PROLOGUE, SPOKEN BY MRS. JORDAN.

Enters opening a Letter.

“Dear Madam—Disappointed by a friend—
“Promis’d a Prologue—at my poor wit’s end—
“Ruin’d—unless so good—your laughing way—
“T’ insinuate something for my luckless Play.”
Poor Devil! what a fright he’s in—but why—
Am I to help him—What can I supply?
I’m doom’d to speak but just what Authors say:
Dull, when they’re dull—and sportive when they’re gay;
Mere puppets here, obedient to their will,
We love or hate—are blest or wretched—kill’d or kill—
Mirth we put on, just as we put on graces—
And wit—that’s sent home ready with our dresses.
What, tho’ at night so very smart and charming—
The dullest mortals breathing, in the morning—
Hence the nice sop, ’ere he our merit stamps.
Of rouge all doubtful—and these treach’rous lamps,
Midst the loud praise, still asks with cautious leer
How is she off the stage—what is she near——

But to my talk—to own it tho’ you’re loath
You’re all spoilt children of a larger growth,
Longing for each poor tinsel’d toy you see,
And only constant to variety——
Whilst each, the censor of his own defects,
The darling fault with gentlest hand corrects;
E’en from his very failings draws a merit,
And dooms each error but a proof of spirit.

Look round the world——

When we say world—we mean not now—a days
A huge globe, form'd of mountains—rivers—seas—
The polish'd mind sinks from a scene so wide,
We mean from Hyde Park Corner to Cheapside——
Look thro' the world—you'll find my moral true
In all the varied shapes that rise to view.

But from spoilt children of six feet in height,
To the spoilt child our stage presents to-night,
Brimful of mirth he comes—Miss Tomboy's brother,
We hope you'll think they're something like each other.
To plead his cause she'll try a sister's skill,
I'd fain prevent her—but, “ecod you will.”——
Perhaps she may shock you, of precise prim air,
But Lord! what then, she never minds that there.
The Country Girl a kindred tie may claim,
She too is anxious for his future fame;
And if you'll spare him, swears whene'er she's able
She'll tread on all your toes—under the table.
Oft' have you deign'd their artless toils to cheer,
And crown'd with flutt'ring smiles their labours, here
View then here the brother's faults, with judgment mild,
And spare the rod—altho' you Spoil the Child.

TIME—That of Representation.

THE SPOIL'D CHILD.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Dining Parlour.—PICKLE and his sister sitting by a table, on which plates are set for dinner—the sister working.

PICKLE.

Well, well, sister, a little patience and these holidays will soon be over, the boy then goes back to school, and all will be quiet.

Miss P. Aye, till the next breaking up—no—no, brother, unless he is severely punished for what he has already done, depend upon it this vicious humour will be confirmed into habit, and his follies increase in proportion with his years.

Pick. Now would not any one think, to hear you talk, that my son had actually some vice in him, for my part, I own there is something so whimsical in all his tricks, that I cannot in my heart but forgive him, aye, and for aught I know, love him better into the bargain.

Miss P. Yes, truly, because you have never been a sufferer by them, had you been rendered as ridiculous as I have been by his tricks, as you call them, you would have been the first to complain, and to punish.

Pick. Nay, as to that, he has not spared even his father—is there a day passes that I don't break my shins over some stumbling block he lays in my way—Why there is not a door but is armed with a bason of water on the top, and just left a-jar, so that egad, I can't walk over my own house without running the risk of being wet through.

Miss P. No wonder the child's spoilt, since you will superintend his education yourself—you! indeed!

Pick. Sister, sister, do not provoke me—at any rate I have wit enough to conceal my ignorance, I don't pretend to write verses and nonsense as some folks do.

Miss P. Now would you rail at me for the disposition I was born with—can I help it, if the gods have made me poetical, as the divine bard says.

Pick. Made you poetical, indeed!—s'blood if you had been born in a street near a college, aye, or even the next door to a day-school, I might not have been so surprised—but d——n it, madam, in the middle of the Minorities, what had you to do with poetry and stuff?

Miss P. Provoking ignorance.

Pick. Have you not rendered yourself the sneer of all your acquaintance, by your refined poetical intercourse with Mr. Tagg, the author, a fellow that strols about the country, spouting and acting in every barn he comes to—was he not once found concealed in your closet, to the utter scandal of my house, and the ruin of your reputation!

Miss P. If you had the smallest spark of taste, you would admire the effusions of Mr. Tagg's pen, and be enchanted at his admirable acting as much as I am.

Pick. Do you tell me I can't educate my own child, and make a lord chancellor, or an archbishop of Canterbury of him, which ever I like—just as I please.

[YOUNG PICKLE by a string draws the chair, OLD PICKLE falls.

Miss P. How's this—I'll lay my life that is another trick of this little mischievous wretch.

Pick. (getting up.) An ungrateful little rascal, to serve me such a trick, just as I had made an archbishop of him—but he can't be far off—I'll immediately correct him; here, Thomas. (going, meets THOMAS and servants bringing in covers for dinner.) But odso, here's dinner—well, I'll defer my severity till that's over—but if I don't make him remember this trick one while, say my name is not Pickle. (sits down to table, PICKLE cutting up a pheasant.) Sister, this is the first pheasant we have had this season, it looks well—shall I help you—they say anger makes a man dry, but mine has made me hungry—come, here's a wing for you, and some of the breast.

Enter SUSAN, (a Cook Maid) in haste.

Sus. Oh, dear sir—oh, dear madam—my young master—the parrot, ma'am—oh dear!

Pick. Parrot, and your young master; what the deuce does the girl mean?

Miss P. Mean! Why as sure as I live that vile boy has been hurting my poor bird.

Sus. Hurting, ma'am—no indeed, ma'am; I'll tell you the whole truth—I was not to blame, indeed I wasn't, ma'am, besides, I am morally certain 'twas the strange cat that kill'd it this morning.

Miss P. How! kill'd it say you;—but go on, let us hear the whole.

Sus. Why ma'am, the truth is, I did but step out of the kitchen for a moment, when in comes my young master, whips the pheasant that was roasting for dinner, from the spit, and claps down your ladyship's parrot, picked and trussed in its place.

Pick. The parrot!—the devil.

Sus. I kept basting and basting on, and never thought I was basting the parrot.

Miss P. Oh, my sweet, my beautiful young bird, I had just taught it to talk, too.

Pick. You taught it to talk—it taught you to talk, you mean, I am sure it was old enough, 'twas hatched in the hard frost!

Miss P. Well, brother, what excuse now?—but run, Susan, and do you hear, take John, and——

Enter JOHN, slowly and lame, his face bound up.

Oh John, here's a piece of business.

John. Ay, ma'am sure enow—what you have heard, I see—business indeed—the poor thing will never recover.

Miss P. (joyfully) What, John, is it a mistake of Susan's—is it still alive?—but—where—where is it, John?

John. Safe in stables, and it were as sound—a' made her a hot mash, woud'nt touch it—so crippled will never have leg to put to ground again.

Pick. No, I'll swear to that—for here's one of them. (holding up a leg on a fork)

Miss P. What does the fool mean? what—what, what is in the stable—what are you talking of?

John. Master's favourite mare, Daisy, madam—poor thing——

Pick. (alarmed) What—how—any thing the matter with Daisy? I would not part with her for——

John. Aye, sir quite done up—won't fetch five pounds at the next fair.

Miss P. This dunce's ignorance distracts me—come along, Susan.

[Exeunt Miss PICKLE and SUSAN.]

Pick. Why, what can it be what the devil ails her?

John. Why, sir, the long and the short of the whole affair, is as how—he's cut me too all across the face—mercy I did not lose my eyes.

Pick. This cursed fellow will drive me mad—the mare, you scoundrel, the mare.

John. Yes, sir, the mare—then too, my shins—master Salve, the surgeon, says I must 'noint 'em wi'——

Pick. Plague on your shins—you dog—what is the matter with the mare?

John. Why, sir, as I was coming home this morning over Black Down, what does I see but young master tearing over the turf upon Daisy, thof your honour had forbid him to ride her—so I calls to him to stop—but what does he do, but smacks his whip in my face, and dash over the gate into Stoney Lane; but what's worse, when I rated him about it, he snatches up Tom Carter's long whip, and lays me so over the legs, and before I could catch hold of him, he slips out of the stable, and was off like a shot.

Pick. Well, if I forgive him this—no—I'll send him this moment back to school.—School! zounds, I'll send him to sea.

[Enter Miss PICKLE.]

Miss P. Well, brother, yonder comes your precious child—he's muttering all the way up stairs to himself, some fresh mischief, I suppose.

Pick. Aye, here he comes—stand back—let us watch him, though I can never contain my passion long.

[they withdraw to the back of the stage.

Enter LITTLE PICKLE.

Little P. Well, so far all goes on rarely, dinner must be nearly ready; old Poll will taste well, I dare say—parrot and bread sauce—ha! ha! ha!—they suppose they are going to have a nice young pheasant, an old parrot is a greater rarity, I'm sure—I can't help thinking how devilish tough the drumsticks will be—a fine piece of work, aunt will make when it's found out—ecod, for aught I know, that may be better fun than the other: no doubt Sukey will tell, and John too, about the horse—a parcel of sneaking fellows, always tell, tell, tell.—I only wish I could catch them a school, once—that is all—I'd pay them well for it I'd be bound.—Oh! oh! here they are, and as I live, my father and aunt—it's all out I see—to be sure I'm not got into a fine scrape now, I almost wish I was safe at school again. (they come forward) Oh, sir, how do you do, sir, I was just coming to——

Pick. Come, come, no fooling now—how dare you look me in the face after the mischief you have done?

Little P. What—what have I done?

Pick. You know the value I set upon that mare, you have spoilt for ever.

Little P. But, sir, hear me—indeed I was not so much to blame, sir, not so very much.

Miss P. Do not aggravate your faults by pretending to excuse them—your father is too kind to you.

Little P. Dear, sir, I own I was unfortunate—I had heard you often complain, how wild and vicious little Daisy was, and indeed, sir, I never saw you ride her, but I trembled least some sad accident might befall you.

Pick. Well, and what is all this to the purpose?

Little P. And so, sir, I resolved, sooner than you should suffer, to venture my own neck, and so try to tame her for you; that was all—and so I was no sooner mounted than off she set—I could not help that you know, sir, and so this misfortune happened, and so, sir—but indeed, sir——

Pick. Could I be sure this was your motive—and 'tis purely love and regard for your old father makes you thus teaze and torment him—perhaps I might be inclined to——

John. Yes, sir, but 'tis no love and regard to me made him beat me so Little P. John, you know you were to blame.—Sir, indeed the truth is, John was scolding me for it, and when I told him as I have told you, why I did it, and that it was to hinder you from being hurt, he said that it was no business of mine, and that if your neck was broke it was no such great matter.

Pick. What—no great matter to have my neck broke——

Little P. No, sir; so he said, and I was vex'd to hear him speak so of you, and I believe I might take up the whip, and give him a cut or two on the legs—it could not hurt him much.

Pick. Well, child, I believe I must forgive you, and so shall John too; aye, aye.—But I had forgot poor Poll—what did you roast the parrot for, you young dog?

Little P. Why, sir, I knew you and my aunt were both so fond of it, I thought you would like to see it well dress'd.

Pick. Ha!—ha!—ha!——

Little P. But dear aunt, I know you must be angry with me, and you think with reason.

Miss P. Don't speak to me, I am not so weak as your father, whatever you may fancy.

Little P. But indeed, aunt, you must hear me, had I not loved you as I do, I should not have thus offended you, but it was merely my regard for your character.

John. Character!—

[Exit, PICKLE kicks him off.]

Little P. My dear aunt, I always heard that no lady's keep parrots or lap-dogs, 'till they can no longer keep lovers—and when at school, I told 'em you had a parrot, the boys all said, then you must be a foolish old maid.

Miss P. Indeed!—impudent young wretches.

Little P. Yes, aunt, and so I resolved you should no longer be thought so—for I think you are a great deal too young, and too handsome for an old maid. (taking her hand)

Pick. Come, sister, i'faith you must forgive him, no female heart can withstand that.

Miss P. Brother, you know I can forgive where I see occasion; but though these faults are thus excused, how will you answer to a charge of scandal and ill-nature.

Little P. Ill-nature, madam—I'm sure nobody can accuse me of that.

Miss P. How will you justify the report you spread, of my being locked up in my closet with Mr. Tagg, the author—can you defend so vile an attempt to injure my reputation?

Pick. What, that too, I suppose, was from your care of her character—and so to hinder your aunt from being an old maid, you locked her up in her closet with this author, as he is called.

Little P. Nay, indeed, dear madam, I beseech you—'twas no such thing, all I said was, you were amusing yourself in your closet with a favourite author.

Miss P. I amuse myself in my closet with a favourite author! worse and worse.

Pick. Sister have patience—hear——

Miss P. I am ashamed to see you support your boy in such insolence—I, indeed! who am scrupulous to a fault; but no longer will I remain subject to such impertinence, I quit your house, sir, and you shall quit all claim to my fortune—this moment will I alter my will, and leave my money to a stranger, sooner than to your family.

[Exit.

Pick. Her money to a stranger, leave her money to a stranger! Oh! the three per-cent. consols—oh, the India stock—go, child—fly, throw yourself at your aunt's feet—say any thing to please her—I shall run distracted.—Oh! those consols——

Little P. I am gone, sir—shall I say she may die as soon as she pleases, but she must not give her money to a stranger.

Pick. Aye, aye, there's a good boy, say any thing to please her, that will do very well—say she may die as soon as she pleases, but she must not leave her money to a stranger. (Exit LITTLE P.) Sure never man was so tormented—well, I thought when my poor dear wife, Mrs. Pickle died, and left me a disconsolate widower, I stood some chance of being a happy man, but I know not how it is, I could bear the vexation of my wife's bad temper better than this woman's. All my married friends were as miserable as myself—but now—faith here she comes, and in a fine humour, no doubt.

Enter Miss PICKLE.

Miss P. Brother, I have given directions for my immediate departure, and am now come to tell you, I will persist in my design, unless you this moment adopt the scheme I yesterday proposed for my nephew's amendment.

Pick. Why, my dear sister you know there is nothing I would not readily do to satisfy and appease you, but to abandon my only child, to pretend that he is not mine—to receive a beggar brat into my arms—impossible——

Miss P. (going) Very well, sir, then I am gone.

Pick. But sister, stop—was ever man so used—how long is this scheme of yours to last? how long am I to be deprived of him?

Miss P. How long! why until he is brought duly to reflect upon his bad behaviour, which nothing will induce him to do, so soon as thinking himself no longer your son, but the child of poor parents—I yesterday spoke to Margaret, his old nurse, and she fully comprehends the whole affair.

Pick. But why, in addition to the quitting my own child, am I to have the torment of receiving hers? won't the sending him away be sufficient?

Miss P. Unless the plot is managed my way, I will have nothing to do with it, but begone—can't you perceive that his distress at losing his situation, will be augmented by seeing it possessed by another—come, come, brother, a week's purgatory will reform him, depend upon it.

Pick. Why, to be sure, as you say—'twill reform him, and as we shall have our eyes upon him all the while, and Margaret his own nurse—

Miss P. You may be sure she will take care of him—well, since this is settled, the sooner 'tis done the better—Thomas!

Enter THOMAS.

Send your young master.

Pick. I see you are finally resolved, and no other way will content you.—Well, heaven protect my poor child.

Miss P. Brother, you are so blinded by your foolish fondness, that you cease to perceive what is for his benefit—'tis happy for you, there is a person to direct you, of my superior discernment.

Enter LITTLE PICKLE.

Little P. Did you send for me, aunt?

Pick. Child, come hither, I have a great secret to disclose to you, at which you will be much surprised.

Little P. A secret, sir!

Miss P. Yes, and one that requires your utmost courage to hear—you are no longer to consider that person as your father, he is not so—Margaret, who nursed you, has confessed, and the thing is sufficiently proved, that you are not his son, but hers—she exchanged you when an infant for my real nephew, and her conscience has at last compelled her to make the discovery.

Little P. I another person's child!—impossible!—ah! you are only joking with me now, to see whether I love you or not, but indeed (to PICKLE) I am yours—my heart tells me I am only only yours.

Pick. I am afraid you deceive yourself—there can be no doubt of the truth of Margaret's account; but still assure yourself of our protection—but no longer can you remain in this house, I must not do an injury to my own child—you belong to others—to them you must now go.

Little P. Yet, sir, for an instant hear me—pity me—ah too sure I know (to OLD PICKLE) I am not your child—or would that distress which now draws tears of pity from a stranger, fail to move nature in you.

Miss P. Comfort yourself, we must ever consider you with compassion and regard—but now you must begone—Margaret is waiting without to receive you.

SONG—LITTLE PICKLE.

Tune—Je suis Linder.

Since then I'm doom'd, this sad reverse to prove,
To quit each object of my infant care;
Torn from an honour'd parent's tender love,
And driven the keenest storms of fate to bear.
Ah! but forgive me, pitied let me part,
Your frowns, too sure, wou'd break my sinking heart.

II.

Where e'er I go, what e'er my lowly state,
Yet grateful mem'ry still shall linger here,
And perhaps when musing o'er my cruel fate,
You still may greet me with a tender tear.
Ah! then forgive me, pitied let me part,
Your frowns too sure would break my sinking heart.

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II.

SCENE—A Parlour.

Enter Miss PICKLE and MARGERY.

Mar. And so I was telling your ladyship, poor little master does so take it to heart, and so weep and wail, it almost makes me cry to hear him.

Miss P. Well, well, since he begins already to repent, his punishment shall be but short; have you brought your boy with you?

Mar. Aye, have I—poor Tommy, he came from a-board a ship but now, and is so grown, and altered—sure enough he believes every word I have told him, as your honour ordered me, and I warrant, is so sheepish and shamefaced—but here comes my master—he has heard it all already.

Enter PICKLE.

But, my lady—shall I fetch my poor Tommy to you, he's waiting without.

Pick. What, that ill-looking young rascal in the hall?—he with the jacket and trowsers.

Mar. Ay, your honour!—what, then, you have seen him.

Pick. Seen him!—ay, and felt him too.—The booby met me bolt at the corner, run his cursed carotty poll full in my face, and has loosened half the teeth in my head, I believe.

Mar. Poor lad! he's a sailor, and but awkward as yet, and so shy I warrant—but will your honour be kind to him.

Pick. Kind to him? Why, I am to pass for his father—am not I?

Mar. Aye, I wish your honour had been poor Tommy's father—but no such luck for me, as I say to my husband.

Pick. Indeed!—Your husband must be very much obliged to you, and so am I.

Mar. But do your honour see my poor Tommy, once dressed in his fine smart clothes——

Pick. Damme! I don't half like that Tommy.

Miss P. Yes, yes, you shall—but now go and fetch him here to us; I should like much to see him.

Mar. (going) Do you now, madam, speak kindly to him—for poor boy, he's quite dash'd.

[Exit.

Pick. Yes, and he has dash'd some of my teeth out—plague on him.

Miss P. Now, Mr. Pickle, I insist upon your observing a proper decorum and behaviour towards this poor lad; observe the condescension of my deportment—methinks I feel a strange inclination already in his favour, perhaps I may advance him bye and bye, to be my page—shall I brother?—Oh, here he comes—and I declare, as prepossessing a countenance as ever I beheld.

Enter MARGERY and LITTLE PICKLE as a sailor boy.

Come hither child, was ever there such an engaging air?

Mar. Go Tommy, do as you are bid, there's a good boy—thank his honour for his goodness to you.

Little P. Be you the old fellow that's just come to be my father?

Pick. (aside) Old fellow! he's devilish dashed to be sure—yes, I am the old fellow, as you call it—will you be a good boy?

Little P. Ay, but what will you gi' me?—must I be good for nothing?

Pick. (mimicking) Good for nothing! nay, that I'll swear you are already. Well, and how long have you been come from sea? eh, how do you like a sailor's life?

(NO SYMPHONY.)—TUNE, Malton Oysters.

I am a brisk and sprightly lad,

But just come home from sea, Sir!
Of all the lives I ever led,
A sailor's life for me, Sir.
Yeo, yeo, yeo—Yeo, yeo, yeo.
Whilst the boatswain pipes all hands.
With a yeo, yeo, yeo, Sir.

II.

What girl but loves the merry tar?
We o'er the ocean roam, Sir,
In every clime we find a port,
In every port a home, Sir.
Yeo, yeo, yeo—&c. &c.

III.

But, when our Country's foes are nigh,
Each hastens to his gun, Sir,
We make the boasting Frenchmen fly,
And bang the haughty Don, Sir.
Yeo, yeo, yeo—&c. &c.

IV.

Our foes subdued, once more on shore,
We spend our cash with glee, Sir,
And when all's gone, we drown our care,
And out again to sea, Sir.
Yeo, yeo, yeo—Yeo, yeo, yeo.
And when all's gone, again to sea,
With a yeo, yeo, yeo, Sir.

Pick. So this is the way I am to be entertained in future, with fore-castle jokes, and tarpauling songs.

Miss P. Brother, do not speak so harshly to the poor lad, he's among strangers, and wants encouragement—come to me, my pretty boy, I'll be your friend——

Little P. Friend! oh, what, you're my grandmother—father, must not I call her granne?

Pick. What, he wants encouragement, sister—yes, poor soul, he's among strangers—he's found out one relation, however, sister—this boy's assurance diverts me—I like him (aside.)

Little P. Granne's mortish cross and frumpish—la father, what makes your mother, there, look so plaguy foul-weather'd.

Miss P. Mother, indeed.

Pick. Oh, nothing at all, my dear, she's the best humoured person in the world—go throw yourself at her feet, and ask her for her blessing—perhaps she may gi' you something.

Little P. A blessing! I sha'n't be much richer for that neither—perhaps she may give me half a crown; I'll throw myself at her feet, and ask her for a guinea—(kneels)—Dear granne, give me your picture (catches hold of it.)

Miss P. Stand off, wretch, am I to be robbed, as well as insulted?

Mar. Fie, child, learn to behave yourself better.

Little P. Behave myself—learn you to behave yourself, I should not have thought of you indeed—get you gone—what do you here? (beats her out.)

Pick. Well, sister, this plan of yours succeeds I hope to your satisfaction—he'll make a mighty pretty page, sister—what an engaging air, he has sister; this is some revenge for her treatment of my poor boy (aside).

Miss P. I perceive this to be all a contrivance, and the boy is taught to insult me thus—you may repent of this unparalleled treatment of unprotected innocence.

[Exit.

Pick. What, she means her lover, the player-man, I suppose, but I'll watch her, and her consols too; and if I catch him again in my house, it shall be his last appearance this season; I can tell him that, and the next part he plays, shall be Captain Macheath in the prison scene, egad.

[Exit.

Enter LITTLE PICKLE, alone.

Little P. There they go, ha! ha! ha! my scheme has gone on rarely, rather better than theirs, I think.—Blessing on the old nurse for consenting to it—I'll teach 'em to turn people out of doors—let me see, what trick shall I play 'em now—suppose I set the house on fire—no—no—'tis too soon for that as yet—that will do very well bye and bye—let me consider—I wish I could see my sister, I'll discover myself to her, and then we might contrive something together nicely—that staircase leads to her room, I'll try and call her (goes to the door and listens) there's nobody in the way!—Hist! hist!—Maria—Maria—she hears me, she's coming this way—(runs and hides himself.)

Enter MARIA.

Maria. Sure somebody called me (looks around). No, there's nobody here—heigho—I've almost cryed myself blind about my poor brother, for so I shall always call him, ay, and love him too—(going).

Little P. (running forward) Maria!—sister!—stop an instant.

Maria. My brother!—Charles—impossible.

Little P. 'Tis e'en so, and faith 'twas all a trick about the nurse and child; I coax'd the old woman to confess the whole to me—you can't contrive to kill yourself for the loss of me, can you?—that would have a fine effect—is there nothing I can think of?—Suppose you pretend to fall in love with me, and we run away together.—

Maria. That will do admirably—depend upon my playing my part with a good will, for I owe some revenge for their treatment of you, besides, you know I can refuse you nothing.

Enter OLD PICKLE, behind.

Little P. Thank you a thousand times, my dearest Maria, thus then we'll contrive it. (seeing Pickle coming behind, they pretend to whisper.)

Old P. What! how's this!—"Dear Maria, and I'll refuse you nothing."—Death and the devil, my daughter has fallen in love with that young scoundrel and his yeo, yeo, yeo—she too, she embraces him—(comes forward)—mighty well, young madam—'tis mighty well, but come, you shall be locked up immediately, and you, you young rascal, be whipt out of the house.

Little P. You will not be so hard hearted, sure—we will not part—here is my anchor fixed—here am I moor'd for ever.—(Old Pickle takes hold of her, and endeavours to take her away, she resists, and Little Pickle detains her by the hand.)

Maria. (romantically) No—we'll never part—Oh, cruel, cruel fate.

Old P. He's infected her with his assurance already.—What, you young minx, do you own you love him?

Maria. Love him! Sir, I adore him, and in spite of your utmost opposition, ever, ever shall.

Old P. Oh, ruined! undone—what a wretched old man I am—but, Maria, child—

Maria. Think not to dissuade me, sir—vain attempt—no, sir, my affections are fixed never to be recalled.

Old P. Oh dear, what shall I do? what will become of me? Oh, a plague on my plots—I've lost my daughter, and for ought I know, my son too—why child, he's a poor beggar, he's not worth a sixpence.

Maria. My soul abhors so low a thought—I despise wealth—know, sir, I cherish nobler sentiments.

The generous youth shall own,
I love him for himself alone.

Old P. What, poetry too—nay then, it is time to prevent further mischief—go to your room—a good key shall assure your safety, and this young rascal shall go back to sea, and his yeo, yeo, yeo, if he will.

Maria. (going) I obey your harsh commands, sir, and am gone—but, alas! I leave my heart behind.

[Exit Maria.]

Old P. Now, sir, for you—don't look so audacious, sirrah—don't fancy you belong to me—I utterly disclaim you—

Little P. (laughing) But that is too late now, old gentleman, you have publicly said I was your son, and d——n me, I'll make you stand to it, sir, (threatning.)

Old P. The devil—here is an affair!—John, Thomas, William;

Enter Servants.

Take that fellow, and turn him out of doors immediately—take him, I say—

Servants. Fellow! who, sir?

Old P. Who! why zounds, him there; don't you see him?

John. What, my new young master—No, sir, I've turned out one already, I'll turn out no more.

Old P. He's not your young master—he's no son of mine—away with him, I say.

Sus. No, sir, we know our young master too well for all that; why he's as like your honour as one pea is like another.

John. Ay, heaven bless him, and may he shortly succeed your honour in your estate and fortune.

Old P. (in a passion, walking up and down) Rogues! villains! I am abused, robbed—(turns them out) there's a conspiracy against me, and this little pirate is at the head of the gang.

Enter Servant, with a Letter.

Odso, but here's a letter from my poor boy, I see—this is a comfort, indeed. Well, I'll send for him home now without delay. (reads) "Honoured sir, I heartily repent of having so far abused your goodness, whilst I was blest with your protection, but as I fear no penitence will ever restore me to your favour, I have resolved to put it out of my power again to offend you, by instantly bidding adieu to my country for ever." Here, John, run, go directly to Margery's and fetch home my son, and——

Little P. (interrupting him) You may save yourself the trouble, 'tis too late, you'll never bring him too now, make as many signals, or fire as many guns as you please.

Old P. What do you mean?

Little P. Mean, why he and I have changed births you know.

Old P. Changed births!

Little P. Ay, I'm got into his hammock, and he's got into mine, that's all; he's some leagues off at sea, by this time, for the tide serves, and the wind is fair; Botany Bay's the word, my boys.

Old P. Botany Bay! well, I'll instantly see if 'tis true, why, I'll come back, just to blow your brains out, and lo be either hang'd or sent to Botany Bay after him.

[Exeunt, different ways]

Enter MISS PICKLE.

This is the hour of my appointment with Mr. Tagg, and my brother's absence is favourable indeed—well, after such treatment, can he be surprised if I throw myself into the arms of so passionate an admirer; my fluttering heart tells me this is an important crisis in my happiness—how much these vile men have to answer for in thus bewitching us silly girls.

TAGG repeats behind the Scenes.

The heavy hours are almost past
That part my love and me,

Enters,

My longing eyes may hope at last,
Their only joy to see.

Thus most charming of her sex, do I prostrate myself before the shrine of your beauty. (kneels)

Miss P. Mr. Tagg, I fear I never can be yours.

Tagg. Adorable, lovely, the most beautified Ophelia.

Miss P. Indeed Mr Tagg, you make me blush with your compliments.

Tagg. Compliments! oh! call not by that hacknied term the voice of truth—lovely nymph, ah! deign to hear me, I'll teach you what it is to love.

Miss P. Love—dear Mr. Tagg.—oh! moderate your transports—be advised, think no more of this fatal passion.

Tagg. Think no more of it.

Can love be controll'd by advice,
Will Cupid our mother's obey.

Oh then consent my angel to join our hearts in one, or give me my death in a bumper.

Miss P. (aside) Can I refuse any thing to such a lover?—but were I, my dear friend to consent to our tender union, how could we contrive to escape, my brother's vigilance would overtake us and you might have reason to repent of his anger.

Tagg. Oh, he's a Goth, a mere Vandyke, my love.

But fear makes the danger seem double,
Say Hymen what mischiefs can trouble.

I have contrived the plot and every scene of the elopement, but in this shady blest retreat will I unfold it all—lets sit down like Jessica and the fair Lorenzo here.

Would you taste the noon tide air,
To yon fragrant bower repair.

[They sit in the bower.]

Since musick is the food of love, we'll to the Nightingale's complaining notes, tune our distresses and accord our woes.

While TAGG is singing in Burlesque, LITTLE PICKLE steals round the Stage and gets behind the Bower, and sews their cloaths together, and then goes out behind unperceived by them.

Miss P. Oh! I could listen thus for ever to the united charms of love and harmony—but how are we to plan our escape.

Tagg. In a mean and low attire, muffled up in a great cloak and disguised with a large hat, will I await you in this happy spot—but why my soul—why not this instant fly—this moment will I seize my tender bit of lamb—d——m me, there I had her as dead as mutton. (aside)

Miss P. No, I am not yet equipped for an elopement, and what is of more consequence still, I have got with me a casket of jewels I have prepared, rather too valuable to leave behind.

Tagg. That is of some consequence, indeed, to me.

My diamond my pearl,
Then be a good girl
Until I come to you again.

Miss P. Come back again in the disguise immediately, and if fortune favours faithful lovers' vows, I will contrive to slip out to you.

Tagg. Dispose of me, lovely creature, as you please, but don't forget the casket.

LITTLE PICKLE runs in.

Granne! granne!

Miss P. What rude interruption is this?

Little P. Nothing at all—only father is coming, that's all.

Tagg. The devil he is—what a catastrophe!

[both rise.

Miss P. One last adieu. (embracing) Think you we shall ever meet again! (they find themselves fastened together, and struggle)

Tagg. D——m me! if I think we shall ever part.

Miss P. (tenderly) Don't detain me, won't you let me go?

Tagg. Zounds I wish you were gone (they struggle, and at last get free, and run off different ways.)

Enter OLD PICKLE.

Pick. Well, all's not so bad as I feared—he is not yet gone to sea, and Margery assures me I shall see him e'er long, quite another thing from what he was—but now let me look after my sister—though she made me play the fool, I'll take care to prevent her—I must not give up the consols to—but odso, I have not yet seen my daughter, I'll to her first, least young yeo, yeo, yeo, should get her ship't off—and when I have secured fifteen, I'll look after fifty—but who's coming here? I'll conceal myself and watch.

Enter MISS PICKLE, with casket.

Miss P. (passing over to the bower) Mr. Tagg, Mr. Tagg—I hope he is returned—how I tremble—kind Cupid, guide your votary's feeble steps—Oh, my dear Mr. Tagg, take the casket, and let us make haste, that we may escape before my brother comes. [catches hold of LITTLE PICKLE, who is behind the bower, disguised as TAGG. LITTLE PICKLE kissing her hand. They run towards OLD PICKLE, who comes forward and stops them.]

Pick. Your most obedient humble servant, madam—well said fifty, egad—sir, your most obsequious, Mr. Alexander, Mr. Romeo—John—William—Thomas, (calling the servants) you shan't want attendants mighty prince, but mayhap you had rather sleep in a castle, great hero, we have a convenient goal close by—where you'll be very safe, most illustrious chief.

Miss P. Heavens! a Jail! poor dear Mr. Tagg, a victim to his love for me—oh, let us implore his forgiveness—intreat him to release you. (to TAGG.)

Little P. (kneels and throws off his disguise as TAGG, and appears in his own hair, though still in the sailor's dress) Thus let me implore for pardon, and believe, that a repentance so sincere as mine, will never suffer my heart again to wander from it's duty towards him.

Pick. What's this? my son (embracing LITTLE PICKLE) Odds my heart, I'm glad to see him once more—Oh you dear little fellow!—but you wicked scoundrel, how did you dare play me such tricks?

Little P. Tricks! Oh, sir, recollect you have kindly pardon'd them already; and now you must intercede for me with my aunt, that I may have her forgiveness too, for preventing her from eloping as she designed with her tender swain Mr. Tagg.

Pick. Mr. Tagg, odso, then the consols were sinking apace, but you have raised them once more.

Little P. And do you then, indeed, sir; sincerely forgive me, and forget all my follies?

Pick. Forget 'em, ah! had you vex'd me as much again, I should be more than repaid by the happiness of this moment.

Little P. Kind, sir, my joy is then complete, and I will never more offend.

[comes forward.]

FINALE and Chorus.—LITTLE PICKLE.

Dear sir, once more receive me,
And take me to your arms,
Nor drive me forth to wander
Expos'd to rude alarms.
His } duty, love, obedience,
My }
This penitence refuse,
Then ne'er adopt another child,
For {he} alone {is} yours.
{I } {am}
Chorus—My duty, love, &c.

II.

Our } joy is then completed,
My }
Wou'd but each gen'rous heart,
With partial favour smiling,
Applaud the artless jest.
The object of these childish pranks,
Was barely to amuse 'em.
Then censure not a school-boy's faults,
But laugh at, and excuse 'em.
Chorus—The object of my duty, love, &c.

FINIS.

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG™ LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg™ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase “Project Gutenberg”), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg work (any work on which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” appears, or with which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg™ License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, “Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation.”
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.

- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg™ works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility: www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.
