

THE DRURIAD
OR STRICTURES
ON THE
PRINCIPAL PERFORMERS
OF
Drury-Lane Theatre

THE DRURIAD
OR STRICTURES
ON THE
PRINCIPAL PERFORMERS
OF
Drury-Lane Theatre

The Project Gutenberg eBook of The Druriad

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

Title: The Druriad

or, Strictures on the principal performers of Drury-Lane Theatre : a satirical poem : with notes critical and explanatory

Author: Anonymous

Release date: December 3, 2025 [eBook #77394]

Language: English

Original publication: London: W. J. and J. Richardson, 1798

Other information and formats: www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/77394

Credits: Mairi, Raymond Papworth, and the Online Distributed Proofreading Team at <https://www.pgdp.net> (This file was produced from images generously made available by The Internet Archive)

 START OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK THE DRURIAD

THE DRURIAD:
OR STRICTURES
ON THE
PRINCIPAL PERFORMERS
OF
Drury-Lane Theatre:
A SATIRICAL POEM:

WITH NOTES CRITICAL AND EXPLANATORY.

“Cuncti adsint, meritæque expectent præmia palmæ:

* * * * *

“Tros Tyriusque mihi nullo discrimine habetur.”—VIRG.

“My lord, I will use them according to their deserts.”—

“Godsbodikins, man, better! Use every man after his desert, and who shall escape whipping?—Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty.”—SHAKESPEAR.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR W. J. AND J. RICHARDSON, UNDER THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.

1798.

ADVERTISEMENT.

I Cannot think the subject of the following Poem ill chosen, whatever faults there may be in the manner of its execution. As some kingdoms are found to be influenced by the good or bad qualities of the sovereign, so the theatres of this country may be considered as instruments by which virtue or vice may be equally propagated: they are universally frequented; for, who is so high as not to honour them with an occasional visit, and who is so low as not to deem himself an expert judge of theatrical merit? That this merit is on the wane, I fear, cannot be denied; and I think one of the causes may be traced to that laxity of morals which pervades all ranks of people. The time was when a vicious or foolish character, among his brethren behind the curtain, would have been more dreaded, by an actor of genius, than the hisses of the multitude before it. “Fuit ista quondam in hac republica virtus, ut viri fortes acrioribus suppliciis civem perniciosum quàm acerbissimum hostem coercerent.” Cicero.

If it be allowed that an actor cannot do complete justice to his part unless he feel all the energy which the character is supposed to feel; or if, in other words, moral sensations and the glow of conscious virtue enhance the player’s powers; surely those powers must be impaired, if not totally annihilated, by debauchery and habitual intoxication; an observation not totally useless to those who, however they may slight virtue for virtue’s sake, will yet adhere to her when, like a modern heiress, she brings an ample fortune to increase her attractions.

I have only to declare that I commit this Poem to the press blinded by no partiality and influenced by no unworthy motives; that my pages are stained with no private scandal, and that, whatever may be the fate of the Poem, I shall never blush at an undertaking which has for its object the praise of the meritorious and the ridicule of the undeserving.

THE
DRURIAD, &c.

AUTHOR.

Let loftier poets tune their martial lays,
And sing the patriot's or the hero's praise;
For casual fare, like hackney-coachmen, ply,
Blame where they can, and, where they cannot,—lie:
Each Pasquin now may lash his empty brother,
Or, like thin spiders, prey upon each other:
Snug in my shell, I shun their watchful fury,
Laugh at them all, and sing the praise of Drury;
My careless Muse now hovers round her walls,
And lifts her dome yet higher than St. Paul's.

FRIEND.

A wretched simile! of Eastern hue,
'Tis neither gaudy, elegant, or new;
Would you be all that ere poor bard desir'd,
Be read by parsons, by the fair admir'd,
To love and Laura tune th'enervate lyre,
Let hot-press'd paper^[1] glow with am'rous fire;
Ambrosial flow'rs^[2] twine round your mood and tense,
And labour'd nothings take the place of sense.

AUTHOR.

I'm all alive! Muse, plume your tow'ring wings,
Hush'd be the winds when charming Florio sings.

FRIEND.

The fragrant morn—

AUTHOR.

Nay, now your pow'r I doubt,
Each worthless sonnet—

FRIEND.

Prithee hear me out.
The fragrant morn her rosy blushes spreads,
And o'er the land a dewy influence sheds,
Scarce has the sun emerg'd from ocean's tide,
His beams yet sleeping on yon mountain's side,
All nature wakes, life breathes in ev'ry gale,
The insect-tribe spread forth the mimic sail,
Aërial songsters chaunt the vocal lay,
Sport on the wing, and hail returning day.

AUTHOR.

Siste, viator! let me set you right,
'Tis not the day! I hail returning night:
Through lamp and link-boys take my devious way,
Streets, carts, and "Bill, your honour!" to the play.
There point my quill, "shoot folly as it flies,
And catch the living manners as they rise."^[3]
Sooner shall Gallia cease her hostile fury,
Sooner shall mighty George frequent old Drury,
In modern bosoms virtuous ardour burn,
Or loan-contractors zealous patriots turn,
Than I forego the critic's choicest food,
To lash the worthless and to praise the good.

FRIEND.

But who art thou who thus presum'st to wield
The weighty arms of Churchill in the field?

AUTHOR.

In life's low vale, I mean not to aspire

To Churchill's honours and poetic fire,
But merely to divert an idle hour,
Of Drury's host to ascertain the pow'r;
And, with a candid, not ill-judging, spirit,
Award their different degrees of merit.

FRIEND.

But why alone on Drury "wag your tongue?"^[4]
Why Covent-Garden's actors leave unsung?

AUTHOR.

Know, with buffoons I cannot condescend
My page to tarnish and my time to spend:
Crawford, in age, though not in wisdom, grey,
Attempts in vain th'allotted part to play;
Though Abington spreads out her wrinkled arms,
The Widow Belmour now has lost her charms.
O tasteless age, in folly how mature,
Such mad perversion tamely to endure;
Haste, venerable pair, and leave the stage,
For "beads and prayer-books are the toys of age."

A royal edict issues from the throne,
O! say what brilliant spectacle is shewn?
What constellation sheds its brilliant ray?
Quick is the Georgium Sidus of the play!
By Reynolds taught,^[5] see Lewis frisk and climb,
And Follett's carrots^[6] grace the pantomime.

FRIEND.

If Covent-Garden's virtues are unknown,
Adopt the reigning mode, and praise your own;
Warton, in Pope, presents us nothing new,
Pert Boswell brings all Johnson to our view,
In quarto see the man of star and ribbon
Sedately usher in the works of Gibbon;
Erskine, self-fancy'd scourger of the throne,

Now pleads his client's cause, and now his own.
Holman plays Hotspur: Shakespear, with a groan,
Sees Percy, and scarce knows him for his own!
Think you for foreign benefit they strive?
Shakespear is dead, but Holman is alive;^[7]
Self prompts the player, self fills the tedious page,
Alike or in the closet or the stage.

AUTHOR.

Enough of this! proceed we to our song,
Attend my lays, and tell me where I'm wrong;
Hither, my muse, thy wand'ring flight restrain,
Perch on my quill, and sing of Drury-Lane.

Siddons,^[8] great mistress of each magic art,
To raise contending passions in the heart,
When wretched Shore, depress'd with grief and pain,
Calls upon death, her last resource, in vain;
Or when, unaw'd by conscience or by fear,
Macbeth drives on her impious mad career,
When horrid dreams at length her guilt reveal,
And on her hand she shews the bloody seal;
When poor Cordelia, after wars alarms,
Expires with anguish in her father's arms;
In Beverley's distress and piercing moans;
In Isabella's shrieks and dying groans;
O Siddons! thou alone the soul can'st thrill,
And melt us down, like Circe, to thy will.

When Shakespear bids contending passions wage,
Love, hatred, jealousy, remorse, and rage,
Or paints the madness of the noble Dane;
Or fell ambition of the Highland thane;
Or Richard urges on his blood-stain'd course,
And madly cries "My kingdom for a horse!"
Kemble,^[9] in scenes like these, can nobly soar,
And make e'en Garrick's loss be felt no more.

Next Jordan^[10] comes, Thalia's fav'rite child,
And charms with naïveté and humour wild;
Miss Peggy, Prissy Tomboy, or Miss Prue,
Oh! who can play so charmingly, so true?
But, in the name of ev'ry thing that's strange,
Why suffer her in Farren's walk to range?
Why call her Lady Teazle, Lady Belle?
Still it is Jordan finely dress'd—as Nell.
Farren had reach'd the summit of renown,
And who like her shall charm the partial town?
Ah! who shall now portray the modish wife,
When will another Farren spring to life!
But Lady Teazle, Lady Townly too,
Bizarre, and Estifania,—all adieu!

Decamp^[11] approaches! born to tread the stage,
At once the pride and pleasure of the age;
Whether in tragic stole or comic vest,
In each her pow'rs superior are confess'd;
And when she warbles Ariel's plaintive airs,
'Tis like the music of the tuneful spheres;
In ev'ry scene new beauties stand confess'd,
And the last character is still the best.
But, oh! what pen with equal skill can trace
Th'expressive passions varying in her face?
A face uniting elegance and ease,
Prompt to delight, and emulous to please,
Still changing as the vary'd passions move,
And sure in all to fix esteem and love.
Ye erring critics! will ye still deplore
That wit is fled and genius is no more?
That modern acting no more boasts the art
"To raise the genius and to mend the heart?"
Attend submissive to the voice of truth,
For, see, array'd in all the pride of youth,
Unconscious of her own pre-eminence,
In graceful action, and in native sense,

Decamp approaches! Envy hides her head,
And foul Detraction sinks among the dead!
Each charm'd spectator instant homage pays,
And all is lost in universal praise.

The tragic Muse, by various evils cross'd,
Some future day, shall mourn her Siddons lost!
Yet one remains, and critics must confess,
Powell shall serve to make that loss the less;
Expressive beauties mantle in her face;
Yet is her gaudy action void of grace.
But, when she paints Almeria's tender woes,
Each sympathetic heart with pity glows;
Nay more, would she discard the tricks of art,
The outspread arms, shrill voice, and measur'd start;
Would she converse in nature's artless strain,
Nor deign to walk in imitation's train;
Her native pow'rs would fairest fame engage,
And a new Siddons might adorn the stage.

Old Churchill spoke in terms of warmest praise
Of Pope, the lively, in her youthful days:
Though sixty summers o'er her head have flown,
Thalia claims this fav'rite for her own:
In Alscip, Malaprop, and Mistress Page,
She stands without a rival on the stage;
And of her lasting charms, so wide the scope,
All the domestic virtues shine in Pope!

Palmer's rough tones no sympathy impart,
Yet the man walks majestic through his part;
His voice, his action, and his person, good,
His author always clearly understood;
Firm as the Trojan chief, of form divine,
Whose mother-goddess made his temples shine;
'Twas his, (but not in our degen'rate days,)
'Twas his to mix the myrtle with the bays;
Through five long acts alert and gay to dance,
And realize the fictions of romance.

But now, alas! those fairy scenes are fled,
The myrtle, and the bays, both droop the head!
In modern scenes solicitous to please,
He acts the gentleman with studious ease;
And in some parts I see both sense and spirit,
In Stukely and Iago sterling merit,
With genuine Nature strive:—one part remains
To crown his merit and reward his pains.
See Packer, whom his dress in vain disguises,
Seems half-seas over ere the curtain rises;
Tott’ring beneath the weight of plumes and age,
He speaks memento mori to the stage.^[12]
Haste, Palmer! haste! disrobe the royal knave,
Assert your claims, and Drury’s credit save;
Study the part, make Claudius all your own,
And drive the driv’ller from the Danish throne.

Old King,^[13] with ev’ry requisite to please,
Strong sense, dry humour, wit, and comic ease,
Unrivall’d reigns, on Drury’s classic boards,
In crusty crabbed sires and testy lords.

See Charles,^[14] a brother of the Kemble race,
With youthful figure and expressive face,
In ardent Malcolm admiration draws,
And claims in luckless Barnwell loud applause;
He, urging onward in the path of fame,
The native honours of his house to claim,
Shall gain the steep ascent, by Siddons led,
While wreaths of living laurel grace his head.

Wroughton’s^[15] a useful player and a just,
And faithful to his manageric trust,
In some few characters, to give his due,
He acts with feeling and with judgement too.
What pity then to see the man presume
To torture and burlesque poor Captain Plume!
“And never was a story of more woe,”

Than Wroughton croaking love-sick Romeo.

With shaggy wig, stiff knees, and lengthen'd stride,
Pedantic tone, and arms expanded wide,
Unmeaning emphasis, theatric roar,
'Tis an automaton, or Barrymore!^[16]
Dramatic Proteus! who, strange to tell!
Plays ev'ry thing by turns, and nothing well!
Long has he stood, nor chang'd his first degree,
Fix'd at the freezing point of apathy;
And much I fear, that time, which, join'd with sense,
Exalts true genius into excellence,
Will ne'er promote the man, whose sole renown
Heads a banditti or assaults a town.

Suett comes next:—alas! and “Woe is me!
“T’have seen what I have seen, see what I see!”
In some low scenes of Colman’s motley stuff,^[17]
Suett is sometimes laughable enough;
But genuine humour, comic wit, and grace,
Are chang’d by him to mum’ry and grimace.
Poor Foresight, skill’d in astrologic lore,
When Parsons died, you fell to rise no more!
For ever clos’d, Burgoyne, is thy chaste page,
And Gripe and Moneytrap must quit the stage.

With figure neat, and pretty lifeless face,
Goodall, alas! appears of stoic race!
Nor joy, nor grief, affect her lifeless frame,
Inanimate and gentle, mild and tame:
Yet, would she call expression to her aid,
Speak up, and cry, with Kecksey, “Who’s afraid?”^[18]
Her Rosalind would charm, and, in her cause,
All Drury’s dome might ring with loud applause.

When Bannister in Walter’s part appears,
Who can deny the tributary tears?
And, of his real merits, not to baulk ye,
He’s excellent in Gubbins, Scrub, and Gawkey:

But when, forgetting nature, form, and make,
He tries t'assume the gentleman and rake;
Or when in Tom with lively Lewis vies;
Heav'ns! how disgusting to our ears and eyes!
Yet few comedians, of the present age,
Appear so well, acquainted with the stage;
And, spite of ev'ry fault, the truth to own,
He has the art of pleasing all the town.

When Shakespear's magic Tempest awes the soul,
When light'nings dart, waves dash, and thunders roll;
Let beauteous Miller, diffident and fair,
Assume Miranda's wild angelic air:
Pale with affright, she bends beneath the storm,
While the rude winds unveil her lovely form;
"Poor souls! they perish!" cries the maid distress'd,
"Poor souls! they perish!" echoes ev'ry breast.

Dowton, in Cumberland's romantic Jew,
Portrays with feeling what the author drew;
In Scrub, or grave-digger, might gain renown:
Why are the corners of his mouth drawn down?
When merit fails, and nature's sober grace,
Buffoonery but ill supplies their place.

Packer aspires to Denmark's regal chair,
"O Hamlet! what a falling off was there!"
Palmer's the king for Gertrude's bridal feast,
And Packer,—he should play the churlish priest.

When vulgar Heidelberg assumes her airs,
Deaf to her brother's threats, her niece's tears,
Wallcott comes forth, with squabby shape and mien,
Equal to Mesdames Hopkins, Webb, and Green.

O popular applause! how short thy date!
Crouch sinks beneath the hand of time and fate!
Hard is the task the slight remains to trace
Of what was Phillips' elegance and grace.

Old Bannister, in tones of deepest bass,

In Caliban displays his ugly face;
And critics must allow, upon the whole,
Some share of merit to his Mother Cole;
Then let him pass, the social bowl allow,
Applauded once, we well may suffer now.

With lisping voice, and action full of bustle,
In Fribble shines the Margate hero Russell;
In Sparkish decent, and in Surface mean, [\[19\]](#)
The worst Sir Lucius that the stage has seen!

O mortals! vain and wayward, ever prone
To vilify all merit but your own;
Deaf to reproof, to public sarcasms blind,
Ye quit the proper sphere by fate assign'd:
Each stripling risks some daring enterprize,
And, giant-like, would rush into the skies.

The youth, whose pow'rs are neither good nor bad,
In humble merit's sober mantle clad;
Whose mighty task extends to "Good, my liege!"
Secure or in a chorus or a siege;
Whose modest tongue, unknown to wisdom's lore,
Speaks what his author wrote, and speaks no more;
Who marks the present hour, recalls the past,
And makes each night a critic on the last;
Him shall applauses greet where numbers pour,
Wentworth or Davis, Webb or Phillimore.
But, when I see some forward youngster stalk,
Smit with the rage of tragedy and talk,
O'erleap each fence of modesty and fear,
And boldly mount to Shakespear's radiant sphere,
Indignant, then, I spurn compassion's call;
Contempt and laughter wait upon his fall:
The hapless elf lies humbled in the dust,
While scoffing crowds confess the sentence just.

But, hark! a plaintive voice amid the gale,
In numbers sweet, breathes out a tender tale;

Sure 'tis some minstrel of the fairy band,
'Tis more than mortal!—No, 'tis little Bland.

With voice mellifluous, though somewhat weak,
And often husky, view the warbler Leak.
On Margaretta's simple artless lays
She builds a monument of lasting praise;
And, oh! 'twould melt the sternest heart to pity
To hear her sing her "lowly plaintive ditty."

See Biggs, a candidate for London fame,
In Drury's annals now records her name:
Dauntless she enters on the classic ground,
With universal praise and plaudits crown'd.

Aikin, with feeling and good sense endu'd,
Can act the parent prudent, firm, and good;
The British merchant, gen'rous, open, just;
And the old steward, faithful to his trust.

Patient and simple, Drury's weakest tool,
With too much folly e'en to play the fool;
With awkward form, and vague quiescent face,
Wretched buffoonery, and low grimace;
Lo! Wathen tumbles in, by folly led,
And quick compulsive gravity of head.
Alas, alas! poor shifting weather-cock!
Why didst thou change the halberd for the sock?
Thy lagging purse and wit could ill afford
The festive joys of Wargrave and her lord!
Small bounds divide the idler and the player;
The soldier turns an actor in despair.
See lovely Rose, whom circling crowds adore,
Ne'er felt for Bullock half the shame before. ^[20]
Heav'ns, what a contrast! View the motley feast;
'Tis Pan and Venus, beauty and the beast.
Not Farquhar's wit could force thy friends to stay,
Though Dibdin's song ek'd out the murder'd play.
While shows like these can Britain's care engage,

I spurn such folly, and renounce the stage;
Calm and remote, neglect the passing scene,
Nor quit my roof for Wathen and the spleen.

Who has not oft beguil'd his ev'ning hours,
Charm'd with the melody of Kelly's pow'rs?
Aided by him, still Arne enchants the town,
And Kelly adds new gems to Handel's crown.
Oft have we heard, well pleas'd, yet mourn'd the while,
His tones melodious, but his action vile:
Our eyes must weep at what our ears rejoice;
So spare the man, in pity to his voice!

Bob Palmer can a drunken story tell,
His Jeremy and Trip are passing well;
But, for the airy fops of Farquhar's age,
When will another Dodd adorn the stage?

For Hollingsworth we have not far to look, [\[21\]](#)
What is the part he plays?—Oh! Jacob Cook!

Badd'ley, thy loss must Drury still deplore,
Thy Moses set the audience in a roar:
Now Wewitzer the usurer assumes,
And struts a magpie in the peacock's plumes.

In Mellon's face what gay good humour lies,
How archly roll her sparkling gipsy eyes!
And when their fire she darts in Lydia Languish,
O lovely nymph! I cry, assuage my anguish!

Sedgwick, in Woodley, stands to public view,
Or the brave captain of a smuggling crew:
And Dignum's voice harmonious, soft, and clear,
Though far from pow'rful, charms the list'ning ear.

For walking gentlemen, and trailing lords,
Grac'd with becoming paucity of words;
Or, for the bleeding captain in Macbeth,
Who talks of honour, murder, scars, and death;
Or of conspirators to make a cluster;

Holland and Caulfield here may well pass muster.

Maddocks and Phillimore, ye brilliant pair!
Let Banquo's bloody murder be your care:
While Trueman cries, aghast, in fearful mood,
"Methought, my lord, I saw a moving wood!"

Let black-ey'd Heard, and Stuart tattling fast,
Of vixen chambermaids divide the cast:
And Tidswell tall, with Booth, the ancient crone,
Lead in the queen, or stand behind the throne.

FRIEND.

Enough! enough! now let the curtain fall,
Here cease your song, and bid good night to all.

AUTHOR.

The Muse now rests, her purpos'd labours o'er,
Safe from her toil, and landed on the shore:
Each actor view'd in Fancy's magic glass,
Walks o'er her page like royal Banquo's race.
Oh! would kind Fate, like his, her offspring bless,
Exalt with favour, and with smiles caress,
Her moral page should circling crowds delight,
And added vigour aid her tow'ring flight.

Genius of Shakespear, from thy heav'nly sphere,
Look down with pity on thy vot'ries here:
See pantomimic jargon, ev'ry season,
Usurp the place of common sense and reason.
Some rising poet, O great Bard! inspire,
With one bright spark of thy immortal fire,
Reclaim the taste of this degen'rate age,
And reign once more triumphant o'er the stage.

[1] See this absurd and pernicious custom well ridiculed in "The Pursuits of Literature." A work which strongly and properly reprobates the practice of those, whose learning, "like a rich armour worn in heat of day," only serves to encumber the wearer. It is not our business to criticize the temper or motives of the author of that elaborate performance. He may possibly, to use the words of a modern poet, be “shrouded in a mist of moral spleen;” or he may be influenced by the purest intentions. The work is of extensive utility; and, as such, is entitled to our thanks.

[2] Such is the celestial phrase of Henry James Pye, Esq. “O’er June’s ambrosial flow’rs.”—This gentleman in his ardent devotion to the Muses seems totally to have forgotten the Graces; else, why the pompous repetition of the same turgid compound epithets that encumber without adorning his odes? We acknowledge that Poet Laureates are placed in a dangerous situation; like the pictures hung up in the Forum, they are exposed to the indiscriminate criticism of the multitude. Cibber, smarting under the lash of Pope, says “a lick at the Laureate” has ever been the fashion. I am sorry to observe, that the present bard cannot claim an exemption. I would recommend to his observation the following lines of Pope, speaking of Blackmore:

What, like Sir Richard, rumbling rough and hoarse,
With arms, and George, and Brunswick, crowd the verse;
Burst, with tremendous din, your ears asunder,
With gun, drum, trumpet, blunderbuss, and thunder.

[3] Pope.

[4] Hamlet.

[5] By Reynolds taught.—The speaking pantomimes of this gentleman, called by courtesy comedies, are at present generally known; but, as in all probability they will be soon forgotten, it was thought necessary to mention them here.

[6] As posterity may be puzzled to understand the meaning of these words, know, all men, by these presents, that the joke consists in Mr. Follett, the clown, coming forward and sitting down in the front of the stage, with a basket containing three or four immense carrots; which, assisted by some intro-susceptive power in the vegetable, he has the appearance of devouring whole, to the great delight of the British audience.

Indocti stolidique et depugnare parati
Si discordet eques, media inter carmina poscunt
Aut ursum, aut pugiles; hic nam plebecula gaudet.
Verum equitis quoque jam migravit ab aure voluptas
Omnis ad incertos oculos, et gaudia vana.

[7] Holman.—This is one of those actors who should receive a hint to pay more attention to their author and less to themselves. Cibber wrote as well as acted for the stage, and succeeded: Holman has written too; but, “haud passibus æquis!”

Scribimus indocti doctique.—HOR.

[8] The great and unrivalled talents of this lady in tragedy are such as would justly subject us to the imputation of vanity and folly, were we to attempt to enumerate them. With such a distinguished favourite of Melpomene before our eyes, it is painful to think that tragedy should be in this nation overlooked and neglected, as is evinced by the cold manner in which the productions of our best dramatic writers are received upon the stage, though aided by the magic powers of her, who carries us into whatever regions the fiction of the poet places in our view.

Irritat, mulcet, falsis terroribus implet,
Ut magus; et modo me Thebis modo ponit Athenis.—HOR.

Let not poets any longer arrogate immortality to their works, when we see the productions of Dryden, Otway, Southern, and even Shakespear himself, placed upon the shelf: And for what? To please the taste of a public, vitiated by the unseemly trash, issuing from the pen of O'Keefe, Reynolds, Morton, &c. &c.

Whose happy arts attention can command
When fancy flags, and sense is at a stand.—POPE.

[9] We think it sufficient to observe of this gentleman, (whose talents as an actor are too well known to require commendation here,) that his Coriolanus and Macbeth are noble instances of his powers, and that he has brought Hamlet to the achme of perfection.

[10] Who, that has witnessed the admiral efforts of Mrs. Jordan in low comedy, does not regret to see her attempt such parts as Lady Teazle and Estifania? After these extraordinary undertakings, we shall soon expect to see Mr. Bannister, jun. in Richard III. and Mr. Suett in Beverley or Macbeth. As Mrs. Amlet says in the Confederacy, "We are all for appearing above what we are, and that is what ruins every body."

[11] The satirist, averse to exhibiting scenes of folly, fixes with delight on beauty and excellence: as the traveller, weary of the uniformity of a dusky heath, wanders with joy over fertile plains and enamelled meadows. Seldom have we received more various and rational pleasure than from the truly excellent performances of Miss Decamp. With a face well adapted to express the sentiments of the soul, an elegant and graceful person, appropriate action, and a knowledge of her author's meaning, which good understanding alone can give, this young lady bids fair to obtain general and unrivalled approbation. But, as the human mind, however variously gifted by nature, has still some single object in which it is peculiarly fated to figure, some cast of character which is exclusively its province, we would strongly recommend it to this young lady to study Mrs. Jordan's comic characters, without meaning to preclude her from those occasional variations, which no one can undergo with more justice and versatility than herself.

"Reddere personæ scit convenientia cuique."

[12] It is surprising that the Manager should remain ignorant of the most important part of his office, namely, an appropriate distribution of parts. Packer, some thirty years ago, might have been a tolerable actor; but surely he has had time to "strut and fret his hour upon the stage," and should now be "heard no more." The character of the Danish usurper, in his hands, is deprived of all its interest, by losing that crafty, yet daring, villany which Shakespear intended to portray. The fine soliloquy, "O my offence is rank!" &c. is entirely omitted, in pity, we suppose, to this old man's infirmities: but, it is time to inform Mr. Packer, that, when he attempts parts like these, "O my offence is rank!" would be no improper exclamation.

[13] In the veteran King we see an actor of sterling excellence and merit. He possesses real humour unadulterated with buffoonery; a most rare quality in the present state of the stage! But "Vitæ summa brevis, spem nos vetat inchoare longam." Mr. King's infirmities are now growing fast upon him;

—————"His way of life
Is fallen into the sear, the yellow leaf!"

And it is with infinite regret that we look forward to the time when he shall retire from that stage, of which he has so long been a distinguished ornament.

[14] Mr. Charles Kemble's powers are daily expanding into excellence; and we look forward with pleasure to the future eminence of this young actor.

Yet shall he mount, and keep his distant way,
Beyond the limits of a vulgar fate.—GRAY.

[15] The power of managers to obtrude themselves upon the public in what characters they please must often be abused, by laying them open to the attacks of vanity; while, from their high situation in the theatre, we presume the real truth is not likely to offend their ears. The humorous author of the Connoisseur hints at a reverend bishop, who kept his chaplains in a state of such extreme servility, that it was their custom to ask him at the conclusion of every deal at whist what his lordship would please to have for trumps? Mr. Wroughton may not perhaps be so highly pampered as the above-mentioned bishop, but it was thought necessary to enlarge upon the frequent absurdity of his conduct, that future managers may profit by his evil example.

“Bonum est fugienda aspicere alieno in malo.”—PUBL. SYR.

[16] Barrymore is one of those personages, to make use of Pope's words, “Who never changed his principles or wig.”—As his action and voice are uniform, so is his wig; as his gigantic method of uttering trivial sentiments is uniform, so is his wig: pity the wig is not a better one!

[17] The dramatic productions of Mr. Colman have a real claim to the title of motley. As a proof of this assertion, we beg leave to refer our readers to the Mountaineers and the Iron Chest, in both of which plays are lines not unworthy of a Congreve or a Rowe; but these are debased most miserably by others, which are beneath the notice of criticism. Upon the whole, it appears, that the genius of this gentleman is happily adapted to the size of his theatre:

Humano capiti cervicem pictor equinam
Jungere si velit, et varias inducere plumas
Undique collatis membris; aut turpiter atrum
Desinat in piscem mulier formosa superne
Spectatum admissi risum teneatis, amici?—HOR.

It may be worth inquiry, why the public should permit the performance of the Iron Chest at the Haymarket, after the decided sentence pronounced upon it at Drury-Lane; as it must be obvious to the most ignorant spectator, that the play was cast with much greater force at the last-mentioned theatre; for, while we respect the talents of Mr. Elliston, we hold it something like blasphemy to place him in competition with Mr. Kemble, the first tragedian of the age; and how must the broad farcical humour of Fawcett suffer in comparison with the acting of the late excellent Dodd! Perhaps it may be urged, that Fawcett stood next to Dodd in the personification of such characters as Adam Winterton: if so, it must certainly be, as Virgil expresses it, “Proximus, sed longo intervallo.”

[18] We wish that Mrs. Goodall would avail herself of our friendly hints; she might certainly become an actress of some merit: at present she gives us an idea of a well-constructed automaton.

[19] Strange that so few actors can play the gentleman!—As to Mr. Russell,—but it would be a waste of time to expatiate on his demerits. All our astonishment is to think that he should attempt such characters as Charles Surface; especially as the excellence of Smith is still fresh in the minds of the public.

———Quid enim contendat hirundo
Cycnis? LUCRET.

[20] The part of Bullock was performed, by Mr. Wathen, not for the public benefit, but his own. The good nature of a British audience was never better exemplified than in the above instance.—Surely there never was such an age of toleration!—Dibdin’s song of the Waggoner was also sung by our hero, to exhibit his talents in another point of view. To say the execution was intolerable is far from sufficient, and yet we have neither time nor patience to say more.—All was hushed! for, at least half the audience was asleep.

Somno positi sub nocte silenti
Lenibant curas et corda oblita laborum.—VIRG.

[21] We are astonished to see this man figuring away in such characters as the Baron of Oakland, Mr. Hardy, and Sir Francis Wronghead.—When will managers learn their duty to the public? and when distinguish between unaffected humour and unnatural buffoonery?—To Hollingsworth we may apply the lines of Peter Pindar:

“Of acting I have seen enough,
“Most vile, most execrable, stuff;
“But none so bad as thine, I vow to God!”

THE END.

Transcriber’s Notes

New original cover art included with this eBook is granted to the public domain.
The original text used the long s. This has been changed to the regular s.
The footnotes have been renumbered and moved to the end of the book.
A few obvious typographical errors have been silently corrected. Archaic and irregular spellings have been retained.

 END OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK THE DRURIAD

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

START: FULL LICENSE

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG™ LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg™ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase “Project Gutenberg”), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg work (any work on which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” appears, or with which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg™ License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, “Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation.”
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.

- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg™ works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility: www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.