores, aliæ more or less strong, others more or minus solidæ, aliæ tenues, aliæ less slender, in order to meet the tenuissimæ pro necessitate requirements of the organic operationis organicæ. Nec contra working. Nor can this be fairly hanc positionem facile potest asseri objected to on the ground of the tenuitas ipsorum corporum: quippe slenderness of the bodies soliditas aut crassities organicarum themselves; for the strength or partium, de qua dicimus, non esset thickness of the organic parts talis simpliciter, sed comparative ad alluded to would not be absolute, alias partes tenuiores. Et hoc patere but merely in comparison with the potest in omnibus corporibus fluidis more slender ones. That, moreover, naturalibus, ut vino, oleo, lacte, may be observed in all natural etc.; quantumvis enim omnes partes fluids, such as wine, oil, milk, etc.; in ipsis videantur homogeneæ ac however homogeneous and similar similares, non tamen ita est: nam in to each other their component parts ipsis est pars terrea, pars aquea, sal may look, yet they are not so: for fixum, sal volatile, et pars sulfurea, some are clayish, others aqueous; quæ omnia manipulatione there are fixed salts, volatile salts, spargirica oculis subjici possunt. Ita brimstone, all of which are made esset in casu nostro: posito enim obvious by a chemical analysis. So quod talium animalium corpora it would be in our case: for, subtilia et tenuia, ut corpora supposing the bodies of those naturalia fluida, velut aqua et aer, animals to be as subtile and slender essent, non tamen tolleretur, quin in as the natural fluids, air, water, etc., ipsorum partibus diversæ inter se there would nevertheless be essent qualitates, et aliquæ ipsarum discrepancies in the quality of their comparative ad alias essent solidæ, constitutive parts, some of which et aliæ tenuiores, quamvis totum would be strong when compared corpus ex ipsis compositum tenue with others more slender, although dici posset. the whole body which they compose might be called slender.

53. Quod si dicatur, quod hæc 53. It may be objected that this is repugnant positioni supra firmatæ, repugnant to what was said above circa partium essentialem concerning the essential ordering of ordinationem inter se: the parts among themselves; that it quandoquidem videmus, quod inis seen that, in fluid and subtile corporibus fluidis ac tenuibus unabodies, one part is not essentially pars non servat ordinem essentialembut only accidentally connected with ad aliam, sed accidentalem tantum,another; that a part of wine, for ita ut hæc pars vini, quæ modoinstance, just now contiguous with alteri parti contigua est, moxsome other, soon comes in contact inverso vase, aut moto vino, alteriwith a third, if the vessel be turned parti unitur, et sic omnes partesupside down or the wine shaken, diversam positionem habentand that all the parts together quantumvis semper idem vinum sit,exchange positions at the same time, et ex hoc sequeretur, quod taliumthough it be still the same wine. animalium corpora figurataWhence it should be inferred that, stabiliter non essent, etthe bodies of those animals would consequenter, nec organica. have no permanent figure, and would consequently not be organic.

54. Respondeo negando assumptum; 54. I reply that I deny the etenim in corporibus fluidis,assumption. In fact, if in fluid quamvis non appareat, manet tamenbodies the essential ordering of the essentialis partium ordinatio, quaparts is not apparent, it subsists none stante stat in suo esse compositum,the less, and causes a compound to et hoc patet manifeste in vino:preserve its own state. Wine, for expressum enim ab uvis videturinstance, when expressed from the liquor totaliter homogeneous, nongrapes, seems a thoroughly tamen ita est; in eo enim sunt parteshomogeneous liquor, and yet is not crassæ, quæ tractu temporisso; for there are gross parts which, subsident in doliis: sunt etiam partesin the long run, subside in the casks; tenues, quæ evaporant: sunt partesthere are also slender parts which fixæ, ut tartarus, sunt partesevaporate; fixed parts, such as tartar; volatiles, ut sulphur, sive spiritusvolatile parts, such as brimstone and ardens; sunt partes mediæ interalcohol; others again, half volatile volatile ac fixum, ut phlegma. Partesand half fixed, such as phlegm. istæ ordinem essentialem inter seThose divers parts do not mutant; nam statim ac expressum estrespectively maintain an essential ab uvis, et mustum dicitur sulphur,order; for no sooner has the must sive spiritus volatilis, ita implicatumbeen expressed from the grapes, and manet particulis tartari, qui fixusbeen styled brimstone or volatile est, ut nullo modo avolare valeat. spirits, than it continues so closely involved with the particles of tartar, which is fixed, as not to be in any way able to escape.

55. Hinc est, quod a musto recenter 55. That is the reason why must ab uvis expresso nullo modo potest recently expressed from the grapes distillari spiritus sulphureus, qui is of no use for the distillation of the communiter vocatur aqua vitæ: sed sulphurous spirits, commonly called post quadraginta dies fermentationis brandy; but, after forty days particulæ vini ordinem mutant, ita ut fermentation, the particles of the spiritus, qui alligati erant particulis wine change places: the spirits, no tartareis, et propria volatilitate eas longer bound with the tartaric suspensas tenebant, et vicissim ab particles which they kept in eis ne possent avolare de tenebantur, suspension through their own ac tartareis particulis separantur, et volatility, whilst they were, in divulsi ac confusi remanent cum return, kept down by them and partibus phlegmaticis, a quibus per prevented from escaping, sever from actionem ignis faciliter separantur, those particles, and continue et avolant; sicque per distillationem confused with the phlegmatic parts fit aqua vitæ, quæ aliud non est from which they become easily quam sulphur vini volatile cum released by the operation of fire, and tenuiore parte phlegmatis simul cum evaporate: thus, by means of dicto sulphure vi ignis elevata. Post distillation, brandy is made, which is quadraginta dies, alia incipit vini nothing but the brimstone of wine fermentatio, quæ longiori, aut minus volatilized by heat with the most longo tempore perficitur, pro vini slender part of phlegm. At the end of perfectiori aut imperfectiori forty days another fermentation maturitate, et alio atque alio modo begins, which extends more or less, terminatur, pro minore aut majore according as the maturity of the spiritus sulphurei abundantia. Si wine is more or less perfect, and the enim abundat in vino sulphur, termination of which is dependent acescit fermentatione, et evadit on the greater or lesser abundance of acetum; si autem parum sulphuris sulphurous spirits. If abounding with continet, lentescit vinum, et Italice brimstone, the wine sours and turns dicitur vino molle, aut vino guasto. to vinegar; if, on the contrary, it Quod si viurum sit, ut cæteris holds but little brimstone, it ropes, paribus est, vinum dulce breviori and becomes what the Italians call tempore, aut acescit, aut lentescit, ut vino molle or vino guasto. If the quotidiana constat experientia. In wine is at once ripe, as happens in dicta autem fermentatione ordo other cases, it sours or ropes in less essentialis partium vini mutatur; time, as is shown by every day non enim ipsius quantitas, aut experientia. Now, in said materia imminuitur, aut mutatur: fermentation the essential order of videmus enim lagenam vino plenam the parts of wine is altered, but not tractu temporis evadere plenam so its quantity nor its matter, which aceto, nullatenus mutatam circa neither changes nor decreases: a quantitatem materiæ, quæ prius ibi bottle that had been filled with wine extabat, sed tantum mutato partium is, after a certain time, found to be essentia ordine: nam sulphur, filled with vinegar, without any quod, ut diximus, erat phlegma alteration in its quantity of matter; unitum, ac a tartaro separatum, the essential order of its parts has iterum tartaro implicatur, et cum eo alone been modified: the brimstone, fixatur, et proinde si distilletur which, as we have said, was united acetum, primo prodit phlegma to the phlegm and separated from insipidum, et post spiritus aceti, qui the tartar, becomes again involved est sulphur vini illaqueatum and fixed with the tartar; so that, on particulis tartari minus fixi. Mutatio distilling the vinegar, there issues autem essentialis partium from it first an insipid phlegm, and supradictarum variat substantiam then spirits of vinegar, which are the liquoris expressi ab uva, quod brimstone of wine intermixed with manifeste patet ex variis et particles of tartar that is less fixed. contrariis effectibus, quos causant Now, the essential shifting of the mustum, vinum, et acetum, et vinum aforesaid parts alters the substance lentum, quod vocatur corruptum, ut of the juice of the grapes, as is proinde duo prima apta materia sint clearly shown by the varied and ad consecrationem, secus alia duo. contrary effects of must, wine, Hanc porro vini economiam vinegar, and ropy or spoiled wine; hausimus ab erudito opere Nicolai for which cause the two first are fit, Lemerii, Regis Galliarum but the two last unfit materials for aromatarii, Curs. de Chimi., p. 2. c. consecration. We have borrowed the 9.

above exposition of the economy of wine from the able work of Nicholas Lemery, perfumer to the King of France, Course of Chemistry, p. 2. c. q.

56. Datam ergo naturalem 56. If now we apply that natural doctrine to our subject, I say that, dico, quod data dictorum animalium being given the corporeity of the animals in question, subtili et tenui, subtile and slender like the substance of liquids; eorumdem organizatione et being given also their organisation and figure, which demand an essentialem ordinationem exigunt, essential order of the various parts, non sequerentur inconvenientia ex an adverse supposition could raise adverso illata: nam sicut no argument contrary to their (quemadmodum dicebamus) ex existence; for, just as the jumbling together of the parts of wine and the diversity of their accidental dispositions do not alter their essentialis, ita esset in corpore tenui essential order, even so it would be dictorum animalium. with the slender frame of our animals.

57. Quinta interrogatio est, an talia 57. Fifth question: Would those animals be subject to diseases and obnoxia essent ægrotudinibus, ac animals be subject to diseases and aliis imperfectionibus, quibus other infirmities under which homines laborant, ut ignorantia, mankind lies, such as ignorance, metu, segnitie, sensuum fear, idleness, sensual paralysis, etc? impedimentis, etc.? An laborando Would they be wearied through lassarentur, et ad virium labour, and require, for recruiting reparationem egerent somno, cibo, their strength, sleep, food, drink? ac potu, et quo? et consequenter an And what food, what drink? Would interirent, et subinde, an a cæteris they be fated to die, and might they animalibus casu, aut ruina possent be killed casually, or by the occuldi? instrumentality of other animals?

58. Respondeo, quod ex quo corpora 58. I reply: Their bodies, though ipsorum, quamvis tenuia, essent subtile, being material, they would materiata, essent quidem of course be liable to decay: they corruptioni obnoxia; et ex might therefore suffer from adverse consequenti possent pati ab agencies, and consequently be agentibus contrariis, et ita ægrotare, diseased; that is, their organs might puta, aut simpliciter, aut nisi ægre, not perform, or painfully and perverse, aut vitiose præstare non imperfectly perform the office

posse munera, ad quæ eorum assigned to them, for therein consist organa essent ordinata; in hoc all diseases whatever with certain siquidem consistit animalium animals, as has been distinctly quorundam ægritudo quævis: ut explained by the most illustrious resolute docet præstantissimus Michael Ettmuller, Physiology, c. v. Michael Ettmullerus, Physiol. c. 5., thesis 1. In sooth, their body being thes. 1. Verum est, quod ex eo quod less gross than the human frame, tantam materiæ crassitatem non comprising less elements mixed haberent, et forte ex toto together, and being therefore less elementorum mixtione eorum corpus composite, they would not so easily non constaret, et minus compositum suffer from adverse influences, and esset quam humanum, non tam would therefore be less liable to facile paterentur a contrariis, et disease than man; their life would consequenter non tot ægritudinibus also exceed his; for, the more perfect velut homines essent obnoxia, et an animal, as a species, the longer longiorem, etiam homine, vitam its days; thus mankind, whose ducerent: quo enim perfectius est existence extends beyond that of animal, a tota specie, etiam cæteris other animals. For I do not believe diutius vivit, ut patet de specie in the centenary existence of crows, humana, cujus vita longior cæteris stags, ravens and the like, of which animalibus est. Nec enim admitto Pliny tells his customary stories; and sæcularem vitam cornicum, although his dreams have been cervorum, corvorum et similium, de reechoed by others without previous quibus more suo fabulatur Plinius, inquiry, it is no less clear that before et ejus somnia sine prævia writing thus, not one has faithfully discussione secuti sunt cæteri: noted the birth nor the death of those quandoquidem nullus est, qui talium animals: they have been content animalium natale et interitum with taking up the strange fable, as fideliter adnotaverit, ut pari modo has been the case with the Phenix, de eo scripserit; sed insolitam diu whose longevity is discarded as a fabulam quisque secutus est; sicut story by Tacitus, Annals, b. 6. It etiam illud, quod de phænice dicitur, were therefore to be inferred that the quod ut quid fabulosum, circa ejus animals we are speaking of would vitæ spatium recenset Tacitus, l. 6. live longer still than man; for, as Annal. Inferendum subinde esset shall be said below, they would be quod illorum animalium vita etiam more noble than he; consequently humana deberet esse diuturnior: ut also, they would be subject to the enim infra dicemus, illa essent other bodily affections, and require homine nobiliora; consequenter rest and food, as mentioned, number dicendum esset, quod essent obnoxia 50. Now, as rational beings cæteris corporeis pathematis, et amenable to discipline, they might quiete, et cibo indigerent, quæ also continue ignorant, if their diximus supra, n^o 50. Quia vero minds did not receive the culture of rationalia, et proinde disciplinabilia study and instruction, and some essent, ex consequenti etiam capacia amongst them would be more or less ignorantiæ, si eorum ingenia non versed in science, more or less essent exulta studiis, et disciplina, clever, according as their et inter ea pro intellectus eorum intelligence had been more or less majori, et minori acumine essent trained. However, generally aliqua magis, aliqua minus in speaking, and considering the whole scientiis excellentia: universaliter of the species, they would be more vero, et a tota specie essent homine learned than men, not from the doctiora, non ob eorum corpoream subtilty of their body, but perhaps subtilitatem, tum forte, ob maiorem because of the greater activity of spirituum activitatem, tum ob their mind or the longer space of diuturniorem vitæ durationem, in their life, which would enable them qua plura, quam homines discere to learn more things than men: such possent, quas causas assignat D. are indeed the motives assigned by Augustinus, lib. de Divin. Dæm. c. S. Augustine (Divin. Demon. ch. 3.

3. init. tom. 3., et lib. de Spir. et and Spirit and Soul, ch. 37), to the Anima, c. 37., pro futurorum prescience of the future in Demons. prænotione in Dæmonibus. Ab They might indeed suffer from agentibus autem naturalibus pati natural agencies; but they could quidem possent, ac difficulter occidi hardly be killed, on account of the ratione velocitatis, qua possunt se speed with which they could escape subtrahere a nocentibus; from danger; it is therefore most quapropter, nec a brutis, nec ab unlikely that they could, without the homine armis naturalibus, seu greatest difficulty, be put to death or artificialibus nisi maxima mutilated by beast or by man, with difficultate possent occidi, aut natural or artificial weapons, so mutilari, et maxima eorumdem quick would they be at avoiding the velocitate in declinando contrarium impending blow. Yet, they might be impetum. Possent vero in somno aut killed or mutilated in their sleep, or in non advertentia occidi, et mutilari in a moment of inadvertence, by a corpore solido, ut ense vibrato ab means of a solid body, such as a homine, aut lapide delapso per sword brandished by a man, or the ruinam, quia eorum corpus licet fall of a heavy stone; for, although tenuē, tamen et quantum, et subtle, their body would be divisibile esset, velut aer qui ferro, divisible, just like air which, though fuste, aut alio corpore solido vaporous, is yet divided by a sword, dividitur quamvis tenuis sit. Eorum a club, or any other solid body. autem spiritus impartibilis esset, et Their spirit, however, would be ceu anima hominis totus in toto, et indivisible, and like the human soul, totus in quavis corporis parte. Hinc entire in the whole and in each and fieri quod diviso corpore ipsorum, every part of the body. ut præfertur, per aliud corpus, sequi Consequently, the division of their posset mutilatio, et proinde etiam body by another body, as aforesaid, mors: non enim fieri posset ut diviso might occasion mutilation and even corpore idem spiritus utramque death, for the spirit, itself partem informaret, cum ipse indivisible, could not animate both indivisibilis esset. Verum est quod parts of a divided body. True, just as sicut partes aeris divisæ, per the parts of air, separated by the intermedium corpus, hoc sublato agency of a body, unite again as iterum uniuntur, et evadit idem aer, soon as that body is withdrawn, and possent pariter partes corporis constitute the same air as before, divisæ, ut supra ponitur, reuniri, et even so the parts of the body ab eodem spiritu revivificari. Sed divided, as above-mentioned, might hoc modo nequirent talia animalia unite and be revived by the same ab agentibus naturalibus aut spirit. But then, it must be inferred artificialibus occidi: sed that those animals could not be slain rationabilior esset prima positio; ex by natural or artificial agencies: and hoc enim, quod communicarent cum it were more rational to keep to our cæteris in materia, æquum est, ut a first position; for, if sharing matter cæteris etiam usque ad eorum with other creatures, it is natural that interitum pati possent, ut fit cum they should be liable to suffer cæteris. through those creatures, according to the common rule, and even unto death.

59. Sexta interrogatio est, an 59. Sixth question: Could their ipsorum corpora possent alia bodies penetrate other bodies, such corpora penetrare, ut parietes, as walls, wood, metals, glass, etc?

ligna, metalla, vitrum, etc., et an Could many of them abide together multa ipsorum possent in eodem on the same material spot, and to loco materiali consistere, et ad what space would their body extend quantum spatium extenderetur, seu or be restrained?

restringeretur eorum corpus?

60. Respondeo, quod cum in 60. I reply: In all bodies, however omnibus corporibus quantumvis compact, there are pores, as is compactis dentur pori, ut ad sensum apparent in metals where, more than patet in metallis, de quibus major in other bodies, it would seem there esset ratio, quod in ipsis non should be none; through a perfect darentur pori: microscopio perfecte microscope the pores of metals are elaborato discernuntur pori discerned, with their different metallorum, cum suis diversis shapes. Now, those animals might, figuris, utique possent per poro through the pores, creep into, and insinuari quibusvis corporibus, et thus penetrate any other bodies, hoc modo ista penetrare, although such pores were quantumvis tales pori penetrari non impervious to other liquors or possent ab alio liquore, aut spiritu material spirits, of wine, materiali, aut vini, salis ammoniaci, ammoniacal salt, or the like, because aut similia, quia longe tenuiora their bodies would be much more essent istis liquoribus illorum subtle than those liquors. However, corpora. Quamvis autem plures notwithstanding many Angels may Angeli possint esse in eodem loco abide together on the same material materiali, et etiam restringi ad spot, and even confine themselves in locum minorem minore non tamen in a lesser and lesser space, though not infinitum, ut probat Scotus in 2. dist. infinitely, as is shown by Scott, yet 2. q. 6. § Ad propositi. et quæst. 8., it were rash to ascribe the same per totum, hoc tamen concedendum power to those animals; for, their non esset de corporibus talium bodies are determined in substance animalium; tum quia corpora ipsa and impervious to each other; and if essent quanta, et eorum dimensi two glorious bodies cannot abide non esset reciproce penetrabilis; together on the same spot, though a tum quia si duo corpora gloriosa glorious and a non glorious one may non possunt esse in eodem loco, do so, according to some Doctors, quamvis possent simul esse much less would it be possible for gloriosum, et non gloriosum, ut the bodies of those animals, which voluit Gotofredus de Fontibus, are indeed subtile, yet do not attain quodlibet 6. q. 5., a quo non to the subtilty of the glorious body. discordat Scotus in 2. distinct. 2. q. As regards their power of extension 8. in fine; multo minus possent simul or compression, we may instance esse istorum corpora, quæ, licet the case of air, which, rarefied and subtilia, non tamen æquarent condensed, occupies more or less subtilitatem, corporis gloriosi. Quo room, and may even, by artificial autem ad extensionem et means, be compressed into a restrictionem, dicendum esset, quod narrower space than would be sicut ex rarefactione, et naturally due to its volume; as is condensatione, majus aut minus seen with those large balls which, spatium occupatur ab aere, qui for amusement, one inflates by etiam arte potest constringi, ut in means of a blow-pipe or tube: air, minori loco contineatur, quam sit being forced into them and suæ quantitati naturaliter debitus, ut compressed, is held in larger patet in magnis pilis lusoriis, quæ quantity than is warranted by the per fistulam seu tubum inflatorium capacity of the ball. Similarly the inflantur: in his siquidem aer bodies of the animals we are violenter immittitur, et constringitur, speaking of might, by their natural et ejus major ibi continetur virtue, extend to a larger space, not quantitas, quam naturalis pilæ exceeding however their own capacitas exigat; ita pari form itersubstance; they might also contract, talia corpora ex ipsorum naturali but not beyond the determined space virtute possent ad majus spatium, due to that same substance. And, non tamen excedens eorum considering that of their number, as quantitatem, extendi: ut pariter with men, some would be tall and etiam restringi, non tamen circa some short, it were proper that the determinatum locum suæ quantitatit tall should be able to extend more debitum. Et quia ipsorum nonnulla, than the short, and the short to prout etiam in hominibus est, essent contract more than the tall. magna, et nonnulla parva, congruum esset, ut magna possent plus extendi, quam parva, et hæc ad minorem locum restringi, quam magna.

61. Septima interrogatio est, an 61. Seventh question: Would those hujusmodi animalia in peccato animals be born in original sin, and originali nascerentur, et a Christo have been redeemed by the Lord

Domino fuissent redempta; an ipsis Christ? Would the grace have been conferred upon them and through sacraments; sub qua lege viverent, what sacraments? Under what law et an beatitudinis et damnationis would they live, and would they be essent capacia? capable of beatitude and damnation?

62. Respondeo, quod articulus Fidei 62. I reply: It is an article of belief est, quod Christus Dominus pro that Christ has merited grace and universa creatura rationali gratiam glory for all rational creatures et gloriam meruit. Pariter articulus without exception. It is also an Fidei est, quod Creaturæ rationali article of belief that glory is not gloria non confertur nisi præcedat conferred on a rational creature until in ea gratia, quæ est dispositio ad such creature has been previously gloriam. Similis articulus est quod endowed with grace, which is the gloria non confertur nisi per merita. disposition to glory. According to a Hæc vero fundantur in observantia like article, glory is conferred but by perfecta mandatorum Dei adimpleta merits. Now, those merits are per gratiam. Ex his satis fit positus grounded on the perfect observance interrogationibus. Incertum est an of the commands of God, which is tales Creaturæ originaliter accomplished through grace. The peccavissent, necne. Certum tamen above questions are thus solved. est, quod si ipsarum Prothoparens Whether those creatures did or did peccasset, sicut peccavit Adam, not sin originally is uncertain. It is ipsius descendentes in peccato clear, however, that if their first originali nascerentur, Parent had sinned as Adam sinned, quemadmodum nascuntur homines. his descent would be born in Et quia Deus nunquam reliquit original sin, as men are born. And, Creaturam rationalem sine remedio, as God never leaves a rational dum ipsa est in via; si hujusmodi creature without a remedy, so long creaturæ in peccato originali, aut as it treads the way, if those actuali inficerentur, Deus providisset creatures were infected with original illis de remedio, sed quale sit, an or with actual sin, God would have fecisset, noverit Deus, noverint ipsæ. provided them with a remedy; but Hoc certum est, si inter ipsas essent whether it is the case, and of what eadem, aut alia sacramenta, ac sunt kind is the remedy, is a secret in Ecclesia humana militanti, ipsa between God and them. Surely, if habuissent, et institutionem, et they had sacraments identical with efficaciam a meritis Jesu Christi, or different from those in use in the qui omnium creaturarum human Church militant, for the rationalium Redemptor et institution and efficacy thereof they Satisfactor universalis est. would be indebted to the merits of Convenientissimum pariter, immo Jesus-Christ, the Redeemer and necessarium esset quod sub aliqua universal Atoner of all rational lege a Deo sibi data viverent, ut per creatures. It would likewise be ipsius observantiam possent sibi highly proper, nay necessary, that beatitudinem mereri; quænam autem they should live under some law lex fuisset, an naturalis tantum, aut given them by God, and through the scripta, Mosaica, aut Evangelica, observance of which they might aut alia ab his omnibus differens, merit beatitude; but what would be prout Deo placuisset, hoc nobis that law, whether merely natural or incognitum. Quoquomodo autem written, Mosaic or Evangelical, or fuisset, nulla resultaret repugnantia different from all these and specially possibilitatem talium creaturarum instituted by God, that we are excludens.

ignorant of. Whatever it might be though, there would follow no objection exclusive of the possible existence of such creatures.

63. Unicum porro argumentum, et 63. The only argument, and that a quidem satis debile post longam rather lame one, which long meditationem mihi subit contra meditations has suggested to me talium creaturarum possibilitatem: against the possibility of such et est quod si tales creaturæ in creatures, is that, if they really Mundo existerent, de ipsis notitia existed in the World, we should find aliqua tradita fuisset a Philosophis, them mentioned somewhere by Sacra Scriptura, Traditione Philosophers, Holy Scripture, Ecclesiastica, aut Sanctis Patribus; Ecclesiastical Tradition, or the Holy quod cum non fuerit, tales creaturas Fathers; such not being the case, minime possibiles esse their utter impossibility should be concludendum est. inferred.

64. Sed hoc argumentum, quod 64. But that argument which, in fact, revera magis pulsat existentiam, calls in question their existence quam possibilitatem illarum, facili rather than their possibility, is easily negotio solvitur ex iis quæ disposed of by our premises, Nrs 41 præmissimus supra n^o 41. et 42. and 42; for no argument can stand in Argumentum enim ab auctoritate virtue of a negative authority.

negativa non tenet. Præterquam Besides, it is not correct to assert quod falsum est, quod de illis that neither the Philosophers, nor the notitiam non tradiderint Scriptures, nor the Fathers have Philosophi, tum Scriptura, tum handed down any notion of them. Patres. Plato siquidem, ut refert Plato, as is reported by Apuleius Apuleius de Deo Socratis et (The Demon of Socrates) and Plutarchus de Isid. apud Baronem, Plutarch (Isis and Osiris), declared Scot. Defens., tom. 9. Apparatus. p. 1. that Demons were beings of the fol. 2., voluit Dæmones esse animal kind, passive souls, rational animalia genere, animo passiva, intelligences, aerial bodies, mente rationalia, corpore aerea, everlasting; and he gave them the tempore æterna: creaturasque istas name of Demons, which of itself is nomine Dæmonum intitulavit; quod nowise offensive, since it means tamen nomen non male sonat ex se: replete with wisdom; so that, when importat enim plenum sapientia; authors allude to the Devil (or Evil unde cum Diabolum (Angelum Angel), they do not merely call him nempe malum) volunt auctores Demon, but Cacodemon, and say exprimere, non simpliciter likewise Eudemon, when speaking Dæmonem sed Cacodæmonem of a good Angel. Those creatures are vocant: sicut Eudæmonem, quando also mentioned in Scripture and by bonum Angelum volunt intelligi. the Fathers, as shall be said Similiter in Scriptura Sacra et hereafter.

Patribus, de dictis creaturis habetur mentio, et de hoc infra dicemus.

65. Stabilita huc usque talium 65. Now that we have proved that creaturarum possibilitate, ad those creatures are possible, let us earumdem existentiam probandam go a step further, and show that they descendamus. Supposita tot exist. Taking for granted the truth of historiarum veritate de coitu the recitals concerning the hujusmodi Incuborum et intercourse of Incubi and Succubi Succuborum cum hominibus et with men and beasts, recitals so brutis, ita ut hoc negare impudentia numerous that it would look like videatur, ut ait D. Augustinus quem impudence to deny the fact, as is dedimus supra n^o 10., ita arguo: Ubi said by St Austin, whose testimony reperitur propria passio sensus, is given above (Nr 10), I argue: ibidem necessario reperitur sensus Where the peculiar passion of the ipse, cum juxta principia sense is found, there also, of philosophica propria passio fluat a necessity, is the sense itself; for, natura, sive ubi reperiuntur according to the principles of actiones, seu operationes sensus, philosophy, the peculiar passion ibidem reperitur sensus ipse, cum flows from nature, that is to say; operationes et actiones sint a forma. that, where the acts and operations Atqui in hujusmodi Incubis aut of the sense are found, there also is Succubis, sunt actiones, the sense, the operations and acts operationes, ac propriæ passionibus, being but its external form. Now, quæ sunt a sensibus; ergo in iisdem those Incubi and Succubi present reperitur sensus: sed sensus reperiri acts, operations, peculiar passions, nequit nisi adsint organa composita, which spring from the senses; they nempe ex potentia animæ et are therefore endowed with senses. determinata parte corporis: ergo in But senses cannot exist without iisdem reperiuntur corpus et anima; concomitant composite organs, erunt igitur animalia: sed etiam in without a combination of soul and ipsis et ab ipsis sunt actiones, et body. Incubi and Succubi have operationes animæ rationalis: ergo therefore body and soul, and, eorum anima erit rationalis: et ita consequentially, are animals; but de primo ad ultimum tales Incubi their acts and operations are also sunt animalia rationalia. those of a rational soul; their soul is therefore rational; and thus, from first to last, they are rational animals.

66. Minor probatur quoad singulas 66. Our minor is easy of ejus partes. Passio siquidem demonstration in each of its parts. appetitiva coitus est passio sensus; And indeed, the appetitive passion mæror, ac tristitia, ac iracundia et of coition is a sensual passion; the furor ex coitu denegato passionibus grief, sadness, wrath, rage, sensus sunt, ut patet in quibusvis occasioned by the denial of coition, animalibus; generatio per coitum are sensual passions, as is seen with est operatio sensus, ut notum est. all animals; generation through Hæc porro omnia in Incubis sunt: ut coition is evidently a sensual enim probavimus supra a n^o 25. et operation. Now, all that happens seq., ipsi coitum muliebrem, et with Incubi, as has been shown quandoque virilem appetunt, above: they incite women, tristantur, et furunt, ut amantes, sometimes even men; if denied, they amentes, si ipsis denegetur; coeunt sadden and storm, like lovers:

perfecte et quandoque generant. amantes, amentes; they perfectly Concludendum ergo quod polleant practice coition, and sometimes sensu, et proinde corpore; unde beget. It must therefore be inferred inferendum etiam perfecta animalia that they have senses, and esse. Pariter clausis ostiis ac consequently a body; consequently fenestris intrant ubivis locorum: also, that they are perfect animals. igitur ipsorum corpus tenue est; More than that: with closed doors item futura prænoscunt, annuntiant, and windows they enter wherever componunt, ac dividunt; quæ they please: their body is therefore operationes sunt propriæ animæ slender; they foreknow and foretell rationalis: ergo anima rationali the future, compose and divide, all pollent; et ita sunt vera animalia which operations are proper to a rationalia.

rational soul; they therefore possess a rational soul and are, in sooth, rational animals.

Respondent communiter Doctores, Doctors generally retort that it is the quod malus Dæmon est ille qui tales Evil Spirit that perpetrates those impudicitias operatur, quod impure acts, simulates passions, passiones, nempe amorem, love, grief at the denial of coition, in tristitiamque simulat ex coitu order to entice souls to sin and to denegato, ut animas ad peccandum undo them; and that, if he copulates alliciat, et eas perdat; et si coit, et and begets, it is with assumed sperm generat, hoc est ex semine, et in and body, as aforesaid (Nr 24). corpore alieno, ut dictum fuit supra n^o 24.

67. Sed contra Incubi nonnulli rem 67. But then, there are Incubi that habent cum equis, equabus, aliisque have to do with horses, mares and etiam brutis, quæ si coitum other beasts, and, as shown by every adversentur, male ab ipsis day experience, ill-treat them if tractantur, ut quotidiana constat rebel to coition; yet, in those cases, experientia; sed in istis cessat ratio it can no longer be adduced that the adducta, nempe quod fingat Demon simulates the appetite for appetitum coitus, ut animas perdat, coition in order to bring about the cum anima brutorum damnationis ruin of souls, since those of beasts æternæ sit incapax. Prætere are not capable of everlasting amoris et iræ passionis in ipsa damnation. Besides, love and wrath contrarios effectus reales producunt. with them are productive of quite Si enim aut mulier aut brutum opposite effects. For, if the loved amatum illis morem gerant, optime woman or beast humours them, ab Incubis tractantur; viceversa those Incubi behave very well; on pessime habentur, si ex denegato the contrary, they use them most coitu irascantur et furant; et hoc savagely when irritated and enraged firmatur quotidiana experientia; by a denial of coition: this is amply ergo in ipsis sunt veræ passioness proved by daily experience: those sensus. Insuper mali Dæmones, ac Incubi therefore have truly sexual incorporei, qui rem habent cum passions. Besides, the Evil Spirits, Sagis et Maleficis, ipsas cogunt ad the incorporeal Demons which have eorum adorationem, ad to do with Sorceresses and Witches, denegandam Fidem Orthodoxam, ad constrain them to Demon-Worship, maleficia et scelera enormia to the abjuration of the Orthodox perpetranda tanquam pensum Faith, to the commission of infamis coitus, ut supra n^o 11. enchantments and foul crimes, as dictum fuit: nihil horum prætendunt preliminary conditions to the Incubi, ergo mali Dæmones non infamous intercourse, as has been sunt. Ulterius malus Dæmon, ut ex above-stated (Nr 11); now, Incubi Peltano et Thyreo scribit Guaccius, pretend to nothing of the kind: they Compend. Malef. lib. 1. c. 19. fol. are therefore no Evil Spirits. Lastly, 128., ad prolationem nominis Jesu as written by Guaccius, at the mere aut Mariæ, ad formationem signi utterance of the name of Jesus or Crucis, ad approximationem Mary, at the sign of the Cross, the sacrarum Reliquiarum, sive rerum approach of Holy Relics or benedictarum, et ad exorcismos, consecrated objects, at exorcisms, adjurationes, aut præcepta adjurations or priestly injunctions, sacerdotum, aut fugit aut pavet, the Evil Demon either shudders and concutiturque, et stridet, ut takes to flight, or is agitated and conspicitur quotidie in energumenis, howls, as is daily seen with et constat ex tot historiis, quas energumens and is shown by recitat Guaccius, ex quibus habetur, numerous narratives of Guaccius quod in nocturnis ludis Sagarum concerning the nightly revels of facto ab aliquo assistentium signo Witches, where, at a sign of the Crucis, aut pronuntiato nomine Cross or the name of Jesus said by Jesu, Diaboli et secum Sagæ omnes one of the assistants, Devils and disparuerunt. Sed Incubi ad Witches all vanish together. Incubi, supradicta nec fugiunt, nec pavent, on the contrary, stand all those quandoque cachinnis exorcismos or deals without taking to flight or excipiunt, et quandoque ipsos showing the least fear; sometimes Exorcistas cædunt, et sacras vestes even they laugh at exorcisms, strike discerpunt. Quod si mali Dæmones, the Exorcists themselves, and rend utpote a D. N. J. C. domiti, ad ipsius the sacred vestments. Now, if the nomen, Crucem, et res sacras evil Demons, subdued by our Lord pavent: boni autem Angeli eisdem Jesus-Christ, are stricken with fear rebus gaudent, non tamen homines by his name, the Cross and the holy ad peccata et Dei offensam things; if, on the other hand, the sollicitant: Incubi vero sacra non good Angels rejoice at those same timent, et ad peccata provocant, things, without however inciting convincitur ipsos nec malos men to sin nor to give offense to Dæmones, nec bonos Angelos esse; God, whilst the Incubi, without sed patet, quod nec homines sunt, having any dread of the holy things, cum tamen ratione utantur. Quid provoke to sin, it is clear that they ergo erunt? Si in termino sunt, et are neither evil Demons nor good simplices spiritus sunt, erunt aut Angels; but it is clear also that they damnati aut beati: non enim in bona are not men, though endowed with Theologia dantur puri spiritus reason. What then should they be? viatores. Si damnati, nomen et Supposing them to have reached the Crucem Christi revererentur; si goal, and to be pure spirits, they beati, homines ad peccandum non would be damned or blessed, for provocarent; ergo aliud erunt a correct Theology does not admit of puris spiritus; et sic erunt corporati, pure spirits on the way to salvation. et viatores.

If damned, they would revere the name and the Cross of Christ; if blessed, they would not incite men to sin; they would therefore be different from pure spirits, and thus, have a body and be on the way to salvation.

68. Præterea agens materiale non 68. Besides, a material agent cannot potest agere nisi in passum similiter act but on an equally material materiale; tritum siquidem est passive. It is indeed a trite axioma philosophorum, quod agens philosophical axiom, that agent and et patiens debent communicare in patient must have a common subjecto; nec id quod materiatur subject: pure matter cannot act on est, potest agere in rem pure any purely spiritual thing. Now, spiritualem. Dantur autem agentia there are natural agents which act on naturalia, quæ agunt contra those Incubi Demons: these are hujusmodi Dæmones Incubos, therefore material or corporeal. Our sequitur igitur quod isti materiati, minor is proved by the testimony of seu corporei sunt. Minor probatur Dioscorides, Pliny, Aristoteles and ex iis quæ scribunt Dioscorides, l. 2. Apuleius, quoted by Guaccius, c. 168. et l. 1. c. 100., Plinius, lib. Comp. Malef. b. 3, ch. 13, fol. 316; 15. c. 4., Aristoteles, Probl. 34., et it is confirmed by our knowledge of Apuleius, 1. De Virtute Herbarum, numerous herbs, stones and animal apud Guaccium, Comp. Malef., l. 3. substances which have the virtue of c. 13. fol. 316., et confirmatur driving away Demons, such as rue, experientia, nempe de pluribus St-John's wort, verbena, germander, herbis, lapidibus ac animalibus, palma Christi, centaury, diamonds, quæ Dæmones depellunt, ut ruta, coral, jet, jasper, the skin of the head hypericon, verbena, scordium, of a wolf or an ass, women's palma Christi, centaureum, adamas, catamenia, and a hundred others: corallium, gagates, jaspis, pellis wherefore it is written: For such as capitis lupi aut asini, menstruum are assaulted by the Demon it is muliebre, et centum alia; unde lawful to have stones or herbs, but habetur 26, q. 7. cap. final.: without recourse to incantations. It Dæmonium sustinenti liceat petras, follows that, by their own native vel herbas habere sine incantatione. virtue, stones or herbs can bridle the Ex quo habetur, petras aut herbas Demon: else the above mentioned posse sua vi naturali Dæmonis vires Canon would not permit their use, compescere, aliter Canon hoc non but would on the contrary forbid it permitteret, sed ut superstitiosum as superstitious. We have a striking vetaret. Et de hoc luculentum instance thereof in Holy Scripture, exemplum habemus in Sacra where the Angel Raphael says to Scriptura, ubi Angelus Raphael dixit Tobit, ch. 6, v. 8, speaking of the Tobiæ, c. 6, v. 8.: Cordis ejus fish which he had drawn from the (nempe piscis, quem a Tigri Tigris: "If thou putttest on coals a attraxerat) particulam, si superparticle of its liver, the smoke carbones ponas, fumus ejus extricat thereof will drive away all kinds of omne genus Dæmoniorum. Et ejus Demons." Experience demonstrated virtutem experientia comprobavit: the truth of those words; for, no sooner was the liver of the fish set nam incenso jecore piscis, fugatus on fire, than the Incubus who was in est Incubus, qui Saram deperiebat. love with Sarah was put to flight.

69. Respondent ad hæc communiter 69. To this Theologians usually Theologi, quod talia agentia retort that such natural agents naturalia inchoative tantum fugant merely initiate the ejection of the Dæmonem, completive autem vis Demon, and that the completive supernaturalis Dei aut Angeli, ita ut effect is due to the supernatural virtus supernaturalis sit causa force of God or of the Angel; so that primaria, directa, et principalis, the supernatural force is the primary, naturalis autem secundaria, direct and principal cause, the indirecta, et minus principalis. Unde natural force being but secondary, ad probationem, quæ supra adducta indirect and subordinate. Thus, in est de Dæmone fugato a fumo order to explain how the liver of the jecoris piscis incensi a Tobia, fish burnt by Tobit drove away the respondet Vallesius, De Sac. Demon, Vallesius asserts that the Philosoph., c. 28., quod tali fumo smoke thereof had been endowed by indita fuit a Deo vis supernaturalis God with the supernatural power of fugandi Incubum, sicut igni expelling the Incubus, in the same materiali Inferni data est virtus manner as the material fire of Hell torquendi Dæmones et animas has the virtue of tormenting Demons Damnatorum. Ad eamdem autem and the souls of the Damned. probationem respondet Lyranus, et Others, such as Lyranus and Cornelius ad c. 6. Tob. v. 8., Cornelius, profess that the smoke of Abulentis in 1. Reg. c. 16. q. 46., the heart of the fish initiated the Pererius in Daniel., pag. 272., apud ejection of the Demon by native Cornel. loc. cit., fumum cordis piscis virtue, but completed it by angelical expulisse Dæmonem inchoate vi and heavenly virtue: by native naturali, sed complete vi angelica et virtue, insomuch that it opposed a cælesti: naturali autem impediendo contrary action to that of the actionem Dæmonis per Demon; for the Evil Spirit applies dispositionem contrariam, quia hic native causes and humours, the agit per naturales causas et native qualities of which are humores, quorum qualitates combated by the contrary qualities expugnantur a qualitatibus of natural things known to be contrariis rerum naturalium, quæ capable of driving away Demons; dicuntur Dæmones fugare; et in that opinion is shared by all those who treat of the art of exorcisms.

eadem sententia sunt omnes loquentes de arte exorcista.

70. Sed hæc responsio, que tamen 70. But that explanation, however validas habet instantias, ad plus plausible the facts upon which it quadrare potest contra malos rests, can at most be received as Dæmones obsidentes corpora, aut regards the Evil Spirits which per maleficia inferentes ipsis possess bodies or, through malefice, ægritudines, aut alia incommoda, infect them with diseases or other sed nullo modo facit ad propositum infirmities; it does not at all meet the de Incubis: siquidem isti ne case of Incubi. For, these neither corpora obsident, nec ipsis officiunt possess bodies nor infect them with per ægritudines habituales, sed ad diseases; they, at most, molest them plus ictibus et percussionibus by blows and ill-treatment. If they torquent. Quod si equas coitum cause the mares to grow lean adversantes macras reddunt, hoc because of their not yielding to faciunt subducendo illis cibum, et coition, it is merely by taking away hoc modo macrescere, et tandem their provender, in consequence of interire eas faciunt. Ad hæc autem which they fall off and finally die. patranda non eget Incubus alicujus To that purpose the Incubus need not rei naturalis applicatione (qua use a natural agent, as the Evil Spirit tamen eget malus Dæmon inferens does when imparting a disease: it is ægritudinem habitualement), ea enim enough that it should exert its own potest ex sua vi organica naturali. native organic force. Likewise, Pariter Dæmon malus plerumque when the Evil Spirit possesses obsidet corpora, et infert bodies and infects them with ægritudines ad signa cum ipsodiseases, it is most frequently conventa et posita a Saga aut through signs agreed upon with Malefico, quæ signa multoties res himself, and arranged by a witch or naturales sunt præditæ vi nativaa wizard, which signs are usually nocendi, quibus naturaliter resistunt natural objects, indued with their alia pariter naturalia contrariæ own noxious virtue, and of course virtutis. Incubus vero non sic; quia opposed by other equally natural ex se, et nulla concurrente aut Saga, objects endowed with a contrary aut Malefico, suas vexationes infert. virtue. But not so the Incubus: it is Præterea res naturales fugantes of his own accord, and without the Incubos suam virtutem exercent, ac cooperation of either witch or effectum sortiuntur absque wizard, that he inflicts his interventu alicujus exorcismi aut molestations. Besides, the natural sacræ benedictionis; ut proinde dici things which put the Incubi to flight non possit, quod fuga Incubi exert their virtue and bring about a inchoative sit a virtute naturali, result without the intervention of completive autem a vi divina, quia any exorcism or blessing; it cannot ibi nulla particularis intervenit therefore be said that the ejection of divini nominis invocatio, sed est the Incubus is initiated by natural, purus effectus rei naturalis, ad quem and completed by divine virtue, non concurrat Deus, nisi concursus since there is in this case no universali, tanquam auctor naturæ, particular invocation of the divine et causa universalis, et prima in name, but the mere effect of a ordine efficientium.

natural object, in which God cooperates only as the universal agent, the author of nature, the first of efficient causes.

71. Duas circa hoc historias do, 71. To illustrate this subject, I give quarum primam habui a two stories, the first of which I have Confessario Molinalium, viro gravi, from a Confessor of Nuns, a man of ac fide dignissimo. Alterius vero weight, and most worthy of credit; sum testis oculatus. the second I was eye-witness to.

In quodam Sanctimonialium In a certain monastery of holy Nuns monasterio debebat ad educationem there lived, as a boarder, a young Virgo quædam nobilis tentata ab maiden of noble birth, who was Incubo, qui diu noctuque ipsi tempted by an Incubus that appeared apparebat, ipsam ad coitum to her by day and by night, and with sollicitando eniximis precibus, the most earnest entreaties, the tamquam amasius præ amore manners of a most passionate lover, dementatus; ipsa tamen semper incessantly incited her to sin; but restitit tentanti gratia Dei, ac she, supported by the grace of God sacramentorum frequentia roborata. and the frequent use of the Incassum abiere plures devotiones, sacraments, stoutly resisted the jejunia et vota facta a puella vexata, temptation. But, all her devotions, exorcismi, benedictiones, et fasts and vows notwithstanding, præcepta ab exorcistis facta despite the exorcisms, the blessings, Incubo, ut desisteret a molestia illa; the injunctions showered by nec quidquam proficiebatur exorcists on the Incubus that he multitudo reliquiarum, aliarumque should desist from molesting her; in rerum benedictarum disposita in spite of the crowd of relics and other camera virginis tentatæ, ne holy objects collected in the benedictæ candelæ noctu ibidem maiden's room, of the lighted ardentes impediabant, quo minus candles kept burning there all night, juxta consuetum appareret ad the Incubus none the less persisted tentandum in forma speciosissimi in appearing to her as usual, in the juvenis. Consultus inter alios viros shape of a very handsome young doctos fuit quidam Theologus man. At last, among other learned magnæ eruditionis: iste advertens men, whose advice had been taken virginem tentatam esse on the subject, was a very erudite temperamenti phlegmatici a toto, Theologian who, observing that the conjectavit Incubum esse dæmonem maiden was of a thoroughly aqueum (dantur enim ut scribit phlegmatic temperament, surmised Guaccius, Comp. Malefic. l. 1. c. that that Incubus was an aqueous 19. fol. 129., Dæmones ignei, aerei, Demon (there are in fact, as is phlegmatici, terrei, subterranei, et testified by Guaccius, igneous, lucifugi), et consului, quod in aerial, phlegmatic, earthly, camera virginis tentatæ continet subterranean demons who avoid the fieri suffimentum vaporosum light of day), and prescribed an sequens. Requirunt ollam novam uninterrupted fumigation in the figulinam vitreatam; in hac ponitur room. A new vessel, made of glass-calami aromatici, cubearum like earth, was accordingly brought seminis, aristolochiæ utriusque in, and filled with sweet cane, cubeb radicum, cardamomi majoris et seed, roots of both aristolochies, minoris, gingiberis, piperis longi, great and small cardamon, ginger, caryophyllorum, cinnamomi, long-pepper, caryophylleæ, canellæ caryophyllatæ, macis, cinnamon, cloves, mace, nutmegs, nucum myristicarum, styracis calamite storax, benzoin, aloescalamitæ, benzoini, ligni ac radicis wood and roots, one ounce of rodia, ligni aloes, triasantalorum triasandalis, and three pounds of una uncia, semiaquæ vitæ libræ half brandy and water; the vessel tres; ponitur olla supra cineres was then set on hot ashes in order to calidas ut vapor suffimenti ascendat, force up the fumigating vapour, and et cella clausa tenetur. Facto the cell was kept closed. As soon as suffimento advenit denuo Incubus, the fumigation was done, the sed ingredi cellam nunquam ausus Incubus came, but never dared enter est: sed si tentata extra eam ibat, et the cell; only, if the maiden left it for per viridarium ac claustra a walk in the garden or the cloister, spatiabatur, aliis invisibilis sibi he appeared to her, though invisible visus apparebat Incubus, et puellæ to others and throwing his arms collo injectis brachiis violenter, ac around her neck, stole or rather quasi furtive oscula rapiebat: quod snatched kisses from her, to her molestissimum honestæ virgini erat. intense disgust. At last, after a new Consultus denuo Theologus ille consultation, the Theologian ordinavit puellæ, ut deferret prescribed that she should carry pixidulas unguentarias exquisitorum about her person pills made of the odorum, ut moschi, ambræ, zibetti, most exquisite perfumes, such as balsami Peruviani, ac aliorum musk, amber, chive, Peruvian compositorum; quod cum fecisset, balsam, and others. Thus provided, deambulanti per viridarium puellæ she went for a walk in the garden, apparuit Incubus faci minaci, ac where the Incubus suddenly furenti; non tamen ad illam appeared to her with a threatening approximavit, sed digitum sibi face, and in a rage. He did not momordit tanquam meditans approach her, however, but, after vindictam; tandem disparuit, nec biting his finger as if meditating amplius ab ea visus fuit. revenge, disappeared and was never more seen by her.

72. Alia historia est, quod in 72. Here is the other story. In the Conventu Magnæ Cartusiæ great Carthusian Friary of Pavia Ticinensis, fuit quidam Diaconus, there lived a Deacon, Austin by nomine dictus Augustinus, maximas, name, who was subjected by a ac inauditas, et pene incredibiles certain Demon to excessive, unheard sustinens a quodam Dæmone of and scarcely credible vexations; vexationes; quæ tolli nullo remedio although many exorcists had made spirituali (quamvis plura juxta repeated endeavours to secure his plures exorcistas, qui liberationem, riddance, all spiritual remedies had sed incassum tentarunt, fuissent proved unavailing. I was consulted adhibita) potuerunt. Me consuluit by the Vicar of the convent, who had illius Conventus vicarius, qui curam the cure of the poor clerk. Seeing divexati, utpote Clerici, ex officio the inefficacy of all customary habebat. Ego videns frustranea exorcisms, and remembering the fuisse consueta exorcismorum above-related instance, I advised a remedia, exemplo historiæ fumigation like unto the one that has suprarecensitæ consului been detailed, and prescribed that suffimentum simile superiori, utque the Deacon should carry about his divexatus pixidulas odoramentorum person fragrant pills of the same supradictas deferret; et quia kind; moreover, as he was in the tabacchi usum habebat, et aqua vitæ habit of using tobacco, and was very delectabatur, suasi ut et tabaccho et fond of brandy, I advised tobacco aqua vitæ moschata uteretur. and brandy perfumed with musk.

Dæmon illi apparebat diu noctuque The Demon appeared to him by day ultra alias species, puta scheleti, and by night, under various shapes, suis, asini, Angeli, avis, modo in as a skeleton, a pig, an ass, an forma unius, modo alterius ex suis Angel, a bird; with the figure of one Religiosis, et semel in forma sui or other of the Friars, once even Prælati, nempe Prioris, qui hortatus with that of his own Abbot or Prior, est vexatum ad puritatem exhorting him to keep his conscientiæ, ad confidentiam in conscience clean, to trust in God, to Deum, et ad frequentiam confess frequently; he persuaded confessionis; suasit ut sibi him to let him hear his sacramental sacramentalem confessionem confession, recited with him the faceret, quod etiam fecit; et ex post psalms Exsurgat Deus and Qui Psalmos Exsurgat Deus et Qui habitat, and the Gospel according to habitat, et mox Evangelium S. St John: and when they came to the Joannis simul cum vexato recitavit, words Verbum caro factum est, he et ad ea verba Verbum caro factum bent his knee, and taking hold of a est genuflexit, et accepta stola, quæ stole which was in the cell, and of in cella erat, et aspergillo aquæ the Holy-water sprinkle, he blessed benedictæ benedixit cellæ, ac lecto the cell and the bed, and, as if he vexati, et ac si revera fuisset ipsius had really been the Prior, enjoined Prior præceptum fecit Dæmoni, ne on the Demon not to venture in auderet illum suum subditum future to molest his subordinate; he amplius divexare, et post hæc then disappeared, thus betraying disparuit, sicque prodidit quisnam what he was, for otherwise the esset: aliter vexatus illum suum young deacon had taken him for his Prælatum esse reputaverat. Prior. Now, notwithstanding the Postquam igitur suffimentum, ac fumigations and perfumes I had odores, ut supra dictum est, prescribed, the Demon did not desist consulueram, non destitit Dæmon from his wonted apparitions; more juxta solitum apparere; imo than that, assuming the features of assumpta figura vexati fuit ad his victim, he went to the Vicar's *cameram Vicarii, et ab eo petiit*room, and asked for some tobacco *aquam vitæ, ac tabaccum*and brandy perfumed with musk, of *moschatum, dicens sibi talia valde*which, said he, he was extremely *placere. Vicarius utrumque illi*fond. Having received both, he *dedit: quibus acceptis disparuit*indisappeared in the twinkling of an *momento, quo facto cognovit*eye, thus showing the Vicar that he *Vicarius se fuisse illusum a Dæmone*had been played with by the Demon; *tali pacto: quod magis confirmavit*and this was amply confirmed by *assertum vexati, qui cum juramento*the Deacon, who affirmed upon his *affirmavit, se illa die nullo modo*oath that he had not gone that day to *fuisse in cella Vicarii. Iste mihi*the Vicar's cell. All that having been *totum retulit, et ex tali facto conjeci*related to me, I inferred that, far *Dæmonem illum non fuisse aqueum,*from being aqueous like the Incubus *ut erat Incubus, qui virginem ad*who was in love with the maiden *coitum sollicitabat, ut dictum supra*above spoken of, this Demon was *est, sed igneum, vel ad minus*igneous, or, at the very least, aerial, *aereum, ex quo gaudebat vaporibus,*since he delighted in hot substances *ac odoribus, tabacco, et aqua vitæ,*such as vapours, perfumes, tobacco *quæ calida sunt. Et conjecturæ vim*and brandy. Force was added to my *addidit temperamentum divexati,*surmises by the temperament of the *quod erat colericum quo ad*young deacon, which was choleric *prædominium cum subdominio,*and sanguine, choler predominating *tamen sanguineo. Dæmones enim*however; for, those Demons never *tales non accedunt nisi ad eos, qui*approach but those whose *secum in temperamento*temperament tallies with their own: *symbolizant; ex quo validatur opinio*another confirmation of my *mea de illorum corporeitate. Unde*sentiment regarding their corporeity. *suasi Vicario, ut acciperet herbas*I therefore advised the Vicar to let *natura frigidas, ut nymphæam,*his penitent take herbs that are cold *hepaticam, portulacam,*by nature, such as water-lily, liver-*mandragoram, sempervivam,*wort, spurge, mandrake, house-leek, *plantaginem, hyoscyamum, et alias*plantain, henbane, and others *similes, et ex iis compositum*similar, make two little bundles of *fasciculum fenestræ, alium ostio*them and hang them up, one at his *cellæ suspenderet; similibusque*window, the other at the door of his *herbis, tum cameram, tum lectum*cell, taking care to strow some also *divexati sterneret. Mirum dictu!*on the floor and on the bed.

comparuit denuo Dæmon, manens Marvellous to say! The Demon tamen extra cameram, nec ingredi appeared again, but remained voluit, et cum divexatus illum outside the room, which he would interrogasset, quare de more intrare not enter; and, on the Deacon non auderet, multis verbis injuriosis inquiring of him his motives for jactatis contra me, qui talia such unwonted reserve, he burst out consulueram, disparuit, nec amplius into invectives against me for giving reversus est. such advice, disappeared, and never came again.

73. Ex his duabus historiis apparet 73. The two stories I have related tales odores, et herbas respective make it clear that, by their native sua naturali virtute, nullaque virtue alone, perfumes and herbs interveniente vi supernaturali drove away Demons without the Dæmones propulisse; unde intervention of any supernatural convincitur quod Incubi patiuntur a force; Incubi are therefore subject to qualitatibus materialibus, ut proinde material conditions, and it must be concludi debeat, quod communicant inferred that they participate of the in materia cum iis rebus matter of the natural objects which naturalibus, a quibus fugantur, et ex have the power of putting them to consequenti corpore sint præditi, flight, and consequently they have a quod est intentum. body; that is what was to be shown.

74. Et magis conclusio firmatur, si 74. But, the better to establish our impugnetur sententia Doctorum conclusion, it behoves to impugn the supracitatorum, dicentium, Incubum mistake into which have fallen the abactum a Sara fuisse vi Angeli Doctors above-quoted, such as Raphaelis, non vero jecoris piscis Vallesius and Cornelius a Lapide, callionymi, qualis fuit piscis a Tobia when they say that Sarah was rid apprehensus ad ripam Tigris, ut cum from the Incubus by the virtue of the Vallesio, Sacr. Philos., c. 42., scribit Angel Raphael, and not by that of Cornelius a Lap. in Tob. c. 6. v. 2., § the callionymous fish caught by Quarto ergo: salva enim tantorum Tobit on the banks of the Tigris. Doctorum reverentia, talis expositio Indeed, saving the reverence due to manifeste adversatur sensui patentis such great doctors, such a Textus, a quo nullo modo construction manifestly clashes with recedendum est dummodo non the clear meaning of the Text, from sequantur absurda. En verba Angeli which it is never justifiable to ad Tobiam: “Cordis ejus particulam, deviate, so long as it does not lead to si super carbones ponas, fumus ejus absurd consequences. Here are the extricat omne genus Dæmoniorum, words spoken by the Angel to sive a viro, sive a muliere, ita ut Tobias: "If thou puttest on coals a ultra non accedant ad eos, et felparticle of its heart, the smoke valet ad unguendos oculos, inthereof will expel all kinds of quibus fuerit albugo, et sanabuntur." Demons, whether from man or (Tob., c. 6. v. 8. et 9.) Notetur, woman, so that they shall never quæso, assertio Angeli absoluta, et return, and its gall is good for universalis de virtute cordis, seu anointing eyes that have whiteness, jecoris, et fellis illius piscis: non and healing them." (Tobit, c. 6, v. 8 enim dicit: Si pones particulas and 9). Pray notice that the Angel's cordis ejus super carbones, fugabis assertion respecting the virtue of the omne genus Dæmoniorum, et si heart or liver and gall of that fish is felle unges oculos, in quibus fuerit absolute, universal; for, he does not albugo, sanabuntur: si enim ita say: "If thou puttest on coals dixisset, congrua esset expositio, particles of its heart, thou wilt put to quod nempe Raphael supernaturali flight all kinds of Demons, and if sua virtute illos effectus patrasset, thou anointest with its gall eyes that ad quos perficiendos inepta esset have a whiteness, they shall be applicatio fumi, et fellis: sed non ita healed." If he had thus spoken, I loquitur, sed ait talem esse virtutem could agree with the construction fumi, et fellis absolute.

that Raphael had brought about, by his own supernatural virtue, the effects which the mere application of the smoke and the gall might not have sufficed to produce: but he does not speak thus, and, on the contrary, says absolutely, that such is the virtue of the smoke and the gall.

75. Quæro modo, an Angelus 75. It may be asked whether the veritatem puram dixerit de virtute Angel spoke the precise truth rerum, an mentiri potuerit; pariter regarding the virtue of those things, an albugo ab oculis Tobiae senioris or whether he might have lied; and ablata sit vi naturali fellis piscis, aut likewise, whether the whiteness was virtute supernaturali Angeli withdrawn from the eyes of the Raphaelis? Angelum mentiri elder Tobit by the native force of the potuisse blasphemia hæreticalis est; gall of the fish, or by the sequitur igitur puram veritatem supernatural virtue of the Angel fuisse ab eo assertam; talis autem Raphael? To say that the Angel non esset, si omne genus could have lied would be an Dæmoniorum non extricaretur a heretical blasphemy; he therefore fumo jecoris piscis nisi addita vis spoke the precise truth; but it would supernaturali Angeli, maxime, sino longer be so if all kinds of hæc esset causa principalis talis Demons were not expelled by the effectus, quemadmodum scribunt de smoke of the liver of the fish, unless hoc casu Doctores. Mentiretur aided by the supernatural force of absque dubio medicus qui diceret: the Angel, and especially, if such aid talis herba curat taliter pleuritidem, was the principal cause of the effect sive epilepsiam, ut amplius non produced, as the Doctors assert in revertatur: si herba illa non curaret the present case. It would doubtless illas ægritudines nisi inchoate, et be a lie if a physician should say: perfecta illarum sanatio esset ab such an herb radically cures pleurisy alia herba conjuncta priori; sic pari or epilepsy, and if it should only modo mentitus fuisset Raphael, begin the cure, the completion of asserens fumum jecoris extricare which required the addition of omne genus Dæmoniorum ita ut another herb to the one first used; in ultra non accedant, si talis effectus the same manner, Raphael would esset a fumo solum inchoate, have lied when averring that the principaliter vero, et perfecte a smoke of the liver expelled all kinds virtute Angeli. Præterea talis fuga of demons, so that they should not Dæmonis, vel secutura erat return, if that result had been only universaliter, et semper posito jecore begun by the smoke, and its piscis super carbones a quoquam, completion had been principally due vel debebat sequi in illo solummodo to the virtue of the Angel. Besides, casu particulari, jecore incusso a that flight of the demon was either juniore Tobia. Si primum, ergo to take place universally and by any oportet, quod cuicumque tale one whomsoever putting the liver of fumum per accensionem jecoris the fish on the coals, or else it was paranti, assistat Angelus qui only to occur in that particular case, supernaturali virtute Dæmonem the younger Tobit putting the liver miraculose abigat regulariter; et on. In the first hypothesis, any hoc est absurdum; ad positionem person making that smoke by enim rei naturalis deberet burning the liver should be assisted regulariter sequi miraculum, quod by an Angel, who, through his est incongruum, et si absque Angeli supernatural virtue should expel the operatione fuga Dæmonis non Demons miraculously and regularly sequeretur, mentitus fuisset Raphael at the same time; which is absurd; asserens eam esse virtutem jecoris. for, either words have no meaning, Si autem effectus ille sequi non or a natural fact cannot be regularly debeat, nisi in illo casu particulari, followed by a miracle; and, if the mentitus fuisset Angelus enuncians Demon was not put to flight without universaliter virtutem piscis, in the assistance of the Angel, Raphael fugando omni Dæmoniorum genere, would have lied when ascribing that quod non est dicendum.

virtue to the liver. If, on the contrary, that effect was only to be brought about in that particular case, Raphael would again have lied when assigning to that fish, universally and absolutely, the virtue of expelling the Demon: now, to say that the Angel lied is not possible.

76. Uterius albugo oculorum 76. The whiteness was withdrawn detracta est ab oculis Tobiaë from the eyes of the elder Tobit, and senioris, et ipsius cæcitas sanata est his blindness healed, through the a virtute naturali fellis piscis illius, native virtue of the gall of that same ut Doctores affirmant (Liran. fish, as Doctors aver. In fact, that the Dyonisius; et Seraci. apud Cornel. gall of the callionymous fish, which in Tobi., c. 6. v. 9). Piscis enim the Italians call bocca in capo, and Callionymus, qui vocatur Italice of which Tobias made use, is a bocca in capo, et quo usus est highly renowned remedy for Tobias, fel habet pro celeberrimo removing the whiteness from the remedio ad detegendas albugines eyes, all are agreed, Dioscorides, oculorum, ut scribunt concorditer Galen, Pliny, Aclanius, Vallesius, Dioscorides, l. 1. c. 96., Galenus, etc. The Greek Text of Tobit, c. 11, De Simpl. Medicam., Plinius, l. 32. v. 13, says: “He poured the gall on c. 7., Aclanius, De Ver. Histor., l. 13. his father’s eyes, saying: Have c. 14., et Vallesius, De Sacr. Philos., confidence, father; but, there being c. 47. Textus Græcus Tobiaë, c. 11. v. erosion, the old man rubbed his 13., habet: “Inspersit fel super eyes, and the scales of the whiteness oculos patris sui, dicens: Confide, came out at the corners.” Now,

Pater; ut autem erosi sunt, detrivitsince, according to the same text, oculos suos, et disquamatae sunt abthe Angel had disclosed to Tobias angulis oculorum albugines.” *Cum*the virtue of the liver and gall of the *igitur eodem contextu Angelus*fish, and since, through its native *aperuerit Tobiae virtutem jecoris, et*virtue, the gall cured the elder *fellis piscis, et hoc sua naturali*Tobit’s blindness, it must be inferred *virtute caecitatem Tobiae senioris*that it was likewise through its *curaverit, concludendum est, quod*native force that the smoke of the *etiam fumus jecoris sua naturali*viliver put the Incubus to flight; which *Incubum fugaverit: quod*inference is conclusively confirmed *concludenter confirmatur a Textu*by the Greek text, which, Tobit, c. 8, *Græco, qui ad Tobiae c. 8. v. 2., ubi*v. 2, instead of the reading in the *Vulgata habet: “Partem jecoris*Vulgate: “He laid a part of the liver posuit super carbones vivos”, sicon burning coals”, says explicitly: habet: “Accepit cinerem, sive“He took the ashes of the perfumes, *prunam thimiamatum, et imposuit*and put the heart and the liver of the *cor piscis, et hepar, fumumque fecit,*fish thereupon, and made a smoke *et quando odoratus est Dæmon*therewith; the which smell when the *odores, fugit.” Et Textus Hebraicus*evil spirit had smelled, he fled.” The *ita cantat: “Percepit Asmodeus*Hebrew text says: “Asmodeus *odorem, et fugit.” Ex quibus textibus*smelled the smell, and fled.” From *apparet, quod Dæmon fugit ad*all those texts it appears that the *perceptionem fumi, sibi contrarii, ac*Demon took to flight on smelling a *nocentis, non autem a virtute Angelis*smoke which was prejudicial and *supernaturali. Quod si in tali*hurtful to himself, and nowise from *liberatione Saræ ab impetitione*the supernatural virtue of the Angel.
*Incubi Asmodei, ultra fumum jecoris*If, in ridding Sarah from the assaults *intervenit operatio Raphaelis, hoc*of the Incubus Asmodeus, the *fuit in alligatione Dæmonis in*operation of the smoke of the liver *deserto superioris Ægypti, ut dicitur*was followed by the intervention of *c. 8. v. 3. Tobiae; fumus quippe*Raphael, it was in order to bind the *jecoris nequibat in tanta distantia*Demon in the wilderness of High-*agere in Dæmonem, aut illum*Egypt, as related, Tobit, c. 8, v. 3; *alligare. Quod inservire potest pro*for, at such a distance, the smoke of *concordia supracitatorum Doctorum*the liver could neither operate on the *(qui voluerunt Saram perfecte*Demon, nor bind him. And here we *liberatam a Dæmone*virtutehave the means of reconciling our Raphaelis) cum sententia, quam opinion with that of the abovetuemur: dico enim, quod ipsi mentioned Doctors, who ascribe to senserint quod perfecta curatio Raphael's power Sarah's complete Saræ a Dæmone fuerit in alligatione riddance from the Demon: for, I say ejus in deserto, quæ fuit ab Angelo, with them, that the cure of Sarah quod et nos concedimus; sed was completed by the binding of the extricatio, sive fugatio ejusdem a Demon in the wilderness, the deed cubiculo Saræ fuerit a vi innativa of the Angel; which I concede; but I jecoris piscis, quod nos tuemur. maintain that the deliverance properly called, that is to say, the ejection from Sarah's bed-room, was the direct effect of the virtue of the liver of the fish.

77. Probatur tertio principaliter 77. A third principal proof of our nostra conclusio de existentia talium conclusion regarding the existence animalium, seu de Incuborum of those animals, in other words, corporeitate, ex auctoritate D. respecting the corporeity of Incubi, Hieronymi, in vita S. Pauli primi is adduced by the testimony of St Eremitæ. Refert is D. Antonium iter Hieronymus, in his Life of St Paul, per desertum arripuisse, ut ad the first Hermit. St Anthony, says visendum D. Paulum perveniret, et he, set on a journey to visit St Paul. post nonnullas diætas itineris After travelling several days, he met Centaurum reperiisse, a quo cum a Centaur, of whom he inquired the fuisset percontatus mentionem D. hermit's abode; whereupon the Pauli, et ille barbarum quid Centaur, growling some uncouth and infrendens potius, quam proloquens, scarcely intelligible answer, shew dextræ protensione manus iter D. the way with his out-stretched hand, Antonio demonstrasset, in sylvam se and fled with the utmost speed into a abdidit cursu concitatissimo. wood. The Holy Abbot kept on his Prosecutus iter S. Abbas in quadam way, and, in a dale, met a little man, valle invenit haud grandem almost a dwarf, with crooked hands, quemdam homunculum, aduncum horned brow, and his lower manibus, fronte cornibus asperata, extremities ending with goat's feet. cujus extrema pars corporis in At the sight of him, St Anthony caprarum pedes desinebat. Ad ejus stood still, and fearing the arts of the aspectum substitit Antonius, et Devil, comforted himself with a sign timens Diaboli artes signo Sanctæ of the Cross. But, far from running Crucis se munivit. Ad tale signum away, or even seeming frightened at nec fugit, nec metuit homuncio ille, it, the little fellow respectfully immo ad sanctum senem actu humili approached the old man, and appropinquans, palmarum fructus tendered him, as a peace offering, ad viaticum quasi pacis obsides illi dates for his journey. The blessed St offerebat. Tum B. Antonius quisnam Anthony having then inquired who esset interrogans, hoc ab eo he was: “I am a mortal,” replied he, responsum accepit: Mortalis ego “and one of the inhabitants of the sum, et unus ex accolis Eremiti, quos Wilderness, whom Gentility, under vario errore delusa Gentilitas its varied delusions, worships under Faunos, Satyros, et Incubos vocant the names of Fauns, Satyrs and colit; legatione fungor gregis mei; Incubi; I am on a mission from my precamur, ut pro nobis communem flock: we request thee to pray for us Deum deprecari, quem pro salute unto the common God, whom we mundi venisse cognovimus, et know to have come for the salvation universam terram exiit sonus ejus.” of the world, and whose praises are Ad quæ gaudens D. Antonius desouded all over the earth.”

gloria Christi, conversus ad Rejoicing at the glory of Christ, St Alexandriam, et baculo terram Anthony, turning his face towards percutiens, ait: “Veh tibi, Civitas Alexandria, and striking the ground meretrix, quæ pro diis animalia with his staff, cried out: “Woe be veneraris!” Hæc D. Hieronymus, qui unto thee, thou harlot City, who late prosequitur hoc factum, ipsius worships animals as Gods!” Such virtutem longo comprobans is the narrative of St Hieronymus, sermone. who expatiates at length on the fact, explaining its import in a long discourse.

78. De hujus historiæ veritate 78. It were indeed rash to doubt the dubitare temerarium est, cum eam truth of the above recital, constantly constanter referat SS. Ecclesiæ referred to by the greatest of the Doctores maximus D. Hieronymus, Doctors of the Holy Church, St de cujus auctoritate nullus Hieronymus, whose authority no Catholicus dubitabit. Addit fol. 21. Catholic will ever deny. Let us 25. Notandæ proinde veniunt illius therefore investigate the circumstantiæ, quæ sententiam circumstances thereof which most nostram evidentissime confirmant. clearly confirm our opinion.

79. Primo notandum est, quod si 79. Firstly, we must observe that if ullus Sanctorum artibus Dæmonis ever a Saint was assailed by the arts impetitus fuit; si ullus diversas ejus of the Demon, saw through his artes nocendi calluit; si ullus infernal devices, and carried off victorias, ac illustria de eodem victories and trophies from the trophaea reportavit, is fuit D. contest, that Saint was St Anthony, Antonius, ut constat ex ejus vita a D. as is shown by his life written by St Athanasio descripta. Dum igitur D. Athanasius. Now, since in that little Antonius homunculum illum non man St Anthony did not recognize a tanquam Diabolum agnovit, sed devil but an animal, saying: “Woe be animal intitulavit, dicens: Veh tibi, unto thee, thou harlot City, who Civitas meretrix, quæ pro Diis worshipest animals as Gods!”, it is animalia veneraris! convincitur, clear that it was no devil or pure quod ille nullo modo fuit Diabolus, spirit ejected from heaven and seu purus spiritus de cælo dejectus, damned, but some kind of animal. ac damnatus, sed aliquod aliud Still more: St Anthony, when animal. Et confirmatur, quia D. instructing his friars and cautioning Antonius erudiens suos monachos, them against the assaults of the eosque animans ad metuendas Demon, said to them, as related in Dæmonis violentias, aiebat, prout the Roman Breviary (Festival of St habetur in lectionibus Breviarii Anthony, Abbot, b. I): “Believe me, Romani in festo S. Antonii Abb. l. my brethren, Satan dreads the vigils 1., quæ recitantur in festo ipsius: of pious men, their prayers, fasts, “>Mihi credite, Fratres, pertimescit voluntary poverty, compassion and Satanas piorum vigiliis, orationes, humility; but, above all, he dreads jejunia, voluntariam paupertatem, their burning love of our Lord misericiordiam, et humilitatem; Christ, at the mere sign of whose maxime vero ardentem amorem in most Holy Cross he flies disabled.” Christum Dominum, cujus unico As the little man, against whom St Sanctissimæ Crucis signo debilitatus Anthony guarded himself with a fugit.” Dum igitur homunculus ille, sign of the Cross, neither took fright contra quem D. Antonius Crucis nor fled, but approached the Saint signo se munivit, ad ejus aspectum confidently and humbly, offering nec pavit, nec fugit, immo him some dates, it is a sure sign that confidenter, humiliter que accessit he was no Devil. ad eum dactalos illi offerens, signum

est, illum nullo modo Diabolum fuisse.

80. Secundo notandum, quod 80. Secondly, we must observe that homunculus ille dixit: Mortalis et ego sum; ex quibus verbis docemur, mortal”, whence it follows that he quod ille erat animal morti was an animal subject to death, and obnoxium, et proinde, quod per consequently called into being generationem esse accepit: spiritus through generation; for, an enim immaterialis immortalis est, immaterial spirit is immortal, quia simplex, et ideo non accipit because simple, and consequently is esse per generationem ex not called into being through præjacente materia, sed per generation from preexistent matter, creationem; unde nec amittit esse but through creation, and, per corruptionem, quæ dicitur mors, consequently also, cannot lose it sed per annihilationem tantum through the corruption called death; potest desinere esse. Quod si ille se its existence can only come to an mortalem esse dixit, professus est se end through annihilation. Therefore, esse animal.

when saying he was mortal, he professed himself an animal.

81. Tertio notandum, quod ait se 81. Thirdly, we must observe that he cognovisse communem Deum in said he knew that the common God carne humana fuisse passum. Ex his had suffered in human flesh. Those verbis convincitur illud fuisse words show him to have been a animal rationale: siquidem brutar rational animal, for brutes know nihil agnoscunt, nisi sensibile et nothing but what is sensible and præsens, unde ab ipsis Deus nullo present, and can therefore have no modo cognosci potest. Quod si knowledge of God. If that little man homunculus ille ait, se cum aliis suis said that he and his fellows were cognovisse Deum in carne humana aware of God having suffered in passum, hoc probat, quod aliquo human flesh, it shows that, by revelante habuit notitiam de Deo, means of some revelation, he had sicut etiam nos habemus de illo acquired the notion of God, as we fidem revelatam; pariter que Deum have ourselves the revealed faith. carnem humanam assumpsisse, et in That God assumed human flesh and ea passum: quæ duo sunt articuli suffered in it, is the essence of the nostræ Fidei principales, nempe Dei two principal articles of our Faith: unius, et trini existentia, et ipsius the existence of God one and

Incarnatio, Passio, et Resurrectio; threefold, His Incarnation, Passion ex quibus omnibus habetur, ut and Resurrection. All that shows, as dicebam, illud fuisse animal I said, that it was a rational animal, rationale capax divinæ cognitionis, capable of the knowledge of God per revelationem, ut nos, et proinde through revelation, like ourselves, pollens anima rationali, et ex and endowed with a rational, and *consequenti immortal*i. consequently, immortal soul.

82. Quarto notandum, quod oraverit 82. Fourthly, we must observe that, nomine omnium gregis sui, cujus in the name of his whole flock legatione fungi se profitebatur, D. whose delegate he professed to be, Antonium, ut communem Deum pro he besought St Anthony to pray for illis deprecaretur. Ex his deducitur, them to the common God. quod homunculus ille capax erat Wherefrom I infer that that little beatitudinis, et damnationis, et quod man was capable of beatitude and non erat in termino, sed in via: ex damnation, and that he was not in hoc enim, quod, ut supra probatum termino but in via; for, from his est, se prodidit rationalem, et anima being, as has been shown above, immortali consequenter donatum, rational and consequently endowed consequens est, quod et beatitudinis, with an immortal soul, it flows that et damnationis capax sit: hæc enim he was capable of beatitude and propria passio est Creaturæ damnation, the proper share of every rationalis, ut constat ex natura rational Creature, Angel or man. I angelica, et humana. Item deducitur, likewise infer that he was on the quod ipse erat in via, et proinde way, in via, that is, capable of merit capax meriti, et demeriti: si enim and demerit; for, if he had been at fuisset in termino, fuisset vel beatus, the goal, in termino, he would have vel damnatus; neutrum autem potuit been either blessed or damned. Now, esse, quia orationes D. Antonii, he could be neither the one nor the quibus se commendabat, ipsi nullo other; for, St Anthony's prayers, to modo prodesse potuissent, si fuisset which he commended himself, could finaliter damnatus; et si beatus have been of no assistance to him, if fuisset, illis non equisset. Quod ipsi finally damned, and, if blessed, he se commendavit, signum est eas sibi stood in no need of them. Since he prodesse potuisse, et proinde ipsum commended himself to those fuisse in statu viæ, et meriti. prayers, it shows they could be of avail to him, and, consequently, that he was on the way to salvation, in statu viæ et meriti.

83. Quinto notandum, quod 83. Fifthly, we must observe that the homunculus ille professus est, se little man professed to be delegated esse legatum aliorum suæ speciei, by others of his kind, when saying: dum dixit legatione fungor gregis “I am on a mission from my flock”, mei, ex quibus verbis plura words from which many inferences deducuntur. Unum est, quod may be deduced. One is, that the homunculus ille non solus erat, unde little man was not alone of his kind, potuisset credi monstrum raro an exceptional and solitary monster, contingens, sed quod plures erant but that there were many of the ejusdem speciei; tum quia simul same species, since congregating congregati gregem faciebant; tum they made up a flock, and that he quia nomine omnium veniebat: quod came in the name of all; which esse non posset si multorum could not have been, had not the voluntates in illum non will of many centred in him. convenissent. Aliud est, quod isti Another is, that those animals lead a profitentur vitam socialem: ex quo social life, since one of them was nomine multorum unus ex ipsis in the name of many. Another missus est. Aliud est, quod quamvis again is, that, although living in the dicantur habitare in Eremo, non Wilderness, it is not assigned to tamen in eo fixa est eorum them as a permanent abode; for St permanentia: siquidem cum D. Anthony having never previously Antonius in illa eremo alias non been in that desert, which was far fuisse (distabat enim illa per multas distant from his hermitage, they dietas ab eremo D. Antonii), scire could not have known who he was non potuerunt quisnam ille esset nor what his degree of sanctity; it cujusve sanctitatis; necessarium was therefore necessary that they igitur fuit, quod alibi eum should have become acquainted cognoverint, et ex consequenti extra with him elsewhere, and, desertum illum vagaverint. consequently, that they should have travelled beyond that wilderness.

84. Ultimo notandum, quod 84. Lastly, we must observe that the homunculus ille ait esse ex iis, quos little man said he was one of those cæco errore delusa Gentilitas whom the Gentiles, blinded by error, Faunos, Satyros et Incubos call Fauns, Satyrs and Incubi: and appellant; et ex his verbis by these words is shown the truth of convincitur nostrum intentum our principal proposition: that principale, Incubos nempe esse Incubi are rational animals, capable animalia rationalia beatitatis, et of beatitude and damnation. damnationis capacia.

85. Talium homuncionum frequens 85. The apparition of such little men est apparitio in metallorum fodinis, is of frequent occurrence in metallic ut scribit Gregorius Agricola, lib. mines, as is written by Gregorius De Animal. subterranean., prope finem. Agricola in his book De Animal. Isti nempe coram fossoribus subterranean. They appear to the minerarum comparent induti habitu, miners, clothed like themselves, qualem habent fossores ipsi, et play and caper together, laugh and jocantur inter se, tripudiantque, ac titter, and throw little stones at them rident et cachinnantur, parvosque for the sake of amusement: a sign, lapides joco mittunt in metallarios, says the above-named Author, of et tunc signum est, ait Auctor excellent success, and of the finding prædictus, optimi proventus, ac of some branch or body of a mineral inventionis alicujus rami, aut trunci tree. principalis arboris mineralis.

86. Tales homunculos subterraneos 86. Peter Thyraeus, of Neuss, in his negat Petrus Thyraeus Novesianus, book De Terrification. nocturn., lib. De Terrificatio. Nocturn., c. 2., denies the existence of such little per totum, nixus argumentis sane men, and supports his denial upon puerilibus, quæ sunt hæc: si the following truly puerile darentur hujusmodi homunciones, arguments: given such little men, ubinam degunt, et quænam, et ubi says he, where do they live, how and habent sua domicilia, qua ratione where do they dwell? How do they genus suum conservant, si per keep up their kind, through generationem, aut quomodo? si generation or otherwise? Are they oriantur, et intereant, quo cibo vitam born, do they die, with what food do suam sustentent; si beatitudinis, et they sustain themselves? Are they damnationis capaces sint, et quibus capable of beatitude and damnation, mediis propriam salutem and by what means do they procure consequantur? Hæc sunt argumenta their salvation? Such are the Thyræi, quibus per motus negat arguments upon which Thyraeus talem existentiam. relies for denying that existence.

87. Sed viri parum cordati est 87. But it really shows little negare id, quod graves Auctores, judgment in a man, to deny that fideque digni scribunt, quodque which has been written by grave and quotidiana constat experientia. credible Authors, and confirmed by Argumenta Thyræi nec minimum every day experience. Thyræus's cogunt, ac ea solvimus supra a n^o arguments are worthless and have 45. et seq. Remanet solum been already refuted, N^{rs} 45 and satisfacere quæstioni ubinam following. The only question which locorum habitent hujusmodi remains to be answered is this:

homunculi, seu Incubi? Ad quod where do those little men, or Incubi, dico, quod ut supra dedimus n^o 71. dwell? To that I reply: as has been ex Guaccio, istorum alii sunt terrei, shown above (N^r 71), according to alii aquei, alii aerei, alii ignei, Guaccius, some are earthly, some quorum nempe corpora, aut aqueous, some aerial, some igneous, constant ex talium elementorum that is to say, that their bodies are subtiliori parte, sive licet ex made of the most subtle part of one pluribus constant elementis, of the elements, or, if of the prævalet tamen in iis, aut aqua, aut combination of many elements, that aer pro ipsorum natura. Mansiones yet there is one which predominates, igitur, et domicilia eorum erunt in either water or air, according to their elemento illo cujus natura in eorum nature. Their dwellings will corporibus prævalet: ignei enim nisi consequently be found in that violenter, et forte nullomodo in element which is prevalent in their aquis aut locis palustribus bodies: igneous Incubi, for instance, morabuntur, cum hæc sint sibi will only stay forcibly, may be will contraria, nec aquei ad superiorem not stay at all, in water or marshes, ætheris partem ascendere poterunt which are adverse to them; and ob sibi repugnantem regionis illius aqueous Incubi will not be able to subtilitatem, quod etiam videmus rise into the upper part of ether, the accidere hominibus, qui ad subtlety of which region is quorundam Alpium summa jugare repugnant to them. We see the like pervenire nequeunt præ summa happen to men who, accustomed to aeris subtilitate, quæ homines thicker air, cannot reach certain lofty crassiori aeri assuetos nutrire ridges of the Alps where the air is nequit. too subtle for their lungs.

88. Pluribus sanctorum Patrum 88. Many testimonies of Holy auctoritatibus, quas congerit Molina Fathers, gathered by Molina, in his in p. p. D. Thom., q. 50., ar. 1. circa Commentary of St Thomas, would med., probare possemus Dæmonum go to prove the corporeity of corporeitatem; quæ tamen stante Concilio the above-quoted decision of the determinatione Lateranensis de incorporeitate Council of Lateran (N^r 37), Angelorum, ut dictum fuit supra n^o concerning the incorporeity of 37., exponi debent de Dæmonibus Angels, we must understand that the istis Incubis, ac viatoribus adhuc, Holy Fathers had in view those non autem de Damnatis. Tamen ne Incubi Demons which are still on nimis longus sim, solius D. the way to salvation, and not those Augustini, summi Ecclesiæ Doctoris, that are damned. However, to make auctoritates damus, quibus matters short, we merely give the evidenter convincitur illum fuisse in authority of St Austin, that eminent sententia, quam nos docemus. Doctor of the Church, and it will be clearly seen how thoroughly his doctrine harmonizes with ours.

89. D. Augustinus igitur, lib. 2. super 89. St Austin, then, in his Genesim ad litteram c. 17. de Commentary on Genesis, book 2, Dæmonibus, sic habet: “Quædam ch. 17, writes as follows concerning vera nosse, partim quia subtiliore Demons: “They have the knowledge sensus acumine, partim quia of some truths, partly through the subtilioribus corporibus vigent,” et more subtle acumen of their senses, lib. 3. c. 1., “etsi Dæmones aerea partly through the greater subtilty of sunt animalia, quoniam corporum their bodies”, and, book 3, ch. 1: aereorum natura vigent.” Et Epistola “Demons are aerial animals, 115. ad Hebridium affirmat, eos esse because they partake of the nature “animantia aerea, seu ætherea of aerial bodies.” In his Epistle 115 acerrimi sensus.” Et de Civit. Dei to Hebridius, he affirms that they are lib. 11. c. 23., affirmat “Dæmonem “aerial or ethereal animals, pessimum habere corpus aereum.” endowed with very sharp senses.” In Et lib. 21. c. 10. scripsit: “Sunt sua the City of God, book 11, ch. 13, he quædam etiam Dæmonibus corpora, says that “the worst Demon has an sicut doctis hominibus visum est, ex aerial body”. Book 21, ch. 10, he isto aere crasso et humido.” Et lib. writes: “The bodies of certain 17. c. 23. ait “se non audere Demons, as has been believed by definire, an Angeli corpore aereo, ita some learned men, are even made of corporati possint etiam hanc pati the thick and damp air which we libidinem, ut quomodo possint, breathe.” Book 15, ch. 23: “He sentientibus fœminis misceantur.” Et dares not define whether Angels, in Enarrat. in Psal. 85. ait “corpora with an aerial body, could feel the beatorum futura postlust which would incite them to resurrectionem, qualia sunt corpora communicate with women.” In his Angelorum;” et in Enarrat. in Psal. commentary on Psalm 85, he says 45. ait “corpus Angelicum inferius that “the bodies of the blessed will, esse anima.” Et lib. De Divinit. after resurrection, be like unto the Dæmonum, passim per totum, bodies of Angels;” Psalm 14, he maxime c. 23., docet “Dæmones observes that “the body of Angels is subtilia habere corpora.” inferior to the soul.” And, in his book De Divinit. Dæmonum, he every-where, and especially ch. 23, teaches that “Demons have subtle bodies”.

90. Potest etiam sententia nostra 90. Our doctrine can also be auctoritatibus Sacræ Scripturæ confirmed by the testimony of the comprobari, quæ licet ab Holy Scriptures, which, however Expositoribus aliter declarentur, non diversely construed by incongrue tamen ad nostrum commentators, are yet capable of intentum possunt aptari. Prima est adaptation to our proposition. First, Psalmi 77., v. 24. et 25., ubi Psalm 77, v. 24 and 25, it is said: habetur: panem Angelorum “The Lord had given them of the manducavit homo, panem cæli dedit bread of heaven; man did eat eis. Hic loquitur David de Manna, angels’ food.” David here alludes to qua cibatus fuit Populus Israel toto Manna, which fed the People of tempore quo peregrinus fuit in Israel during the whole time that deserto. Quærendum ergo venit, quo they wandered in the wilderness. It sensu Manna dici possit panis will be asked in what sense it can be Angelorum. Scio quidem plerosque said of Manna that it is the Bread of Doctor es exponere hunc passum in Angels. I am aware that most sensu mystico, aientes in Manna Doctors construe this passage in a figuratam esse Sacram mystical sense, saying that Manna Eucharistiam, quæ vocatur panis figures the Holy Eucharist, which is Angelorum, quia Angeli fruuntur styled the bread of Angels, because visione Dei, qui per concomitantiam Angels enjoy the sight of God who, in Eucharistia reperitur. by concomitance, is found in the Eucharist.

91. Sed hæc expositio aptissima est 91. A most proper construction quidem, et quam amplectitur assuredly, and which is adopted by Ecclesia in officio Sanctissimi the Church in the office of the Most Corporis Christi, sed in sensu Holy Body of Jesus-Christ; but it is spirituali est. Ego autem quæro in a spiritual sense. Now, what I sensum litteralem: neque enim in want, is the literal sense; for, in that illo Psalmo David loquitur Psalm, David does not speak, as a propheticæ de futuris, sicut facit in prophet, of things to be, as he does aliis locis, ut proinde facile non sit in other places where a literal sense sensum litteralem habere; sed is not easily to be gathered; he loquitur historice de præteritis. Ille speaks here as a historian, of things enim Psalmus, ut patet legenti, est gone by. That Psalm, as is evident to pura anacephalestis, seu whoever reads it, is a pure compendium omnium beneficiorum, anacephalæosis, or summing up of quæ contulit Deus Populo Hebræo all the benefits conferred by God on ab egressu ipsius de Ægypto, usque the Hebrew People from the exodus ad tempus Davidis, et in eo versu from Egypt to the days of David, loquitur de Manna Deserti, ut and the Manna of the Wilderness is proinde quærat quomodo, et quo spoken of in it; how, and in what sensu Manna vocetur Panis sense is it styled the Bread of Angelorum. Angels? that is the question.

92. Scio alios, Lyræ., Euthim., 92. I am aware that others look upon Bellarm., Titelman., Genebrard., in the Bread of Angels as bread Psal. 77. v. 24. et 25., interpretari prepared by Angels, or sent down Panem Angelorum Panem ab from Heaven by the ministry of Angelis paratum, seu Angelorum Angels. But Cardinal Hugo explains ministerio a Cælo demissum; that qualification by saying that that Hugonem autem Cardinalem Panem food partly produced the same effect Angelorum exponere: quia ille cibus upon the Jews, which the food of hoc efficiebat in Judæis, quod in Angels produces upon the latter. Angelis efficit cibus illorum, pro Angels, in fact, are not liable to any parte: Angeli enim non incurrunt infirmity; on the other hand Hebrew infirmiorem. Voluerunt enim commentators, and Josephus expositores Hebræi, ut etiam himself, assert that whilst in the asseverat Josephus, quod Judæi in Wilderness, living upon Manna, the Deserto vescentes manna, nec Jews neither grew old, nor sickened, senescerent, nec ægrotarent, nec nor tired; so that Manna was like lassarentur; proinde illa esset unto the bread that Angels feed tanquam panis, quo vescuntur upon, who know neither old age, nor Angeli, qui nec senio, nec sickness, nor fatigue. ægritudine, nec lassitudine unquam laborant.

93. Istas quidem expositiones 93. These interpretations should recipere æquum est, utpote tantorum indeed be received with the respect Doctorum auctoritate suffultas. due to the authority of such eminent Facessit tamen difficultatem, quod Doctors. There is however one ministerio Angelorum Hebræis non difficulty in this: that, by the minus parata fuere columna nubis, ministry of Angels, the pillars of the et ignis, coturnices, et aqua de cloud and fire, the quails, and the petra, quam manna; nec tamen ista water from the rock were provided dicta fuere columna, aqua, aut potus for the Hebrews, no less than the Angelorum. Cur ergo potius vocari Manna; and yet they were not styled deberet manna, quia parata the pillar, the water or the beverage ministerio Angelorum, Panis of Angels. Why therefore should Angelorum, quam Potus Angelorum Manna be called Bread of Angels, aqua eorumdem ministerio saxo because provided by their ministry, educta? Insuper in sacra Scriptura when the qualification Beverage of panis dum dicitur panis alicujus, Angels is not given to the water dicitur panis ejus qui illo vescitur, drawn from the rock likewise by non ejus qui illum parat, aut their ministry? Besides, in Holy fabricat, et de hoc infinita habemus Scripture, when it is said of bread exempla in sacra Scriptura: ut that it is the bread of somebody, it is Exod. c. 23. v. 25. Benedicam always the bread of him who feeds panibus tuis, et aquis; lib. 2. Reg. c. on it, not of him who provides or 12. v. 3. De pane illius comedens; makes it. Of this there are Tob. c. 4, v. 17. Panem tuum cum numberless instances: thus, Exodus, egenis comede; et v. 18. Panem ch. 23, v. 25: “That I may bless thy tuum super sepulturam Justi bread and thy water;” Kings, book constitue; Ecclesiast. c. 11. v. 1.2, ch. 12, v. 3: “Eating of his bread;” Mitte panem tuum super transeuntes Tobit, ch. 4, v. 17: “Give of thy aquas; Isai. c. 58. v. 7. Frange bread to the hungry,” and v. 18: esurienti panem tuum; Jerem. c. 11. “Pour out thy bread on the burial of
v. 19. Mittamus lignum in panem the Just;” Ecclesiasticus, ch. 11, v. ejus; Matth. c. 15. v. 26. Non est 1: “Scatter thy bread over the bonum sumere panem filiorum; Luc. flowing waters;" Isaiah, ch. 58, v. 7: c. 11. v. 3. Panem nostrum "Deal thy bread to the hungry;" quotidianum. Ex quibus locis Jeremiah, ch. 11, v. 19: "Let us put patenter habetur, quod panis dicitur wood into his bread;" Matthew, ch. ejus qui eo vescitur, non vero, qui 15, v. 26: "It is not meet to take the ipsum conficit, affert, aut parat. children's bread;" Luke, ch. 11, v. 3: Commode igitur in loco citato "Our daily bread." All those Psalmi accipi potest Panis passages clearly show that, in Angelorum, cibus quo vescuntur Scripture, the bread of somebody is Angeli non quidem incorporei (isti the bread of him who feeds upon it, enim materiali cibo non egent), sed not of him who makes, brings or corporei, ista nempe rationali provides it. In the passage of the animalia, de quibus hucusque Psalm we have quoted, Bread of disseruimus, degentia in aere, et Angels may therefore easily be taken quæ ratione tenuitatis suorum to mean the food of Angels, not corporum, ac rationalis naturæ, incorporeal indeed, since these quam maxime ad Angelos require no material food, but immateriales accedunt, ut proinde corporeal, that is to say of those nuncupentur.

rational animals we have discoursed of, who live in the air, and, from the subtlety of their bodies and their rationality, approximate so closely to immaterial Angels as to fall under the same denomination.

94. Ducor, quia cum animalia sint, 94. I deduce that, being animals, et ideo generabilia et corruptibilia, consequently reproducible through egent cibo, ut restauretur substantia generation and liable to corruption, corporea, quæ per effluvia they require food for the restoration deperditur; vita enim sentientis non of their corporeal substance wasted consistit nisi in motu partium by effluvia: for the life of every corporearum quæ fluunt, ac sensible being consists in nothing refluent, acquiruntur, ac else but the motion of the corporeal deperduntur, ac iterum reparantur; elements which flow and ebb, are quæ reparatio fit per substantias acquired, lost and recruited by spirituosas, materiales tamen, means of substances spirituous, yet attractas a vivente, tum per aeris material, assimilated by the living inspirationem, tum parthing, either through the inhalation fermentationem cibi, per quam of air, or by the fermentation of food substantia illius spiritualizatur, ut which spiritualizes its substance, as rationatur doctissimus Ettmullerus, shown by the most learned Ettmuller Instit. Medic. Physiolog., c. 2. (Instit. Medic. Physiolog., ch. 2).

95. Quia autem eorum corpus tenue 95. But, their body being subtile, est, tenui pariter, et subtili eget equally subtile and delicate must be alimento. Hinc est quod sicut its food. And, just as perfumes and odoribus aliisque substantiis other vaporous and volatile vaporosis, ac volatilibus suæ naturæ substances, when adverse to their contrariis læduntur ac fugantur, ut nature, offend and put them to flight, constat ex historiis recitatis supra, as testified by what we related nº 71. et 72., ita paribus rebus sibi above (N^{rs} 71 and 72), in the like convenientibus delectantur, et manner, when agreeable, they aluntur. Porro “manna non est aliud, delight in and feed upon them. Now, quam halitus aquæ, terræque, solis as is written by Cornelius, “Manna calore exacte attenuatus et coctus, a nothing but an emanation of frigore secutæ noctis in unum water and earth, refined and baked coactus, densatusque,” ut scribit by the heat of the sun, and then Cornelius; manna dico, quam coagulated and condensed by the demissam de cælo comederunt cold of the following night;” of Hebræi, quæ toto cælo differt a course, I am speaking of the Manna manna nostrate, quæ in medicinis sent down from Heaven for the adhibetur; nam hæc, ut scribit nourishment of the Hebrews, and Ettmullerus Schroder. Dilucid. which differs all in all from nostrate Physiolog., c. 1. de Manna, fol. m. or medicinal manna; the latter, in 154., “nihil aliud est, quam succus fact, according to Ettmuller quarundam arborum tenuis, vel (Dilucid. Physiol., ch. 1), “is merely earum transsudatio, quæ nocturno the juice or transudation of certain tempore permixta cum rore, trees which, during the night, gets matutino tempore superventu caloris mixed up with dew, and, the next solis coagulatur, et inspissatur.” morning, coagulates and thickens in Manna autem Hebræorum diversis the heat of the sun.” The manna of orta principii calore solis non the Hebrews, on the contrary, coagulabatur, sed vice versa derived from other principles, far liquefiebat, ut patet ex Scriptura, from coagulating, liquefied in the Exod. c. 16. v. 22. Manna ergo heat of the sun, as is shown by Hebræorum utpote constans ex Scripture, Exodus, ch. 16, v. 22. The halitibus tenuibus terræ et aquæ, manna of the Hebrews was therefore perfecto tenuissimæ erat substantiæ, undoubtedly of a most subtle utpote, quæ a sole solvebatur, et substance, consisting as it did of disparebat; optime ergo potuit esse emanations of earth and water, and talium animalium cibus, ita ut being dissolved by the sun and made diceretur a David Panis Angelorum. to disappear: consequently, it may very well have been the food of the animals we are speaking of, and thus have been truly called by David Bread of Angels.

96. Alia auctoritas habetur in 96. We have another authority in the Evangelio Joannis, in quo, Gospel according to St John, ch. 10, Johannes, c. 10. v. 16., ita dicitur: v. 16, where it is said; “And other Alias oves habeo, quæ non sunt ex sheep I have, which are not of this hoc ovili, et illas oportet me fold: them also I must bring, and adducere, et vocem meam audient, they shall hear my voice, and there et fiet unum ovile, et unus Pastor. Si shall be one fold and one shepherd.” quæramus quænam sint oves, quæ If we inquire what are those sheep non sunt ex hoc ovili, et quænam which are not of that fold, and what sit ovile de quo loquitur Christus the fold of which the Lord Christ Dominus, respondent communiters speaketh, we are answered by all Expositores unum ovile Christi esse Commentators that the only fold of Ecclesiam, ad quam perducendi Christ is the Church to which the erant per prædicationem Evangelii preaching of the Gospel was to Gentiles, qui erant oves alterius bring the Gentiles, sheep of another ovilis, ab ovili Hebræorum: fold than that of the Hebrews. They opinantur enim Synagoga esse are, in fact, of opinion that the fold Christi ovile, quia dicebat David, of Christ was the Synagogue, Psal. 94. v. 9: Nos populus ejus et because David had said, Psalm 95, oves pascuæ ejus; et quia Messias v. 7: “We are the people of his promissus fuerat Abraham et David pasture, and the sheep of his hand”, oriturus ex eorum semine, et a and also because Abraham and populo Hebræo expectatus, et a David had been promised that the Prophetis qui Hebræi erant Messiah should be born of their vaticinatus, et ejus adventus, race, because he was expected by conversatio, passio, mors et the Hebrew people, foretold by the resurrectio in sacrificiis, cultu, et Prophets who were Hebrews, and ceremoniis Hebræorum legis erant that his advent, his acts, his passion, præfigurata. death and resurrection were prefigured in the sacrifices, worship and ceremonials of the Hebrew law.

97. Sed salva semper Sanctorum 97. But, saving always the reverence Patrum, ac aliorum Doctorum due to the Holy Fathers and other reverentia, non videtur talis Doctors, that explanation does not expositio ad plenum satisfacere. seem quite satisfactory. For it is an Habemus enim quod de fide est a article of belief that the Church of principio mundi Ecclesiam Fidelium the Faithful has been the only one in extitisse unam, usque ad finem existence from the beginning of the sæculi duraturam. Cujus Ecclesiæ world, and will thus endure to the caput est mediator Dei et hominum end of time. The head of that Church Christus Jesus, cujus is Jesus-Christ, the mediator contemplatione creata sunt between God and men, by whose universa, et omnia per ipsum facta. contemplation all things were made Fides enim unius Dei Trini (quamvis and created. Indeed, the faith in the non ita explicite), et Verbi divine Trinity, though less explicitly, Incarnatio revelata fuit primo and the Incarnation of the Word homini, et ab ipso edocti ejus filii, et were revealed to the first man, and ab iis descendentes. Hinc est quod by him taught his children, who, in quamvis plerique homines ad their turn, taught them their idolatriam deflexerint, ac veram descendants. And thus, although fidem deseruerint, multi tamen most men had strayed into idolatry veram fidem a patribus sibi traditam and deserted the true faith, many retinuerunt, et legem naturæ kept the faith they had received servantes in vera Ecclesia Fidelium from their fathers, and observing the permanserunt, ut observat law of nature, stayed in the true Cardinalis Toletus in Job, c. 10. v. Church of the Faithful, as is noticed 16., et apparet in Job, qui inter by Cardinal Tolet in reference to Gentiles Idolatras sanctus fuit. Job, who was a saint among Quamvis autem Deus populo idolatrous Gentiles. And, although Hebræo speciales favores contulerit, God had conferred especial favours peculiaremque legem, ac upon the Hebrew people, prescribed ceremonias illi præscripserit, ac a for them peculiar laws and Gentilibus segregaverit, non tamen ceremonials, and separated them ad eam legem Gentes tenebantur, from the Gentiles, yet those laws nec fideles Hebræi aliam Ecclesiam were not obligatory on the Gentiles, constituebant ab Ecclesia and the faithful Hebrews did not Gentilium, qui fidem unius Dei et constitute a Church different from Messiae venturi profitebantur. that of the Gentiles who professed their faith in one God and the coming of the Messiah.

98. Hinc est, quod etiam ex 98. And thus it came to pass that Gentilibus fuere, qui Christi even among the Gentiles there were adventum, et alia Christianæ fidei some who prophesied the advent of dogmata prophetarunt, ut patet de Christ and the other dogmas of the Balaam, Mercurio Trismegisto, Christian faith, to wit Balaam, Hydaspe, ac Sibyllis, de quibus Mercurius Trismegistus, Hydaspes, loquitur Lactantius, lib. 1. c. 6., ut and the Sibyls mentioned by scribit Cardinalis Baronius in Lactantius, book 1, ch. 6, as written Apparatu Annal. n^o 18. Et quod by Baronius, Apparat. Annal., n^o 18. Messias erat a Gentilibus expectatus That the Messiah was expected by habet Isaias in pluribus locis, et the Gentiles is shown by many luculentum testimonium de hoc est passages of Isaiah, and plainly prophetia Patriarchæ Jacob testified by the prophecy of Jacob, Messia, quæ sic ait, Gen. c. 49. v. the Patriarch, thus worded, Genesis, 10: Non auferetur sceptrum de Juda, ch. 49, v. 10: “The sceptre shall not et dux de femore ejus, donec veniat depart from Judah, nor a law-giver qui mittendus est, et ipse erit from between his feet, until Shiloh expectatio Gentium. Item Prophetia (he who is to be sent) come, and Aggæi, c. 2. v. 8: Movebo omnes unto him shall the gathering of the Gentes, et veniet desideratus cunctis people be.”—Likewise in the gentibus, quem locum explicans prophecy of Haggai, ch. 2, v. 8: “I Cornelius a Lap. in Aggæ. c. 2. v. 8. will shake all Nations, and the § Denique gentes, ait: “Gentes ante desire of all Nations shall come”; Christum credentes in Deum legem which passage is thus commented naturæ, æque ac Judæi expectabant by Cornelius a Lapide: “The ac desiderabant Christum.” Pariter Gentiles before the advent of Christ, Christus ita se prodidit, et who believed in God and observed manifestavit Gentibus, sicut Judæis: the law of nature, expected and si enim in ipsius nativitate per desired Christ equally with the Angelum ejus notitia data fuit Jews.” Christ himself disclosed and Pastoribus, per stellam manifested himself to the Gentiles miraculosam ad sui adorationem as well as to the Jews; for, at the vocavit Magos, qui cum essent same time as the Angel apprized the Gentiles fuerunt primitiæ Gentium shepherds of his nativity, by means in Christo agnoscendo, et adorando, of the miraculous star he called the ut ait S. Fulgentius, Sermon. 6. de Magi to worship him, who, being Epiph., sicut Pastores fuerunt Gentiles, were the first among the primitiæ Judæorum. Itidem Nations, as the shepherds among the manifestatio adventus Christi per Jews, to acknowledge and worship prædicationem (non quidem Christ (Vide St Fulgentius, Sermon Apostolorum) prius facta est 6, upon Epiphany). In like manner, Gentilibus, quam Judæis; siquidem the advent of Christ was made ut scribit Ven. Mater Soror Maria de known by preaching (I am not Agreda, in Vita J. C. et B. M. V., p. speaking of the Apostles) to the 1. l. 4. c. 26. n. 664: “Quando B. M. Gentiles before it was to the Jews.

Virgo cum S. Joseph portavit As is written by the Venerable Puerum Jesum in Ægyptum, Mother, Sister Maria of Agreda, in fugiendo Herodis persecutionem, her Life of Jesus-Christ and the mansit ibi per septennium: quo Blessed Virgin Mary: “When the tempore ipsa Beatissima Virgo Blessed Virgin Mary, fleeing with St prædicavit Ægyptiis veri Dei fidem, Joseph, from the persecution of et Filii Dei in carne humana Herod, carried the Infant Jesus into adventum.” Ulterius in Christi Egypt, she tarried there seven years; nativitate multa fuere prodigia non and, during that time, the Blessed solum in Judæa, sed in Ægypto, ubi Virgin herself preached to the corruerunt idola, ac oracula Egyptians the faith of the true God conticuere; Romæ, ubi fons olei and the advent of the Son of God in scaturiit; visus globus aurei coloris human flesh.” Besides, the nativity de cælo in terram descendere; of Christ was attended by numerous apparuerunt tres soles; ac contra prodigies, not only in Judæa, but naturam circulus variegatus ad also in Egypt, where the idols modum iridis solis discum tumbled and the oracles were circumscripsit; in Græcia, ubi hushed; in Rome, where a spring of oraculum Delphicum obmutuit, et oil gushed out, a gold-coloured interrogatus Apollo ab Augusto ipsi globe was seen to descend from the sacrificante in proprio palatio, ubi skies on earth, three suns appeared, eidem aram extruxerat, de causa and an extraordinary ring, silentii sui, respondit, ut referunt variegated like a rainbow, encircled Nicephorus, l. 1 c. 17., Suidas, the disc of the sun; in Greece, where verbo Augustus, et Cedrenus, the oracle of Delphi was struck Compend. Histor.:

dumb, and Apollo, asked the reason of his silence by Augustus, who was offering up a sacrifice in his own palace where he had raised an altar to him, answered:

Me puer Hebræus, Divos Deus ipse “A Hebrew child, who sways the gubernans, Gods, and himself a God, Cedere sede jubet, tristemque redire Bids me quit my seat and return to sub orcum; the infernal regions; Aris ergo dehinc tacitis abscedito Depart therefore from our altars, nostris. henceforward mute.”

Et multa alia acciderunt prodigia, There were many more prodigies quibus prænunciabatur Gentilibus warning the Gentiles of the advent Filii Dei adventus, quæ ex variis of the Son of God: they have been Aucthoribus recitat Baronius, collected from various Authors, by Apparat. Annal. Eccles. n^o 24. et Baronius, and are to be found in his seq., et Cornelius in Aggæ. c. 2. v. 8. Apparat. Annal. Eccles., and Cornelius, Commentary upon Haggai.

99. Ex istis patet, quod etiam 99. From all this it is clear that the Gentiles pertinebant ad ovile Christi Gentiles also belonged, like the idem, ad quod spectabant Judæi, Jews, to the fold of Christ, that is, to puta ad Ecclesiam eamdem fidelem; the same Church of the Faithful; it igitur non potest recte dici, quod illa cannot therefore be correctly said verba Christi: Alias oves habeo, that the words of Christ: “Other quæ non sunt ex hoc ovili, sheep I have, which are not of this accipienda sint de Gentilibus, qui fold”, are applicable to the Gentiles, communem cum Hebræis habuerunt who had, in common with the de Deo fidem, de Messia spem, Hebrews, the faith in God, the hope, prophetiam, expectationem, et signa, prophecy, expectation, prodigies and et prædicationem. preaching of the Messiah.

100. Dico igitur quod nomine 100. I therefore say that by the aliarum ovium commode possunt words other sheep may very well be intelligi Creaturæ istæ rationales, understood those rational Creatures sive animalia, de quibus hucusque or animals of whom we have been disseruimus. Cum enim, ut diximus, treating hitherto. They being, as we capaces sint beatitudinis, et have said, capable of beatitude and damnationis, et Christus Jesus sit damnation, and Jesus-Christ being mediator Dei, et hominum, immo the mediator between God and man, totius rationalis creaturæ (creaturæ as also every rational Creature (for enim rationales, quæ beatitudinem rational creatures attain to beatitude consequuntur, hanc obtinent intuitu in consideration of the merits of meritorum Christi per ab eo sibi Christ, through the grace he confers collatam gratiam, sine qua nequit upon them, without which beatitude beatitudo obtineri), debuit omnis impossible of attainment), every rationalis creatura de eo venturo rational creature must have spem habere, sicut de uno Deo cherished, at the same time as the fidem, et de ipsius in carne faith in one God, the hope of the nativitate, et de præceptis legis advent of Christ, and have had the gratiæ manifestationem. Istæ igitur revelation of his nativity in the flesh erant oves, quæ non erant ex hoc and of the principles of the law of ovili humano, et quas adducere grace. Those were therefore the Christum oportebat, et quæ ejus sheep which were not of that human vocem nempe notitiam de ipsius fold, and which Christ had to bring; adventu, et de evangelica doctrina, the sheep which were to hear His quantum per se, tum per Apostolos voice, that is, the announcement of Christus erat manifestaturus, audire His advent and of the evangelical debebant, et ex iis ac hominibus in doctrine, either directly through cælo beatificatis fieri unum ovile, et Himself, or through the Apostles; unus Pastor.

the sheep which, partaking with men of heavenly beatitude, were to realize one fold and one shepherd.

101. Huic expositioni quam 101. To this interpretation, which I incongruam non puto, vim addit id hold to be in no way improper, force quod supra n^o 77. ex D. Hieronymo is added by what we related, retulimus de homunculo illo qui according to St Hieronymus, of that rogavit D. Antonium, ut communem little man who requested St Anthony Deum, quem in carne humana esse to pray, for him and his fellows, passum cognoverat, pro se et suis unto the common God, whom he deprecaretur. Innuitur enim ex his, knew to have suffered in human quod illi notitiam habuerunt de flesh. For, it implies that they were adventu et morte Christi, quem aware of the advent and of the death tamquam Deum optabant sibi of Christ, whom, as God, they were propitium, ut proinde ad hoc anxious to propitiate, since they intercessionem D. Antonii sought, to that effect, the expostularent. intercession of St Anthony.

102. Facit ad idem id, quod ex 102. Thereto tends also the fact Eusebio de Præparat. Evang. l. 5. c. mentioned by Cardinal Baronius 9., et Plutarcho l. de Defectu (Appar. Annal. n^o 129), after Oracul., refert Cardinalis Baronius, Eusebius and Plutarch, as being one Appar. Annal. n^o 129., et recenset of the prodigies which took place at inter prodigia, quæ tempore mortis the time of the death of Christ. He Christi evenere. Recitat igitur ex relates that in the reign of the citatis Aucthoribus quod Tiberii Emperor Tiberius, when Christ Imperatoris, sub quo passus est suffered, whilst mariners bound Christus, tempore, navigantibus from Greece to Italy, were by night, nonnullis a Græcia in Italiam, circa and during a calm, in the vicinity of Insulas Echinades, cessatis ventis, the Echinade Isles, their ship was noctu navigium appulit prope brought close to land. All the crew terram. Audita fuit ab omnibus vox heard a loud voice calling Tramnus, magna quæ vocavit Tramnum. Erat the master of the ship. He having is Naucerus navigii, quo resonante answered to his name, the voice Adsum, replicavit vox: “Quando replied: “When near such a marsh, perveneris prope quandam paludem, announce that the great Pan is annunciabis MAGNUM PANA MORTUUM dead.” Which Tramnus having done, ESSE”: quod cum Tramnus fecisset, there arose suddenly, as from a auditi sunt repente multorum, imo numberless multitude, groans and multitudinis prope infinitæ gemitus, shrieks. Doubtless, they were et ululatus. Profecto isti fuerunt Demons, or corporeal Angels, or Dæmones, seu Angeli corporei, seu rational animals living near the animalia rationalia prope paludem marsh on account of their aqueous degentia, utpote aquea, quæ audita nature, and who, hearing of the morte Christi, qui nomine magni death of Christ, described by the Pan efferebatur, in lacrymas et name of Great Pan, burst into tears lamenta effusa sunt; prout etiam and bewailing, like some of the Jews Hebræi nonnulli visa Christi morte who, after witnessing the death of percutientes pectora sua Christ, went home smiting their revertebantur (Luc. c. 23. v. 48.). Ex breasts (Luke, ch. 23, v. 48). From hucusque igitur deductis patet, quod all that has been deduced above, it is

dantur huiusmodi Dæmones, therefore clear that there are such succubi et incubi, constantes sensu, Demons, succubi and incubi, et ipsius passionibus obnoxii, ut endowed with senses and subject to probatum est; qui generantur, the passions thereof, as has been corrumpuntur, et capaces sunt shown; who are born through beatitudinis, et damnationis, et generation and die through ratione corporis subtilioris, corruption, are capable of beatitude nobiliores homine sunt, et qui si cum and damnation, more noble than hominibus, maribus aut fæminis, man, by reason of the greater carnaliter commiscuntur, peccant, et subtilty of their bodies, and who, eo peccato, quo peccat homo when having intercourse with man, jungendo se cum bruto, quod est male or female, fall into the same homine ignobilius; proinde non raro sin as man when copulating with a hi Dæmones consuetudinem beast, which is inferior to him. Also, habentes cum homine, aut equibus, it not unfrequently occurs that those post longam habitam Demons slay the men, women or communicationem eos interficiunt. mares with whom they have had Causa porro huius est, quod si inter protracted intercourse; and the tales datur peccatum, cum sint in reason is that, being liable to sin via, dari etiam debet pœnitentia; whilst on the way to salvation, in sicut ergo homini peccant via, they must likewise be open to consuetudinaliter cum bruto, ad repentance; and, in the same manner tollendam occasionem recidivandi, as a man, who habitually sins with a Confessarius injungit, ut brutum beast, is enjoined by his confessor to tollat de medio, ita tali Dæmoni destroy that beast, with a view to consuetudinario in peccato, et suppressing the occasion of tandem pœnitenti accidit, ut relapsing, it may likewise happen animal cum quo peccavit, sive that the penitent demon should slay homo, sive brutum fuerit, occidat; the animal with which it sinned, nec enim tali Dæmoni mors data whether man or beast; nor will death homini peccatum erit, sicut mors thus occasioned to a man be data bruto non imputatur tamquam reckoned a sin to the Demon, any peccatum homini: ratione enim more than death inflicted on a beast essentialis differentiae inter is imputed as a sin to man; for, Dæmonem huiusmodi, et hominem, considering the essential difference idem erit homo Dæmoni, quod est between a Demon of that kind and homini brutum.

man, the man will be the same thing to the Demon as the beast is to man.

103. Scio multos, et forte plerosque, 103. I am aware that many, perhaps qui hæc legerent, dicturos de me, most of my readers, will say of me quod Epicurei et Stoici Philosophi what the Epicureans and some Stoic nonnulli dixerunt de Divo Paulo, Philosophers said of St Paul (Acts of Actor. c. 17. v. 18.: Novorum the Apostles, ch. 17, v. 18). “He Dæmoniorum videtur annunciator, seemeth to be a setter forth of et datam doctrinam esibillabunt. strange gods”, and will deride my Sed isti tenebuntur solvere doctrine. But they will none the less argumenta supra posita, et dicere have to answer the foregoing quinam sint Dæmones isti Incubi, arguments, to show what are those vulgo Foletti, qui exorcismos, res Incubi Demons, commonly called sacras, et Christi Crucem non Goblins, who dread neither pavent, ac alios effectus istorum, ac exorcisms, nor the holy things, nor phænomena salvare, quæ nos ex the Cross of Christ, and to explain data doctrina ostendimus. the various effects and phenomena related when propounding that doctrine.

104. Solvitur ergo ex his, quæ 104. What we have hitherto deduced hucusque deducta sunt, quæstio, accordingly solves the question laid quam proposuimus supra n^o 30 et n^o down N^{rs} 30 and 34, to wit: how a 34: resolute innuimus, quomodo woman can be got with child by an mulier potest ingravidari a dæmone Incubus Demon? In fact, it cannot Incubo. Non enim hoc præstare be brought about by sperm assumed potest ex semine sumpto ab homine, from a man, agreeably to the ut fert communis opinio, quam common opinion which we confutavimus n^o 31 et 32: sequitur confuted, N^{rs} 31 and 32; it follows, ergo, quod ipsa imprægnatur a therefore, that she is directly semine Incubi, cum enim animal sit, impregnated by the sperm of the et generet, proprio pollet semine: et Incubus, which, being an animal and hoc modo optime salvatur generatio capable of breeding, has sperm of its Gigantum secuta ex commixtione own. And thus is fully explained the Filiorum Dei cum Filiabus begetting of Giants from the hominum; nati siquidem sunt ex tali intercourse of the Sons of God with concubitu Gigantes, qui licet homini the Daughters of men: for that essent similes, corpore tamen erant intercourse gave birth to Giants majores: et quamvis a Dæmonibus who, although like unto men, were geniti, viribus proinde pollerent, non of higher stature, and, though tamen Dæmonum vires et potentiam begotten by Demons, and æquabant, ut sequitur in mulis, consequently of great strength, yet hinnis et burdonibus, qui mediis equalled them neither in might nor quodammodo sunt inter eas species in power. It is the same with mules, animalium, a quibus promiscue which are intermediate, as it were, generantur, et superant quidem between the kinds of animals from imperfectiorem, non attingunt autem whose promiscuousness they are perfectiorem speciem generantium: sprung, and which excel indeed the mulus enim superat asinum, sed non most imperfect, but never equal the æquat perfectionem equæ, a quibus most perfect: thus, the mule excels generatur. the ass, but does not attain the perfection of the mare, which have begotten it.

105. Confirmat autem hanc 105. In confirmation of the above sententiam consideratio, quod inference, we observe that animals animalia genita ex commixtione sprung from the mixing of different diversarum specierum non kinds do not breed, but are barren, generant; sed sunt sterilia, ut patet as is seen with mules. Now we do in mulis. Gigantes autem non not read of Giants having been leguntur Gigantes generasse, sed begotten by other Giants, but of natos a Filiis Dei, puta Incubis, et their having been born of the Sons Filiabus hominum: cum enim of God, that is Incubi, and the concepti fuerint ex semine Daughters of men: being thus Dæmoniaci mixto cum humano, non begotten of the Demoniac sperm potuerunt, tamquam mediæ specie mixed with the human sperm, and inter Dæmonem et hominem, being, as it were, an intermediate generare. species between the Demon and man, they had no generative power.

106. Dicetur fortasse contra hoc, 106. It may be objected that the non posse, ex semine Dæmonum, sperm of Demons, which must, by quod pro sui natura oportet esse nature, be most fluid, could not mix tenuissimum, fieri mixturam cum with the human sperm, which is semine humano, quod crassum est; thick, and that, consequently, no unde nec generatio sequi possit. generation would ensue.

107. Respondeo quod, ut dictum fuit 107. I reply that, as has been said supra n^o 32: virtus generandi above, N^r 32, the generative power consistit in spiritu, qui simul cum lies in the spirit that comes from the materia spumosa et viscida generator at the same time as the deciditur a generante; sequitur ex spumy and viscous matter; it follows hoc, quod semen Dæmonis that, although most liquid, the sperm quantumvis tenuissimum, quia of the Demon, being nevertheless tamen materiale, optime potest material, can very well mix with the commisceri cum spiritu materiali material spirit of the human sperm, seminis humani, ac fieri generatio. and bring about generation.

108. Replicabitur adhuc contra 108. It will be retorted that, if the conclusionem, quod si vere fuisset generation of Giants had really Gigantum generatio ex semine come from the combined sperms of Incuborum et Mulierum, nunc Incubi and Women, Giants would quoque Gigantes nascerentur: non still be born in our time, since there desunt enim mulieres coeuntes cum is no lack of women who have Incubis, ut patet ex gestis SS. intercourse with Incubi, as is shown Bernardi et Petri de Alcantara, et by the Acts of St Bernard and Peter aliarum historiarum, quæ passim ab of Alcantara, and other stories auctoribus recitantur. related by various authors.

109. Respondeo, quod prout ex 109. I reply that, as has been said Guaccio dictum fuit supra n^o 81: alii above, N^r 81, from Guaccius, some sunt hujusmodi Dæmones terrei, alii of those Demons are earthly, some aquei, aerei alii, et alii ignei, quia aqueous, some aerial, some igneous, respective in propriis eorum and they all dwell in their respective elementis habitant. Videmus autem element. Now, it is well known that animalia eo majora esse quo majus animals are of larger size, according est elementum in quo degunt, ut to the element they live in; thus with patet in piscibus, inter quos licet fishes, many of which are multi sint minuti, ut etiam sunt plura diminutive, it is true, as happens animalia terrestria minutissima, et with animals that live on land; but, tamen quia elementum aquæ majus the element water being larger than est elemento terræ (utpote continens the element earth, since the majus semper est contento), ideo container is always larger than the pisces a tota specie superant in contents, fishes as a species, surpass magnitudine molis animalia in size the animals that dwell on terrestria, ut patet in balenis, land, as shown by whales, tunnies, orcynis, pistis seu pistricibus, cachalots, and other cetaceous and thynnus, ac aliis piscibus cetaceis, viviparous fish which surpass by far seu viviparis, qui quodvis animala all animals that live on land. terrestre longe superant. Porro cum Consequently, these Demons being Dæmones hujusmodi animalia sint, animals, as has been shown, their ut hucusque probatum est, eo erunt size will be proportionate to the maiores in magnitudine quo extent of the element they dwell in, elementum majus pro sui natura according to their nature. And, air inhabitabunt. Et cum aer excedat being more extensive than water, aquam, et ignis aere major sit, and fire than air, it follows that sequitur, quod Dæmones ætherei ac ethereal and igneous Demons will ignei longe superabunt terrestres et by far surpass their earthly and aqueos, tum in mole corporis, tum in aqueous fellows, both in stature and virtute. Nec contra hoc facit might. It would be to no purpose to instantia de avibus, qui licet instance, as an objection, birds incolant aerem, qui major est aqua, which, although inhabitants of the tamen corpore minores sunt a tota air, a more extensive element than specie piscibus et quadrupedibus, water, are smaller, as a species, than quia aves, licet per aerem volatu fishes and quadrupeds; for, if birds spatiantur, revera tamen pertinent do indeed travel through the air by ad elementum terræ, in qua means of their wings, they no less quiescunt; aliter enim pisces belong to the element earth, where nonnulli qui volant, ut hirundo they rest; otherwise, some fishes marina, et alii, dici deberent that fly, such as the sea swallow, animalia aerea, quod falsum est. would have to be classed among aerial animals, which is not.

110. Advertendum autem, quod post 110. Now, it must be observed that, diluvium aer iste terra after the flood, the air which quo globe, became, from the damp of the citissimus magis incrassatus est ex surrounds our earthy and aqueous humiditate aquarum, quam fuerit globe, became, from the damp of the ante diluvium, et hinc forte est, quod waters, thicker than it had been ex tali humido, quod est principium before; and, damp being the corruptionis, fiat, quod homines non principle of corruption, that may be ætatem ita producant, ut faciebant the reason why men do not live as ante diluvium. Ex ista autem aeris long as they did before the flood. It crassitie fit, quod Dæmones ætherei, is also on account of that thickness ac ignei, cæteris corpulentiores, of the air that ethereal and igneous nequeunt diutius manere in hoc aere Demons, more corpulent than the crasso, et si descendunt aliquando others, can no longer dwell in that hoc fit violenter, et eo modo quo thick atmosphere, and if they do urinatores ad ima maris descendunt. descend into it occasionally, do so only by force, much as divers descend into the depths of the sea.

111. Ante diluvium autem, cum 111. Before the flood, when the air adhuc aer non ita crassus erat, was not yet so thick, Demons came veniebant Dæmones, et cum upon earth and had intercourse with mulieribus miscebantur, et gigantes women, thus procreating Giants procreabant, qui magnitudinem whose stature was nearly equal to corpoream Dæmonum generantium that of the Demons, their fathers. æmulabantur. Nunc vero ita non est: But now it is not so; the Incubi Dæmones enim Incubi, qui fæminas Demons who approach women are incessunt, sunt aquei quorum aqueous and of small stature; that is corporis moles magna non est: et why they appear in the shape of proinde in forma homuncionum little men, and, being aqueous, they apparent, et quia aquei etiam are most lecherous. Lust and damp salacissimi sunt; luxuria enim in go together: Poets have depicted humido est: ut proinde Venerem e Venus as born of the sea, in order to mari natam Poetæ finxerint, quod show, as explained by Mythologists, Mythologi explicant de libidine, quæ that lust takes its source in damp. oritur ab humiditate. Cum ergo When, therefore, Demons of short Dæmones, qui corpore parvi sunt stature impregnate women his temporibus mulieres nowadays, the children that are born imprægnent, non gigantes, sed are not giants, but men of ordinary staturæ ordinariæ filii nascuntur. size. It should, moreover, be known Sciendum porro quod si miscentur that when Demons have carnal corporaliter cum mulieribus intercourse with women in their own Dæmones in sua ipsorum natural body, without having corpulentia naturali, nulla facta recourse to any disguise or artifice, immutatione aut artificio, mulieres the women do not see them, or if illos non vident, nisi tanquam they do, see but an almost doubtful, umbram pæne incertam, ac quasi barely sensible shadow, as was the insensibilem, ut patet in muliere illa, case with the female we spoke of, N^r de qua diximus supra n^o 28., quæ 28, who, when embraced by an osculabatur ab incubo, cujus tactus Incubus, scarcely felt his touch. But, vix ab ea sentiebatur. Quando vero when they want to be seen by their volunt se visibiles amasiis reddere, mistresses, atque ipsis atque ipsis delectationem indelectationem in congressu carnali congressu carnali afferre, sibi afferre, they assume a visible indumentum visibile assumunt, et disguise and a palpable body. By corpus crassum reddunt. Qua vero what means this is effected, is their hoc arte fiat, ipsi norunt. Nobis secret, which our short-sighted curta nostra Philosophia hoc non Philosophy is unable to discover. pandit. Unum scire possumus, et est, The only thing we know is that such quod tale indumentum seu corpus ex disguise or body could not consist solo aere concreto constare merely in concrete air, since this nequiret, hoc enim esse deberet per must take place through condensationem, et proinde per condensation, and therefore by the frigus; unde oporteret, quod corpus influence of cold; a body thus illud ad tactum esset veluti glacies, formed would feel like ice, et ita in et ita in coitu mulieres non coitu mulieres non delectaret, but delectaret, sed torqueret, cum tamen would give them pain; and it is the contrarium eveniat. reverse that takes place.

112. Visa igitur differentia 112. Being admitted the distinction Dæmonum spiritualium, qui cum between spiritual Demons, which sagis coeunt, et Incuborum, qui cum have intercourse with witches, and fæminis minime sagis rem habent, Incubi, who have to do with women perpendenda est gravitas hu just that are nowise witches, we have to criminis in utroque casu. weigh the grievousness of the crime in both cases.

113. In coitu sagarum cum 113. The intercourse of witches with Dæmonibus, eo quia non fit nisi cum Demons, from its accompanying apostasia a Fide, et Diaboli cultu, et circumstances, apostasy from the tot aliis impietatibus quas Faith, worshipping of the Devil, and recensuimus supra a n^o 12. ad 24., so many other ungodly things est maximum quorumque related above, N^{ts} 12 to 24, is the peccatorum, quæ ab hominibus fieri greatest of all sins which can be possunt: et ratione tantæ committed by man; and, considering enormitatis contra Religionem, quæ the enormity against Religion which præsupponitur coitu cum Diabolo, is presupposed by coition with the profecto Dæmonialitas maximum est Devil, Demoniality is assuredly the criminum carnalium. Sed spectato most heinous of all carnal crimes.

delicto carnis ut sic, et ut abstracto But, taking the sin of the flesh as a peccatis contra Religionem, such, exclusive of the sins against Dæmonialitas redigenda est ad Religionem, Demoniality should be simplicem pollutionem. Ratio, et reduced to simple pollution. The quidem convincentissima, est quia reason is, and a most convincing Diabolus, qui rem habet cum sagis, one, that the Devil who has to do purus spiritus est, et est in termino with witches is a pure spirit, has ac damnatus ut dictum supra fuit; reached the goal and is damned, as proinde si cum sagis coit, hoc facit has been said above; if, therefore, he in corpore assumpto, aut a se copulates with witches, it is in a formato, ut sentiunt communiter body assumed or made by himself, Theologi. Porro corpus illud according to the common opinion of quamvis moveatur, non tamen vivens Theologians. Though set in motion, est; sequitur ergo quod coiens cum that body is not a living one; and it tali corpore, sive mas sive fæmina follows that the human being, male fuerit, idem delictum committit, ac si or female, coiens cum tali corpore, cum corpore inanimato aut cadavere is guilty of the same offence as if coiret, quod esset simplex mollities, copulating with an inanimate body ut alias demonstravimus. Verum est, or a corpse, which would be simple quod, ut observavit etiam Cajetanus, pollution, as we have shown talis coitus effective potest habere elsewhere. It has, moreover, been deformitates aliorum criminum juxta truly observed by Cajetanus, that corpus a Diabolo assumptum, et such intercourse can very well carry vas: si enim assumeret corpus with it the disgraceful characteristics virginis consanguineæ, aut sacræ, of other crimes, according to the effective esset tale crimen incestus body assumed by the Devil, and the aut sacrilegium, et si in figura bruti part used: thus, if he should assume coiret, aut in vase præpostero, the body of a kinswoman or of a evaderet Bestialitas aut Sodomia. nun, such a crime would be incest or sacrilege; if coition took place in the shape of a beast, or in vase præpostero, it would be Bestiality or Sodomy.

114. In coitu autem cum Incubo, in 114. As for intercourse with an quo nulla habetur qualitas, vel Incubus, wherein is to be found no minima, criminis contra Religionem, element, not even the least, of an difficile est rationem invenire, per offence against Religion, it is hard quam tale delictum Bestialitate et to discover a reason why it should Sodomia gravior esset. Siquidem be more grievous than Bestiality and gravitas Bestialitatis præ Sodomia, Sodomy. For, as we have said above, prout supra diximus, consistit in if Bestiality is more grievous than hoc, quod homo vilificat dignitatem Sodomy, it is because man degrades suæ speciei jungendo se cum bruto the dignity of his kind by mixing quod est speciei longe inferioris sua. with a beast, of a kind much inferior In coitu autem cum Incubo diversato his own. But, when copulating est ratio: nam Incubus ratione with an Incubus, it is quite the spiritus rationalis, ac immortalis, reverse: for the Incubus, by reason æqualis est homini; ratione vero of his rational and immortal spirit, is corporis nobilioris, nempe equal to man; and, by reason of his subtilioris, est perfectior, et dignior body, more noble because more homine; et hoc modo homo jungens subtle, he is more perfect and more se Incubo non vilificat, immodignificat than man. Consequently, dignificat suam naturam, et ita, when having intercourse with an juxta hanc considerationem, Incubus, man does not degrade, but Dæmonialitas nequit esse gravior rather dignifies his nature; and, Bestialitate.

taking that into consideration, Demoniality cannot be more grievous than Bestiality.

115. Tamen gravior communiter 115. It is, however, commonly held censetur, et ratio, meo videri, potest to be more grievous, and the reason esse: quia peccatum contra I take to be this: that it is a sin Religionem est, quævis against Religion to hold any communicatio cum Diabolo, sive excommunication with the Devil, pacto, sive non; puta habendo cum either with or without compact, for eo consuetudinem aut instance by being habitually or familiaritatem, seu ab eo petendo familiarly connected with him, by auxilium, consilium, favorem, aut ab asking his assistance, counsel or ipso quærendo revelationem favor, or by seeking from him the futurorum, relationem præteritorum, revelation of things to be, the absentium aut alias occultorum. knowledge of things gone by, Hujusmodi autem homines, seu absent, or otherwise hidden. Thus, mulieres, concumbendo cum men and women, by mixing with Incubis, quos nesciunt animalia Incubi, whom they do not know to esse, sed putant esse diabolos, be animals but believe to be devils, contra conscientiam erroneam sin through intention, ex conscientia delinquunt; et hoc modo ex erronea, and their sin is conscientia erronea ita peccant cum intentionally the same, when having Incubis se jungendo, ac si cum intercourse with Incubi, as if such diabolis coirent: unde et gravitatem intercourse took place with devils; eiusdem criminis incurrunt. in consequence, the grievousness of their crime is exactly the same.

FINIS

APPENDIX

The manuscript of Demoniality breaks off with the conclusion just given. In a purely philosophical and theoretical acception, the work is complete: for it was enough that the author should define, in general terms, the grievousness of the crime, without concerning himself with the proceedings which were to make out the proof, nor with the penalty to be inflicted. Both those questions, on the contrary, had, as a matter of course, a place assigned to them in the great work De Delictis et Pœnis, which is a veritable Code for the Inquisitor; and Father Sinistrari of Ameno could not fail to treat them there with all the care and conscientiousness he has so amply shown in the foregoing pages.

The reader will be happy to find here that practical conclusion to Demoniality.

(Note by the Editor.)

PROBATIO DÆMONIALITATIS

PROOF OF DEMONIALITY

SUMMARIUM

SUMMARY

1. De probatione criminis 1. Distinctions to be made in the proof of the crime of Demoniality.
 2. Indicia probantia coitum Sagæ cum Diabolo. 2. Signs proving the intercourse of a Witch with the Devil.
 3. Requiritur confessio ipsius malefici ad plenam probationem. 3. The confession of the Sorcerer himself is requisite for a full eviction.
 4. Historia de Moniali habente consuetudinem cum Incubo. 4. Tale of a Nun who had an intimacy with an Incubus.
 5. Si adsint indicia visa in recitata historia, potest ad torturam deveniri. 5. If the indictment is supported by the recitals of eye-witnesses, torture may be resorted to.
-
1. Quantum ad probationem hujus criminis attinet, distinguendum est de Dæmonialitate, puta, vel ejus, quæ a Sagis seu Maleficis fit cum Diabolis; sive de ea, quæ ab aliis fit cum Incubis. 1. As regards the proof of that crime, a distinction must be made of the kind of Demoniality, to wit: whether it is that which is practiced by Witches or Wizards with the Devil, or that which other persons perpetrate with Incubi.
 2. Quoad primam, probato crimine pacti facti cum Diabolo, probata remanet Dæmonialitas consequentia necessaria; 2. In the first case, the compact entered into with the Devil being proved, the evidence of Demoniality follows as a necessary consequence;

*scopus tum Sagarum, tum*for, the purpose, both of Witches Maleficorum in ludis nocturnis,and Wizards, in the nightly revels *ultra convivia, et choreas, est*that take place after feasting and hujusmodi infamis congressus:dancing, is none other but that *aliter, illius criminis nullus potest*infamous intercourse; otherwise *esse testis, quia Diabolus, qui Sagæ*there can be no witness of that *visibilis est, aliorum oculos effugit.*crime, since the Devil, visible to the *Verum est, quod aliquoties visæ sunt*Witch, escapes the sight of others.
*mulieres in sylvis, agris, et*Sometimes, it is true, women have *nemoribus, supinæ jacentes, ad*been seen in the woods, in the *umbilicum tenus denudatæ, et juxta*fields, in the groves, lying on their *dispositionem actus venerei,*backs, ad umbilicum tenus nudatæ, *divaricatis et adductis cruribus,*et juxta dispositionem actus venerei, *clunes agitare, prout scribit Guacc.,*their legs divaricatis et adductis, lib. 1, cap. 12, v. Sciendum estclunes agitare, as is written by *sæpius, fol. 65. Tali casu emergeret*Guaccius, book I, chap. 12, v. suspicio vehemens talis criminis,Sciendum est sæpius, fol. 65. In *dummodo esset aliunde*such a case there would be a very *adminiculata, et crederem talem*strong suspicion of such a crime, if *actum per testes sufficienter*supported by other signs; and I am *probatum, sufficere Judici ad*inclined to believe that such action, *indagandam tormentis veritatem; et*sufficiently proved by witnesses, *hoc maxime, si post aliqualem*would justify the Judge in resorting *moram in illo actu, visus fuisset a*to torture in order to ascertain the *muliere elevari quasi fumus niger, et*truth; especially if, shortly after that *tunc mulierem surgere, prout ibidem*action, a sort of black smoke had *scribit Guaccius; talis enim fumus,*been seen to issue from the woman, *aut umbra, Dæmonem fuisse*and she had been noticed to rise, as *concumbentem cum fæmina inferre*is also written by Guaccius; for it *potest. Sicut etiam, si mulier visa*might be inferred that that smoke or *fuisset concumbere cum homine, qui*shadow had been the Devil himself, post actum de repente evanuit, utconcumbens cum fæmina. Likewise *non semel accidisse idem auctor*if, as has more than once happened, ibidem narrat. according to the same author, a woman had been seen concumbere cum homine, who, the action over, suddenly disappeared.

3. *Cæterum ad probandum*3. Moreover, in order to prove *concludenter aliquem esse*conclusively that a person is a Maleficum, seu Maleficam, Wizard or a Witch, the own *requiritur propria confessio; nullus*confession of such person is *enim haberi potest de hoc testis, nisi*requisite: for there can be no *forte sint alii Malefici, qui in iudicio*witnesses to the fact, unless perhaps *deponunt de complicibus; sed quia*other Sorcerers giving evidence at *socii criminis sunt, eorum dictum*the trial against their accomplices; *non concludit, nec etiam ad*from their being confederates in the *torturam sufficit, nisi alia existent*crime, their statement is not *indicia, puta, sigillum Diaboli*conclusive and does not justify the *impressum in eorum corpore, prout*recourse to torture, should not other *diximus supra num. 23.; et in eorum*indications be forthcoming, such as domibus, facta perquisitione,the seal of the Devil stamped on *inveniant signa, ac instrumenta*their body, as aforesaid, N^r 23, or artis diabolicæ, ut ossa mortuorum,the finding in their dwelling, after a *præsertim calvariam; crines*search, of signs and instruments of *artificiose contextos; nodos*the diabolic art: for instance, bones *plumarum intricatos; alas, aut*and, especially, a skull, hair artfully pedes, aut ossicula vespertilionum,plaited, intricate knots of feathers, aut bufonum, aut serpentium;wings, feet or bones of bats, toads *ignotas seminum species; figuras*or serpents, unfamiliar seeds, wax *cereas; vasculos plenos incognito*figures, vessels filled with unknown *pulvere, aut oleo, aut unguentis*powder, oil or ointments, etc., as are *minime notis, etc., ut ordinarie*usually detected by Judges who, contingit reperiri a Judicibus, qui,upon a charge being brought against *accepta accusatione de huiusmodi*Sorcerers, proceed to their *Sagis, ad capturam, et domus*apprehension and the search of their *visitationem deveniunt, ut scribit*houses.

Delbene, de Off. S. Inquis., par. 2.

dub. 206, num. 7.

4. *Quantum vero ad probationem*4. The proof of intimacy with an *congressus cum Incubo, par est*Incubus offers the same difficulty; difficultas; non minus enim Incubus,for, no less than other Demons, the *ac alii Diaboli effugiunt, quando*Incubus is, at will, invisible to all *volunt, visum aliorum, ut videri se*but his mistress. Yet, it has not *faciunt a sola amasia. Tamen non*seldom happened that Incubi have raro accidit, quod etiam visi sint allowed themselves to be surprised Incubi modo sub una, modo sub alia in the act of carnal intercourse with specie in actu carnali cum women, now in one shape, now in mulieribus. another.

In quodam Monasterio (nomen ejus In a Monastery (I mention neither et urbis taceo, ne veterem its name nor that of the town where ignominiam memoriæ refricem) it lies, so as not to recall to memory quædam fuit Monialis, quæ cum alia a past scandal), there was a Nun, Moniali, quæ cellam habebat suæ who, about trifles, as is usual with contiguam, simultatem ex levibus women and especially with nuns, causis, ut assolet inter mulieres, had quarrelled with one of her mates maxime Religiosas, habebat. Hæc who occupied a cell adjoining to sagax in observando quascumque hers. Quick at observing all the actiones Monialis sibi adversæ, per doings of her enemy, this neighbour plures dies vidit, quod ista in diebus noticed, several days in succession, æstivis, statim a prandio non that instead of walking with her spatiabatur per viridarium cum companions in the garden after aliis, sed ab iis sequestra, se dinner she retired to her cell, where retrahebat in cellam, quam sera she locked herself in. Anxious to obserabat. Observatrix igitur æmula know what she could be doing there curiositate investigans, quid tali all that time, the inquisitive Nun tempore illa facere posset, etiam betook herself also to her cell. Soon ipsa in propriam cellam se she heard a sound, as of two voices recipiebat; cæpit autem audire conversing in subdued tones, which submissam quasi duorum in simul she could easily do, since the two colloquentium vocem (quod facile cells were divided but by a slight erat, nam cella parvo simplicis, partition), then a peculiar friction⁴, scilicet lateris unius, disternio the cracking of a bed, groans and dividebatur), mox sonitum sighs, quasi duorum *poppysmatum*⁴, concussionis lecti, concumbentium; her curiosity was gannitus, ac anhelitus, quasi raised to the highest pitch, and she duorum concubentium; unde aucta redoubled her attention in order to in æmula curiositate stetit in ascertain who was in the cell. But observatione, ut sciret, quinam in having, three times running, seen no illa cella essent. Postquam autem other nun come out but her rival, per tres vices vidit, nullam aliam she suspected that a man had been Monialem egressam e cella illa, secretly introduced and was kept

præter æmulam, dominam cellæ, hidden there. She went and reported suspicata est Monialem in camera the thing to the Abbess, who, after absconditum aliquem virum, holding counsel with discreet clanculum introductum, retinere; persons, resolved upon hearing the unde et rem detulit ad Abbatissam, sounds and observing the quæ consilio habito cum discretis, indications that had been denounced voluit audire sonitus, et observare her, so as to avoid any precipitate or indicia relata ab accusatrice, ne inconsiderate act. In consequence, præcipitanter et inconsiderate the Abbess and her confidants ageret. Abbatissa igitur cum repaired to the cell of the spy, and discretis se receperunt in cellam heard the voices and other noises observatricis, et audierunt strepitus, that had been described. An inquiry et voces, quas accusatrix detulerat. was set on foot to make sure Facta igitur inquisitione, an ulla whether any of the Nuns could be Monialium potuisset secum in illa shut in with the other one; and the cella clausa esse, et reperto quod result being in the negative, the non, Abbatissa cum discretis fuit ad Abbess and her attendants went to ostium cellæ clausæ; et pulsato the door of the closed cell, and frustra pluries ostio, cum Monialis knocked repeatedly, but to no nec respondere, nec aperire vellet, purpose: the Nun neither answered, Abbatissa minata est, se velle nor opened. The Abbess threatened ostium prosterni facere, et vecte to have the door broken in, and even aggredi opus fecit a quadam ordered a convert to force it with a conversa. Tunc aperuit ostium crow-bar. The Nun then opened her Monialis, et facta perquisitione, door: a search was made and no one nullus inventus est in camera. found. Being asked with whom she Interrogata Monialis cum quonam had been talking, and the why and loqueretur, et de causa concussionis wherefore of the bed cracking, of lecti, anhelituum, etc., omnia the sighs, etc., she denied every negavit. thing.

Cum vero res perseveraret, But, matters going on just the same accuratior, ac curiosior reddita as before, the rival Nun, become Monialis æmula perforavit tabulas more attentive and more inquisitive lacunaris, ut posset cellam than ever, contrived to bore a hole introspicere; et vidit elegantem through the partition, so as to be quemdam juvenem cum Moniali able to see what was going on inside concumbentem, quem etiam eodem the cell; and what should she see but

modo ab aliis Monialibus videndum an elegant youth lying with the Nun, curavit. Delata mox accusatione ad and the sight of whom she took care Episcopum, ipsaque Moniali omnia to let the others enjoy by the same negante, tandem metu tormentorum means. The charge was soon comminatorum adacta, confessa est brought before the bishop: the guilty se cum Incubo consuetudinem Nun endeavoured still to deny all; habuisse.

but, threatened with the torture, she confessed having had an intimacy with an Incubus.

5. Quando igitur adessent talia 5. When, therefore, indications are indicia, sicut in recitata historia forthcoming, such as those recited intervenerunt, posset utique in above, a charge might be brought rigoroso examine rea constitui; sine after a searching inquiry; yet, tamen ejus confessione, non without the confession of the censendum est delictum plene accused, the offence should not be probatum, quantumvis a testibus regarded as fully proved, even if the visus fuisset congressus; siquidem intercourse were testified by eye- aliquando accidit, quod Diabolus, witnesses; for it sometimes happens ut infamiam alicui innocentibus that, in order to undo an innocent pararet, præstigiöse talem female, the Devil feigns such concubitus repræsentaverit. Unde intercourse by means of some in his casibus debet Judex delusion. In those cases, the Ecclesiasticus esse perfecte Ecclesiastical Judge must oculatus. consequently trust but his own eyes.

PŒNÆ

PENALTIES

Quantum ad pœnas Dæmonialitatis, As regards the penalties applicable nulla lex civilis, aut canonica, quam to Demoniality, there is no law that I legerim, reperitur, quæ pœnam know of, either civil or canonical, sanciat contra crimen hujusmodi. which inflicts a punishment for a Tamen, quia crimen hoc supponit crime of that kind. Since, however, pactum, ac societatem cum such a crime implies a compact and Dæmone, ac apostasiam a fide, fellowship with the Demon, and ultra veneficia, atque alia infinita apostasy of the faith, not to speak of propemodum damna, quæ a the malefices and other almost Maleficis inferuntur, regulariter, numberless outrages perpetrated by extra Italiam, suspendio et incendio Sorcerers, as a rule it is punished, punitur. In Italia autem, rarissime out of Italy, by the gallows and the traduntur hujusmodi Malefici ab stake. But, in Italy, it is but very Inquisitoribus Curiae sæculari. seldom that offenders of that kind are delivered up by the Inquisitors to the secular power.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICE⁵

Father Ludovico Maria Sinistrari, of the Order of Reformed Minors of the strict Observance of St. Francis, was born in Ameno, a small town of the district of St. Julius, in the diocese of Novara, on the 26th of February 1622. He received a liberal education and went through a course of humanities in Pavia, where, in the year 1647, he entered the Order of Franciscans. Devoting himself henceforward to tuition, he was first a professor of Philosophy; he then, during fifteen successive years, taught Theology in the same town, amidst a numerous concourse of students attracted from all parts of Europe by his high repute. His sermons preached in the principal cities of Italy, at the same time as they caused his eloquence to be admired, were productive of the most happy results for piety. Equally endeared to the World and to Religion, he had been favoured by nature with the most brilliant gifts: square frame, high stature, open countenance, broad forehead, sparkling eyes, high-coloured complexion, pleasant conversation replete with sallies of wit⁶; more valuable still, he was in possession of the gifts of grace, through which he was enabled to sustain, with unconquerable resignation, the assaults of an arthritical disease he was subject to; he was, moreover, remarkable for his meekness, candour and absolute submission to the rules of his Order. A man of all sciences⁷, he had learnt foreign languages without any master, and often, in the general Meetings of his Order, held in Rome, he supported, in public, theses de omni scibili. He, however, addicted himself more particularly to the study of Civil and Canon laws. In Rome he filled the appointment of Consulter to the supreme Tribunal of the Holy-Inquisition; was some time Vicar general of the Archbishop of Avignon, and then Theologian attached to the Archbishop of Milan. In the year 1688, charged by the general Meeting of Franciscans with the compilation of the statutes of the Order, he performed this task in his treatise entitled Practica criminalis Minorum illustrata. He died in the year of our Lord 1701, on the 6th of March, at the age of seventy-nine⁸.

INDEX

	Pages
Preface.	v
Demoniality: origin of the word.—Wherein that crime differs from those of Bestiality and Sodomy.—Opinion of St Thomas. N ^{rs} 1 to 8.	1
Material intercourse with Incubi and Succubi is not a thing of imagination; testimony of St Austin. N ^{rs} 9 and 10.	15
Wizards and Witches; their relations with the Devil; ceremonials of their profession. N ^{rs} 11 to 23.	21
Artifices resorted to by the Devil for the assumption of a body. N ^r 24.	31
Incubi do not assail but women. N ^r 26.	35
Goblins have no dread of exorcisms. N ^r 27.	37
Humorous story of signora Hieronyma: the enchanted repast. N ^r 28.	37
Men begotten by Incubi: Romulus and Remus, Plato, Alexander the Great, Cæsar-Augustus; Merlin the Enchanter, Martin Luther.—The Antechrist to be born of an Incubus. N ^r 30.	53
Incubi are not pure spirits: they beget, and therefore have a body of their own.—Remark concerning Giants. N ^{rs} 31 to 33.	57
Angels are not all pure spirits: decision to that effect of the second Council of Nicea N ^r 37.	71
Existence of rational creatures or animals other than man, and endowed, like him, with a body and a soul. N ^{rs} 38 to 43.	85
Wherein do those animals differ from man? What their origin? Do they all descend from one individual, as men descend from Adam? Is there between them a distinction of the sexes? What are their manners, laws, social customs? N ^{rs} 44 to 50.	87
What are the shape and organisation of their body? A comparison drawn from the composition of wine. N ^{rs} 51 to 56.	95

Are those animals subject to diseases, to physical and moral infirmities, to death? N ^{rs} 57 and 58.	107
Are they born in the original sin? Have they been redeemed by Jesus-Christ, and are they capable of beatitude and damnation? N ^{rs} 61 and 62.	119
Proofs of their existence. N ^{rs} 65 to 70.	123
Story of an Incubus and of a young Nun. N ^r 71.	139
Story of a young deacon. N ^r 72.	145
Incubi are affected by material substances: they therefore participate of the matter of those substances. N ^r 73.	149
Instance drawn from the history of Tobit; ejection of the Incubus which vexed Sarah; cure of old Tobias. N ^{rs} 74 to 76.	151
St Anthony falls in with a Faun in the wilderness: their conversation. N ^r 77 to 84.	161
Other proofs of the corporeity of Incubi, especially the Manna of the Hebrews or Bread of Angels. N ^{rs} 90 to 95.	179
In what sense are to be understood the words of Christ: “ Other sheep I have which are not of this fold? ” Apollo’s address to the Emperor Augustus: the end of the Gods. N ^{rs} 96 to 101.	191
“THE GREAT PAN IS DEAD”, or the death of Christ announced to Fauns, Sylvans and Satyrs: their bewailing. N ^r 102.	203
Solving of the problem: How can a woman be impregnated by an Incubus?—Comparison of Giants with mules. N ^{rs} 104 and 105.	207
Wherein lies the generating virtue; why no more Giants are born. Luxuria in humido . N ^{rs} 106 to 111.	211
Appreciation of the crime of Demoniality: 1 ^o committed with the Devil; 2 ^o committed with an Incubus. N ^{rs} 112 to 114.	219
Is Demoniality more grievous than Bestiality?—Conclusion. N ^r 115.	223
APPENDIX	227
BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICE	245

LETTER

OF THE
REV. FATHER PROVINCIAL OF CAPUCHINS FOR THE PROVINCE OF P....

P..., Friday (8 October 1875).

†
Pax

MONS. ISIDORE LISEUX,
Paris.

I have gone through the work you sent me yesterday, and have, indeed, been satisfied with the edition; the time has not yet arrived for me to give my opinion on the value of the work itself. Here you would have met with no other works of the Rev. Father Sinistrari of Ameno than his book: Practica criminalis Minorum; De Delictis et Pœnis is to be found, I believe, in another of our convents; but you would have been given a most welcome reception.

I believe that Des Grieux can hardly have resided in the present St-Sulpice, which dates but from the year 1816.... So far as a superficial glance has enabled me to ascertain, there are some other mistakes; but, altogether, the work is a good one, and you may accept of the congratulations of

*Your very little servant, Fr. A....
o. m. c.
m. p.*

Convent of Capuchins, rue ...

Paris, imprimerie D. JOUAUST, rue Saint-Honoré, 338.

ISIDORE LISEUX, LIBRAIRE-ÉDITEUR
Rue Bonaparte, n° 2, PARIS

CATALOGUE COMPLET

AU 1^{er} AVRIL 1879

PETITE
COLLECTION ELZEVIRIENNE

Ouvrages curieux, rares ou inédits, tirés à petit nombre sur papier de Hollande.

Théologie

HISTOIRE ECCLÉSIASTIQUE, PROTESTANTISME

SINISTRARI (Le R. P.). De la Démonialité et des animaux Incubes et Succubes, publié pour la première fois, d'après le manuscrit original découvert à Londres en 1872, et traduit du Latin par Isidore Liseux; avec le texte en regard.

5 fr.

VALLA (Laurent). La Donation de Constantin, premier titre du pouvoir temporel des Papes, où il est prouvé que cette Donation n'a jamais existé, et que l'Acte attribué à Constantin est l'œuvre d'un faussaire. Traduit en Français pour la première fois et précédé d'une étude historique par Alcide Bonneau, avec le texte Latin.

10 fr.

LES ECCLÉSIASTIQUES de France, leur nombre, celui des religieux et des religieuses, ce dont ils subsistent et à quoy ils servent (XVII^e siècle).

2 fr.

HUTTEN (Ulrich de). Julius, dialogue entre Saint Pierre et le Pape Jules II à la porte du Paradis; traduction nouvelle par Edmond Thion, texte Latin en regard.

3 fr. 50

LUTHER. La Conférence entre Luther et le Diable au sujet de la Messe.

4 fr.

THÉODORE DE BÈZE. Epître de maître Benoît Passavant; traduit pour la première fois du Latin macaronique de Théodore de Bèze, par Isidore Liseux, avec le texte en regard.

3 fr. 50

PASSEVENT PARISIEN respondant à Pasquin Romain: De la vie de ceux qui sont allez demourer à Genève; fait en forme de Dialogue (1556).

3 fr. 50

Philosophie
MŒURS ET USAGES, HISTOIRE

LA MOTHE LE VAYER. Soliloques sceptiques.

2 fr. 50

POGGE. Un vieillard doit-il se marier? traduit par Alcide Bonneau.

3 fr.

POGGE. Les Bains de Bade au XV^e siècle, scène de mœurs de l'âge d'or; traduit en Français pour la première fois par Antony Méray.

2 fr.

ÉRASME. La Civilité puérile, traduction nouvelle, texte Latin en regard, par Alcide Bonneau.

4 fr.

HENRI ESTIENNE. La Foire de Francfort (Exposition universelle et permanente au XVI^e siècle); traduit pour la première fois par Isidore Liseux, texte Latin en regard.

4 fr.

GESNER (J.-M.). Socrate et l'Amour Grec (Socrates sanctus Παιδραστής); traduit en Français pour la première fois, texte Latin en regard, par Alcide Bonneau.

3 fr. 50

TACITE. La Germanie, traduction entièrement nouvelle, texte Latin en regard, par E.-P. Dubois-Guchan.

3 fr. 50

ULRICH DE HUTTEN. Arminius, dialogue, traduit pour la première fois par Edmond Thion, texte Latin en regard.

2 fr.

REMONSTRANCE AUX FRANÇOIS, pour les induire à vivre en paix à l'advenir (1576).

1 fr.

Poésie

DU BELLAY (Joachim). Divers jeux rustiques.

3 fr. 50

DU BELLAY (Joachim). Les Regrets.

3 fr. 50

BONNEFONS (Jean). Pancharis.

4fr.

BOULMIER (Joseph). Villanelles, avec eau-forte de Lalauze.

5 fr.

Contes et Nouvelles

ARISTENET. Les Épistres amoureuses d'Aristenet, tournées de Grec en François par Cyre Foucault, sieur de la Coudrière (1597); avec notice par

A.-P. Malassis.

5 fr.

BOCCACE. Décaméron, traduit par Antoine Le Maçon, 6 vol.

30 fr.

POGGE. Facéties, 2 vol. (publié à 20 fr.)

Épuisé.

L'ABBÉ FAVRE. Histoire de Jean-l'ont-pris, conte Languedocien du XVIII^e siècle, traduit et précédé d'une notice par Jules Troubat.

3 fr.

VIVANT DENON. Point de Lendemain, conte dédié à la Reine, avec fleurons dessinés par Marillier; notice par A. P.-Malassis (publié à 4 fr.).

Épuisé.

CASTI. La Papesse.

10 fr.

Philologie, Histoire littéraire

GABRIEL NAUDÉ, Parisien. Advis pour dresser une Bibliothèque.

4 fr.

LA MOTHE LE VAYER. Hexaméron rustique (publié à 3 fr. 50).

Épuisé.

GRIMAREST. La Vie de M^r Molière; notice par A. P.-Malassis (publié à 5 fr.).

Épuisé.

LES INTRIGUES DE MOLIERE et celles de sa femme, avec notes par Ch.-L. Livet (publié à 6 fr.).

Épuisé.

MOLIÈRE JUGÉ par ses contemporains; notice par A. P.-Malassis.

4 fr.

ELOMIRE HYPOCONDRE, comédie (contre Molière), avec une note sur les Ennemis de Molière, par Ch.-L. Livet.

10 fr.

COLLECTION IN-8°

ESTIENNE (Henri). Apologie pour Hérodote, avec Introduction et Notes par P. Ristelhuber, 2 vol.

25 fr.

SINISTRARI (Le R. P.). De la Démonialité et des animaux Incubes et Succubes, première édition (publiée à 10 fr.).

Épuisé.

LOISELEUR. Les Points obscurs de la vie de Molière (publié à 12 fr.).

Épuisé.

LES INTRIGUES DE MOLIÈRE et de sa femme, avec Préface et Notes par Ch.-L. Livet.

12 fr.

FORMAT GRAND IN-18

SAINT-PIERRE (Bernardin de). Paul et Virginie, avec huit eaux-fortes de Lalauze.

25 fr.

— Les huit eaux-fortes tirées à part, sur papier de Chine ou de Hollande.

10 fr.

POGGE. Facéties, deuxième édition complète, avec le texte Latin, 2 vol.

15 fr.

PIEDAGNEL. Avril, poésies, avec un frontispice de Giacomelli, gravé à l'eau-forte par Lalauze.

5 fr.

BOULMIER (Joseph). Villanelles, première édition (avec eau-forte de Lalauze).

5 fr.

BOUTMY (Eugène). Dictionnaire de la Langue verte typographique.

3 fr.

SINISTRARI. Demoniality, or Incubi and Succubi, now first translated into English, with the Latin text.

POGGIO. The “Facetiæ”, or Jocose Tales, now first translated into English, with the Latin text.

TROUBAT (Jules). Plume et Pinceau, études de littérature et d'art.

3 fr.

DESMARETS. L'ancienne Jonction de l'Angleterre à la France, ou le Détroit de Calais, avec deux cartes topographiques.

3 fr.

ENVOI FRANCO RECOMMANDÉ
Contre le prix en Mandat de Poste.

Paris.—Imp. Motteroz, rue du Dragon, 31.

FOOTNOTES:

¹ What can one do over there, unless he hunts up old books?

2 Paris Embankment.

3 Vide biographical notice at the end of this volume.

4 Poppysmatum.—That word being but little used, it may be useful to record here the definition given of it by the Glossarium eroticum linguæ latinæ (auctore P. P., Paris, 1826):

POPPYSMA.—Oris pressi sonus, similis illi quo permulcentur equi et canes. Obscene vero de susurro cunni labiorum, quum frictu madescunt.

Father Sinistrari, well versed in classical literature, had turned to account the following epigram of Martial (book VII, 18):

IN GALLAM

*Quum tibi sit facies, de qua nec fœmina possit Dicere, quum corpus nulla litura notet; Cur te tam rarus cupiat, repetatque fututor, Miraris? Vitium est non leve, Galla, tibi.
Accessi quoties ad opus, mixtisque movemur Inguinibus, cunnus non tacet, ipsa taces.
Di facerent, ut tu loquereris, et ipse taceret!
Offendor cunni garrulitate tui.
Pedere te mallet: namque hoc nec inutile dicit Symmachus, et risum res movet ista simul.
Quis ridere potest fatui poppysmata cunni?
Quum sonat hic, cui non mentula mensque cadit Dic aliquid saltem, clamosoque obstrepe cunno: Et si adeo muta es, disce vel inde loqui.*

(Editorial Note.)

5 This Notice is an extract from tome 1 of the complete works of Father Sinistrari, Romæ, 1753.

6 Quadrato corpore, statura procera, facie liberali, fronte spatiosa, oculis rutilantibus, colore vivido, jucundæ conversationis, ac lepidorum salium.

7 Omnium scientiarum vir.

8 The complete works of P. Sinistrari (Rome, Giannini, 1753-1754, 3 vol. in-folio) include the following books: Practica criminalis Minorum illustrata,—Formularium criminale,—De incorrigibilium expulsionem ab Ordinibus Regularibus,—De Delictis et Pœnis, to which should be added the present work: De Dæmonialitate, published for the first time in the year 1875.

Transcriber's Notes

Obvious typographical errors have been silently corrected. All other spelling, punctuation and hyphenation remains unchanged.

S. Austin is mentioned several times in the English text. As this corresponds with S. Augustinus in the Latin, this may well be S. Augustine.

 END OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK DEMONIALITY; OR, INCUBI AND SUCCUBI ***

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

START: FULL LICENSE

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG™ LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg™ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase “Project Gutenberg”), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg work (any work on which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” appears, or with which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg™ License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, “Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation.”
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.

- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg™ works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES

EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility: www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.